He urges gardeners to clean all old weeds and trash out of fence corners and plow it under. Weeds and trash harbor insects. And weed seed that's buried in the fall will usually rot or sprout. Then frost will take care of all the seed that grows.

Another advantage of fall plowing, Reger adds, is that the ground is all ready for early spring vegetables such as lettuce and spinach. These can usually be planted on fall-plowed ground before the same ground would be dry enough for plowing in the spring.

The horticulturist recommends leaving the fall-plowed gardens rough during the winter months.

Observed Golden Wedding

OBSERVED GOLDEN WEDDING TUES. AT GARNER

Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Waldek of Garner observed their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday, October 10th with open house in the Methodist Church from 2 to 5 p. m. to all friends and neighbors. A family dinner was held at 7 p. m.

The Waldeks were married October 10, 1900, in the Hayfield Methodist Church, the Rev. H. R. Fiegenbaum, pastor of the church, officiating.

They established their home on a farm near Hayfield and later purchased their own farm ½ miles east of Hayfield where they resided until 1945, when they retired to their fine home in Garner.

A number of relatives and friends of the Klemme community attended the open house.

ARNOLD GIRLS ALL HAD BIRTHDAY PARTY SAT.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Arnold's three daughters all have birthdays the same day, October 7th. On that day Clarice Ann was 6 years old and the twins, Marilyn and Rosalyn were three years old.

To celebrate the happy event Mrs. Arnold planned a party for the girls and invited all of the First Grade and their teacher, Mrs. Garland Brinkman to a party Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Arnold had baked a birthday cake for each of her daughters and individual cakes for all of the First Grade children. Games were played and everyone had a fine time after which Mrs. Arnold served a nice lunch.

The little girls were all happy with the nice gifts they received.

IT MIGHT PAY TO STORE YOUR SOY BEANS

In the face of a record breaking crop of 271 million bushels it is more important for farmers to avoid dumping their soybeans on the market this year than ever before, in the opinion of members of the Hancock County Production and Marketing Administration committee.

The farmer who markets his soybeans at harvest time or immediately after is likely to get less for his crop than if he waited. In the past 25 years during the period from July through November, prices have averaged 20 percent below the annual level.

The Commodity Credit Corporation loan and purchase agreement programs are designed to help farmers avoid depressed markets at harvest time. Under the loan program farmers can store their soybeans on their farms and get a CCC loan to tide them over the seasonal low spot. The loan rate this year in Hancock County is $2.08 per bushel.

Under the purchase agreement program the farmer is assured of a market for his soybeans at the same price as the loan rate.

Both loan and purchase agreements may be signed up at the County Production and Marketing Administration office at Garner at any time between now and January 31, 1951.

D.H.I.A. MONTHLY NEWS REPORT

For the month of September, 1950, the Hancock County Dairy Herd Improvement Association test 25 herds, with 267 cows in milk and 102 dry cows, making a total of 369 cows tested. European War Unlikely

SECRETARY of State Dean Acheson told a tightly secret meeting of house and senate foreign relations committeemen that he didn't expect Russia to make any war moves in Europe in the near future, despite our announced policy of reinforcing Europe with arms and men.

One of the toughest problems the U.N. faces, Acheson reported, is bringing western Germany into the program. The German people, he said, were overwhelmingly opposed to an armed police force of their own unless it is part of a "well-integrated" task force of all Atlantic pact nations.

A separate police army, he admitted, would be no match for the Soviet military machine in east Germany and might actually invite Russian conquest of all Germany. This, Acheson warned, would be very difficult, if not impossible, to prevent.

At the same time, Acheson said that France probably would oppose making western Germany a full-fledged member of a mutual defense pact, since this would include rebuilding its steel and potential war industries to full capacity.

The final decision will be up to the United Nations general assembly, Acheson explained, adding that another question to be decided by the U.N. was "who owns Formosa?" The secretary of state pointed out that while both the Chinese Nationalists and Communists claim Formosa for China, the important thing was to keep the island "neutral" in the conflict with Russia.

Since any decision should take into account the sentiment of the Formosan people themselves, Acheson reported, the U.N. may decide to hold a plebicite in Formosa before determining its future status.

Fellow Missourian

When President Truman met privately with leaders of the AFL and CIO recently, it was suggested that each leader rise and introduce himself to the honor guest.

Most of the leaders gave their own names, names of their unions and the office which they held.

But when it came the turn of Charles McGowan, head of the Boilermakers Union, he rose and merely said: "Charles McGowan of Jackson, Missouri."

Truman seemed to get a big kick out of this.

Two Wyoming Senators

There's an interesting contrast between the two senators from Wyoming, both able, conscientious men.

Sen. Lester Hunt, former governor of the state and recently elected to the senate, has just introduced a resolution to abolish congressional immunity from libel suits when a member of congress makes defamatory and untrue statements.

The founding fathers, Senator Hunt indicates, never meant congress to be a sounding board for such smears as McCarthy of Wisconsin and Schoeppel of Kansas have put across. Both senators have been challenged to repeat their libels off the floor of congress and this collumnist offered to pay McCarthy's legal expenses in case he was sued. Neither accepted the challenge.

So newly elected Senator Hunt proposes to rectify this.

On the other hand, Senator O'Mahoney, also of Wyoming and in the senate for 17 years, has been presiding over a committee examining Senator Schoeppel's attempted Red smear of Secretary of the Interior Chapman. And O'Mahoney has become so steeped in the senatorial idea that a fellow senator should be permitted to talk indefinitely that he has let the Schoeppel hearings become a filibuster in which Schoeppel, with no facts and no proof, continues to talk for the purpose of saving face.

Under the American system a man is innocent until proven guilty, yet Senator O'Mahoney is so anxious to be fair to his colleague from Kansas that he seems to think a cabinet officer is guilty until proven innocent.

Merry-Go-Round

After seeing the early-American pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers," in which Martha Washington pleads with George to take a rest, Mrs. Oscar (secretary of interior) Chapman remarked: "the life of a cabinet wife hasn't changed in all these years. I've been after Oscar to take Saturday off, but he doesn't pay any attention."

Suprame Allied Commander

Not disclosed in recent news stories about a supreme allied commander for Europe is the fact that the joint chiefs of staff have been vigorously opposed to the appointment of an American.

Reason for their lack of enthusiasm is simple. If an American is made top commander in Europe, they reason, then Europe will look to the United States to supply the troops for him to command. If there is a French or British commander, they might furnish men.

AROUND THE HOUSE

The inside of an enameled pot can be whitened by putting a half cup of laundry bleach in it, filling it the rest of the way with water and letting it stand for twenty-four hours.

To add to the eye appeal of gravy when it isn't brown enough, add a little leftover coffee.

Self-thickening gravy can be made by using the water in which rice has been cooked. A lot of the value, cooked out of the rice, is in the water, thus providing added nourishment.

When you thicken gravy with flour, you can avoid lumpiness by mixing a little cornstarch with the flour.

When such foods as cereals or rice stick to the inside of the top part of a double boiler, turn the top upside down in piping hot tap water for a few minutes so that the steam can loosen the stuff inside.

To clean the vertical tube of a percolator, run a pipe cleaner through it. Or, fill the percolator with water, add four tablespoonfuls of salt, put the tube in and let it perk for ten of fifteen minutes. If this dulls the luster of the percolator, restore it by boiling vinegar in it, or water with pieces of a lemon.

The name, "Journeyman Painter" comes from the painters who at the time of the Renaissance journeyed from country to country with their brushes, palettes and secretly blended paints. In today's parlance, a journeyman painter is one who has had at least three years' experience or schooling as an apprentice.

Proper Eye Care Can Prevent Half Of All Blindness

By Franklin M. Foote, M.D.
Executive Director, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness

It isn't very likely to happen, of course, but just suppose someone offered you a blank check for your eyes. Would you fill out the check? And if you did, how much money would you want for a life of darkness?

Without a doubt, some people wouldn't trade their eyes for a sum equal to the national debt. And for those who did sell their sight, the price would come awfully high to the bidder.

Nevertheless, in our day-in, day-out lives, many of us hold sight as a very cheap commodity. For example, have you had your eyes checked recently? If you own a car you've probably had a mechanic examine it at least once during the past 12 months. But what is the price you paid for your car compared to the price you would place on your eyes if you could fill in that blank check?

Children Need Eye Care

Moreover, if you don't take care of your automobile, your worst fate is an extra-large bill for the garage. If you don't take proper care of your eyes, the result may be life-long darkness.

Each week blindness descends in 420 American homes. We at the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness have discovered that from 50 to 75 per cent of all these cases of blindness could be prevented by proper use of the knowledge which medical science now possesses.

Sight conservation should begin with our children. Has your child had a visual check-up recently? He should have one periodically for this reason: one of every four American children is suffering from some type of eye defect, but nothing is done to correct the condition.

We've also discovered that many children who come home with poor report cards are plagued by poor vision rather than poor I. Q. It isn't surprising because 85 per cent of what we learn comes through our vision.

Adults, of course, need their sight just as much as youngsters. Men and women over 40 should be especially punctual about having periodic eye checks.

Special Sight-Saving Classes

The sight of an estimated 53,000 American school children is so poor that they cannot read this page. Eight thousand of these children are now in special sight-saving classes.

In these classes the children use books and other reading matter printed in large-size type, thus conserving whatever sight they have. They only attend these classes for work requiring close use of the eyes.

w Many Blind in United States?

re are an estimated 260,000 blind Americans, a recent evealed, a metropolis of darkness larger than the popula- yracuse, Miami, Oklahoma City or Richmond. In addition, Americans have vision that is only barely useful. Another are blind in one eye. Some of these people, accustomed only partially, do not even know they have subnormal Medical science has the knowledge to prevent at least 50 of all blindness. But this knowledge is worthless if we ilize it.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 24: 25-32.

Using Your Bible

Lesson for October 15, 1950

THE BIBLE must be approached in three ways: with the head, with the heart and with the will. With the head for understanding, the heart for appreciation and reverence, and the will for obedience. That was the first question Philip asked the Ethiopian: Do you understand what you are reading? Not do you enjoy it, or do you believe it, but do you understand it? If not, then the reader can neither fully believe nor rightly enjoy it.

Dr. Foreman

The King James Version

THE BEST and simplest help in understanding the Bible is to read it in the language we speak. Now unfortunately it was not written in that tongue, but in Hebrew and Greek. We have to read it in translations. There are scores of translations in English alone.

The most widely sold of these is the one known by various names: the King James, or the Authorized, or the 1611, version. This was first published in 1611, being essentially a revision of the Bishop's Bible, a still earlier translation. The name "authorized" is misleading, however, for it never was authorized by church or state. It is a noble example of 17th century English and has had a wide influence wherever English-speaking people have gone.

The fact is, however, that people today do not speak 17th-century English any more, and very few of us even read it. Consequently the Bible, in this King James version, has a quaint Shakespearian sound, and the difficulty of the language is one of the main reasons why the average American today finds it hard to read.

Furthermore, the King James is inaccurate in many places. At the time it was published, the translators were working from Greek manuscripts which are now known not to be either the earliest or the best available. For these reasons, fresh translations of the Bible were greatly needed.

20th Century Translations

THESE modern-English translations of the Bible haven't changed the Book; they are simply helping the reader to get back to the ideas of the original apostles and prophets; they are putting the Bible again into the language people actually speak.

Some of the more important versions may be noted here. Practically all the churches of Protestant North America have been co-operating through the International Council of Religious Education, in producing what is called the "Revised Standard Version" of which the New Testament is already out, and very popular too. The whole Bible in this version is due to be off the press by September 1952.

This is an excellent version for church or liturgical use, as it keeps close to the King James rhythm wherever it can; for the King James version, whatever its faults, has a rhythm about parts of it (notably the Psalms) which has never been surpassed.

Two other translations have been before the public, and have won many friends, for a score of years now: Moffat's, and the American Translation by Goodspeed, J.M.P. Smith and others. (This latter includes the Apocrypha, to which most Protestants are strangers).

* * *

At One Sitting

THE average reader, used to taking his Bible in snippets of a verse or two, or a chapter at most, at one time, will find that he can sit down with one of these modern translations and just read on and on, fascinated by the book he has discovered for the first time.

One of the "hardest" yet most important parts of the Bible, for instance, is the Epistles section of the New Testament. Every one of these epistles is a short letter, but how few persons ever read one straight through! Let the reader who is puzzled by the Epistles get a copy of "Letters to Young Churches," a translation by J. B. Phillips, and he will find that dark part of the New Testament simply opening up and shining.

The work of translating will go on and on as long as language keeps changing; let us thank God for all those who in our time have been making the Word of God again an open book for all men.

Investigate Flowering

The reason why plants flower may be the next secret of nature to be cracked.

Dr. R. Milton Carleton reports that scientists at the great Beltsville station of the department of agriculture have discovered a blue pigment which is closely linked to the flowering of plants. It seems to act as a starter to affect flowering, and scientists think that the same process controls such things as bulbing of onions, formation of potato tubers and lengthening of the stems of grasses.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Is Iowa Changing?

"What's happened to our Iowa autumns?" Edna asked while we were driving last Sunday. "Seems like the trees don't seem to turn as pretty as they used to."

That reminds me of Granpaw Jim. He claims that Iowa blizzards aren't what they used to be.

Well, honestly, I doubt whether our autumns or winters change very much. It's our point of view that changes.

And that's something we all should watch . . . our point of view. Let's not criticize the kids because they like to run and shout.

We oldsters enjoyed that too, once. Let's respect the fellow with a broken accent. We'd sound funny to him, too, if we tried to talk HIS native language.

Granpaw Jim likes corn pone; I like white bread. Edna's a great coffee fan; I enjoy a temperate glass of beer. Both points of view are O.K. And as long as we can keep our vision broad enough, and tolerant enough, we'll all stay younger, grow wiser, and be happier.

CHOOSE SOYBEANS TO USE FOR SEED

Need To Be Mature And Harvested With Care

Select and carefully harvest the soybeans you'll use to plant, urges E. P. Sylwester, head of the Seed Testing Laboratory at Iowa State College.

Many of the soybeans were still quite immature when the first frost hit this year. This probably will result in lower quality seed.

By selecting, Sylwester means harvesting only the most mature beans for seed. For example, beans on high ground not hit by frost or earlier planted beans can be combined separately from those damaged from frost in the field. Beans that may have been damaged should be kept separate and sold on the market.

Adjust Combine

By careful harvest, Sylwester means combining beans when they are dry and adjusting the combine so that the seed coats are not injured. Broken seed coats make the soybean seed more susceptible to harmful soil organisms during the critical period. A broken seed coat also indicates that the young embryo may have been injured and will result in an abnormal plant.

Abnormal plants may be caused by frost damage or seed injury. These weak plants seldom contribute to the final stand in the field and mean more weeds and lower yields, Sylwester points out.

As a follow-up to careful and selective harvest, Sylwester suggests having soybean seed tested. He thinks it usually is cheaper in the long run to sell low germinating seed for processing and to buy high germinating seed for planting. The Iowa State College Seed Testing Laboratory is equipped to test beans for purity and germination at a rate of $1 00 per sample.

Clean and Test

Soybeans intended for seed should be cleaned first then tested, according to Sylwester. Usually the germination is raised by the cleaning process. Especially this year, it is advisable for a farmer to run a field test first to see what the approximate germination will be. If the germination is relatively high, the beans can be cleaned and an accurate germination test made. If low, they can be sold for processing.

It is necessary to know what the germination of any crop seed is so that an intelligent seeding rate may be used, according to Sylwester. If germination is slightly low, a good stand can be obtained by increasing the seeding rate. If the germination is much below average, it's usually best to sell the beans rather than to sow more seed. With a crop high in value like soybeans, increased rates of planting are costly.

FRIEDA SCHULDT DESCRIBES TRIP

Asheville North Carolina
September 21, 1950

ear Friends:
This morning I will tell you few of the many interesting ings that may be seen here round Asheville and in the moky Mountain region. The moky Mountain Park covers n area of 440,000 acres or 700 uare miles. Forty-five mountins in this area are over 6,000 et high. This park was dedited in 1940 and has already ad many visitors. It is open e year around, although snow ills in the mountains and the g busses do not go thru here ter than November 1st. Pisah National Forest is a game reserve and covers over one million acres. Bears and other wild animals live in the forest. Yesterday we visited Mt. Mitchel, which is the highest Peak in this range of the Blue Ridge Mountains. A new highway is being built, which is known as the Blue Ridge Parkway. A very scenic highway.

Asheville, North Carolina was in the earlier day an overnight stopping place on a mountain trail and is now a city of 65,000 in the winter and doubled in the summer due to the tourist trade which is a brisk business. Every hotel is filled to capacity.

The Vanderbilts and other wealthy people brought their money here and built up the city. The Geo. Vanderbilts at one time bought 133,000 acres of land at 50 cents an acre. When Mr. Vanderbilt died Mrs. Vanderbilt sold part of this land to the government for $1.00. They still own 13,000 acres on which stands the Mansion which was once their home.

This house has 365 rooms. The son-in-law still lives in 14 rooms, while part of the other rooms have been turned over to the tourists. In these rooms are many fine Tapestry, old painting, period furniture, statues and many other things. Outside are formal and informal gardens, parways and beautiful drives.

The Biltmore dairy is on the grounds. They have a large herd of Jersey cows of which they were milking 600 head with DeLeval milking machines. It was milking time and the visitors were allowed to watch them through a glass panel over a platform of their milking parlor. They have six milking barns. Their own bottling works, a fleet of trucks, milk and cream is shipped over many parts of the country. One carload of 5 of their cows was on its way to Waterloo, Iowa Dairy Congress.

Several large manufacturing plants are located around Asheville. The Pulp and Paper Co. The Aloca Aluminum Co. with 54 acres under one roof. The Rayon Plant has 30 acres under one roof, a large Cigarette Paper Co., a celophane plant is now under construction. We shall not have time to visit these plants.

Corn and tobacco, string beans and other vegetables for canning are the chief crops. Yesterday we passed a large apple orchard where many apples were boxed and packed for shipment. The smaller apples were made into cider. Much handicraft is made by these people and sold to the tourist. Hooked rugs, bed spreads, handmade pottery out of North Carolina clay, wood craft, basket work and bead work by the Cherokee Indians who live on their reservation here in the mountain region. Hand wrough silver and iron works and hand blown glassware of many colors and many other things.

A large hand weaving industry, where wool is dyed, and carded, spun and woven on hand looms into homespun cloth, which sold at $4.50 to $5.00 per yard and made into suits and dresses.

Handicraft shops are everywhere and the trade is brisk. The Tour Co. which I joined in Chicago, join the Smoky Mountain Tour Co. which transports the tourists (those who travel by train air or bus) thru the Mountain Parks and various places of interest. This is an 8 day tour 2 days enroute and 5 days sightseeing from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. Today is free day to spend as we wish. Tomorrow is our last day of sightseeing.

We leave Asheville at 9 a. m. on our way to Knoxville, Tenn. This will be another beautiful drive through mountains which are all coverd with dense forest of many different kinds of trees shrubs and flowers. 3,600 different kinds of vegetables are grown in this mountain region. Mt. Laurel, blooms in June and grows most everywhere. The lakes in the mountains are by dams which back the water into the caves, all man made. Tomorrow we drive over the Fontana Dam, the largest of the 26 dams in the project of the T. V. A.

This is a very interesting region and many days or weeks could be spent here.

Third Grade News

The third grade has been making a great deal of progress on their men which they are making out of lightbulbs. All they have left to do now is adding on the feet and trousers.

We have only had one birthday in our room since school started, and that was Richard Swalve's.

Fourth Grade News

On October 5, after school, our whole class was invited to Gary Kothenbeutel's home for a birthday party. We had a wonderful time playing at the party.

Today in art period we spent all our time in making things for Halloween. It was a lot of fun.

Sixth Grade News

The sixth grade have been studying table manners in health. We have made a booklet on jokes that we can tell at the table.

The girls have made a mural in History. They chose China as their subject. The boys did one earlier in the year on Egypt. Both are interesting and very well done.

The sixth grade are interested in reading and have a large reading chart. On the chart are stories from other books that go with the stories from our Basic Readers. The boys and girls also have their own individual reading charts, called "Reading Design." If they read one book in each section they have a very good background for reading.

In Geography we have finished the study of Great Britain and are now starting the study of France.

Seventh Grade News

Our class has now been through six weeks of school. We all agree it has been rather hard but we have enjoyed it. Our six weeks tests are past and everyone is getting relieved.

We are enjoying another fine poster display in our room. This week the boys have been in charge. They also have received fine compliments.

Next week will be the beginning of a new six weeks. We are all striving for better work. Also next week we are beginning a series of kittenball games. Each grade will be trying for the pennant race.

We think the seventh grade is a heavy favorite.

Eighth Grade News

Six weeks tests are finished and we are now waiting for our results. We are hoping we all have satisfactory marks, but some of us are pretty worried. We are finding out it pays to study a little more than usual.

Our English class gave three minute talks to the class last week. These talks were very interesting and enjoyed by all of us. We are looking forward to giving five minute talks in the near future.

The Junior High basketball schedule is being filled up with about ten games this year. We had our first practice during one of the cold days last week. So far we have scheduled four games for both boys and girls.

We have been collecting money for the Crusade for Freedom this past week. The money will go for "Radio Free Europe" that's broadcast behind the Iron Curtain in Europe.

The film Treasure Island has been ordered and will be shown to the class in the next two or three weeks.

We were very fortunate to listen to the World Series baseball game Wednesday and Thursday of last week. We also studied during the game for our tests. It seems to have worked our quite well.

Our motto for this week is:

"The less we know of a subject, the more we think we know. And the more we learn the more we realize how little we know about it."

Who Runs America?

the Congress? the President?

OR YOU AND THE MAN NEXT DOOR?

RUNNING AMERICA is the joint job of 150,000,000 people. It's the biggest job in the world today—keeping it running for liberty and for freedom. And the whole world's watching to see whether Americans can do it!

IN MUCH OF THE WORLD today, the people have resigned from running their own countries. Others have been quick to step in—first with promises of "security"—and then with whips and guns—to run things their way. The evidence is on every front page in the world, every day.

FREEDOM COMES UNDER ATTACK. The reality of war has made every American think hard about the things he's willing to work and fight for—and freedom leads the list.

But that freedom has been attacked here recently—just as it has been attacked in other parts of the world. One of the most serious threats to individual freedom has been the threat of Government-dominated Compulsory Health Insurance, falsely presented as a new guarantee of health "security" for everybody.

THE PEOPLE WEIGH THE FACTS. In the American manner, the people studied the case for Socialized Medicine—and the case against it.

They found that Government domination of the people's medical affairs under Compulsory Health Insurance means lower standards of medical care, higher payroll taxes, loss of incentive, damage to research, penalties for the provident, rewards for the improvident.

They found that no country on earth can surpass America's leadership in medical care and progress. They found that able doctors, teachers, nurses and scientists—working in laboratories where Science, not Politics, is master—are blazing dramatic new trails to health for Americans—and for the world.

THE "GRASS ROOTS" SIGNALS CONGRESS. In every community in the Nation, people stood up to be counted on this important issue. Thousands of local women's clubs, civic groups, farm, business, religious, taxpayer, medical, educational and patriotic organizations spoke out—giving the great United States Congress its unmistakable Grass Roots signal from home!

And ever watchful, ever sensitive to an alert people, The Congress saw that signal, and heard the people speak out, loud and plain. That's democracy in action. That's the American way!

Today among the 10,000 great organizations on militant public record against "Compulsory Health Insurance" are:

General Federation of Women's Clubs
American Farm Bureau Federation
National Grange
Veterans of Foreign Wars
National Conference of Catholic Charities
American Protestant Hospital Association
American Legion
National Association of Small Business Men
United States Chamber of Commerce
National Association of Retail Grocers
National Retail Dry Goods Association
American Bar Association

• Doctors of this Nation are grateful that the people refused to be wooed by the fantastic promises of this un-American excursion into State Socialism. • Doctors of America are dedicated to serve their fellow citizens at home and their comrades in uniform, wherever service to this Nation may take them. • And the thing they stand ready to fight for—to sacrifice for—to die for—is not the alien way of life of Socialism, but the prideful security of a free and self-reliant people!

THE VOLUNTARY WAY IS THE AMERICAN WAY!

• Throughout the Nation, free men and women, working and planning together, are finding the American answer to every question of medical service, care and cost. Hundreds of Voluntary Health Insurance Plans are in healthy competition—sponsored by doctors, insurance companies, hospitals, fraternal organizations—by industry, agriculture and labor. • Today in America—70 million people are protected by Voluntary Health Insurance! • Throughout the Nation, families are insuring themselves against the major costs of illness—at reasonable, budget-basis prices. Voluntary Health Insurance takes the economic shock out of illness. Protect your family now. • For information, ask your doctor—or your insurance man.

An American's greatest heritage is the right to learn the facts—and to speak his mind. Maintained with honor and used with sincerity—that right will guarantee forever that

Selling Milk

IS SELLING HEALTH!

Our service to this community has much in common with that of the medical profession.

The wholesome diet of American families--and the place of milk in that diet--has a lot to do with the high standard of health our country has achieved.

Because our product is essential to good health, we believe that every argument made against socialized medicine also could be made against a socialized dairy business.

In fact, every great Nation that has tried socialized medicine has gone on to socialize other businesses and other industry and other professions.

America has no place for permanent Government controls borrowed from foreign lands. It has no place for socialized medicine, socialized railroads, socialized power, socialized manufacturing, or socialized dairies!

We believe--and all experience proves--that free men do the best job of running industry, professions and business.

That's why today we publicly reaffirm our faith in American initiative, American progress, American FREEDOM.

Suffacated

When fire broke out in the Dr. Merlin Schroeder home at Titonka recently, Mrs. Schroeder was suffocated by smoke. Dr. Schroeder and daughter Margaret Ann managed to escape unharmed. The fire broke out early in the morning, when all occupants were asleep.

Crushed In Stone-Crusher

When his clothing caught on the paddles of a stone-crusher, Donald Wagar was dragged into the jaws of the machine and his body was badly mangled within a few seconds. The accident happened at Alogna, to which town Mr. Wagar and his wife and small daughter had moved only a few days before.

EXTENSION LESSON SERIES STARTED

According to County Extension Home Economist, Elsie Mae VanWert, the fall and winter series of Women's extension has started this week.

"Busy Day Meals" is the first lesson to be given throughout the month of October. Every homemaker is interested in new ideas for menus that can be used on busy days.

Leaders will attend training schools given in October. Miss VanWert will give the lesson to the leaders and the leaders in turn will give the lesson to the interested groups in their community.

Busy Day meals gives what it implies, foods that can be prepared in a very short time but that are nutritious. Basic mixes are part of the lesson. These mixes may be made up by the Homemakers and stored in cool places to be used on those busy days to make your meals go quickly and easily.

AUXILIARY TO MAKE U. N. FLAG

Twenty-two members of the Legion Auxiliary met in the Council room on Tuesday evening, October 3 for their regular monthly meeting. Carrie Schwichtenberg opened the meeting in regular form. "America" was sung by all. Committee reports were given.

Motion was made to order 1150 poppies for this year. The treasurer was voted to be bonded, as usual.

The membership report was given. All dues are asked to be paid before Oct. 20th.

The Auxiliary voted to make the United Nations Flag as requested by Miss Elsie Mae Van Wert, County Home Economist. Thelma Arnold was appointed to order the kit. It is hoped that the flag can be completed in time to fly it on United Nations Day, October 24th.

Those who made the trip to Woodward gave short reports.

The members were all reminded of the Food Sale which was to be held Saturday, Oct. 7. Darlene Etchen made the posters.

Friday, October 13 will be the 53rd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Albers of Klemme. They are not planning any celebration of the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Simmons, Junior and Vera, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schroer and Dennis Schoenwetter all of Garner were Sunday afternoon visitors at the Joe Roul home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roul and family were Sunday supper guests at the Joe Kral home at Garner.

RITES WEDNESDAY FOR GARNER WOMAN

Mrs. E. S. Viken, 66, of Garner, died at a hospital in Mason City Monday at 6:40 a. m. following major surgery performed Sept. 21. Her husband was a hardware merchant until his death May 4 of this year.

Funeral services were held today, Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. at the Bohn funeral home and at 2 p. m. at the United Presbyterian Church, the Rev. J. Dallas Gibson officiating. Burial was made in the Concord cemetery.

Mrs. Viken was born at Clear Lake, May 19, 1881, to Arne and Guri Olsen, and grew to womanhood there. She was married to Mr. Viken May 22, 1906, and they moved to Garner in 1909.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Paul Mathis of Vermilion, South Dakota, and 2 grandchildren.

GASOLINE CAN BE FARM FIRE DANGER

Gasoline is a friend of the farmer—unles it explodes. And that often means misery and sometimes death.

Hancock County farmers may save themselves from serious trouble if they review safety measures from time to time and especially during Fire Prevention Week October 8.14. Here are some danger points that County Extension Direct Paul Henderson suggests watching out for.

Gasoline storage often leak and release fumes. These fumes settle in low areas or air spaces where there is no circulation. That's why underground tanks or those on pedestals are the safest. If the storage tank is above ground it should be at least 40 feet from the nearest building, Henderson says.

Another gasoline danger occurs when it is moved. Use only a red can with "gasoline" marked on it. The tractor operator may know which is the gasoline can, but other persons may not. Explosive fumes might be present in these cans even though all the gasoline has been dumped out. Pour gasoline into tractors that have been shut off long enough for the motor to cool.

Keep gasoline away from any motor parts and don't use it for cleaning clothes. This is especially dangerous if it's done inside buildings.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

'Good Neighbor' Policy Proves Successful in This Hemisphere

By WALTER A. SHEAD

This is the fourth of a series of six articles on the state department and its personnel by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

Washington, D. C.—There can be no doubt but that the foreign policy of the United States, as carried out by the state department, toward Latin and South America today has brought about stronger ties of friendship than has ever before existed.

The dollar diplomacy of by-gone eras has given away to the "good neighbor" policy of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and this has been carried on and strengthened by successive secretaries of state Edward Stettinius, James Byrnes, George C. Marshall and Dean Acheson.

Through the Pan-American Union, the inter-American affairs institute, as a result of non-aggression pacts and economic pacts of Mexico City and Rio de Janeiro, Bogota and Havana, there has come to be mutual cooperation and respect between the American republics.

The bureau of inter-American affairs in the state department is headed by Edward G. Miller, Jr., born in Puerto Rico, a graduate of Yale and Harvard, a former law partner of John Foster Dulles in New York, and who speaks Spanish and Portuguese as easily as he speaks English. In a recent address, Secretary Acheson said that as a result of Miller's operation of the inter-American affairs bureau "our relations with the southern hemisphere are on a basis which I think they have never been before. They are on a sensible, sound basis of mutual advantage, and both they and we know that we both really mean business when we talk and when we talk, we talk business."

The main object of our foreign policy in the Americas is to maintain the security of our nation and of the hemisphere. Second our objective is to encourage democratic representative institutions and to cooperate in the economic field. It is our policy to strengthen the organization of the American states within the framework of the United Nations as the most effective expression of law and order in this hemisphere.

JOHN E. PEURIFOY
DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE

Born Waterboro, S. C., Aug. 9, 1907, son of John H. and Emil Wright Puerifoy. Student U. S. Military Academy, 1926-28, American University, 1935, George Washington University, 1939-40. Married Betty Jane Cox, Oct. 2, 1936. Two children, John Clinton and Daniel Byrd. Entered department of state October 1, 1938. Designated deputy under secretary of state on May 31, 1949.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY with respect to Germany has been stymied for the time because of the Russian aggressive policy But from the first we have supported a unified German government based on free and democratic elections. It is our policy to rebuild Germany economically with the help of the Germans themselves, but to keep from them the potentials of making war. As an occupying power it is our objective to prohibit institutions and activities dangerous to peace and to encourage a truly democratic society which can become again closely integrated with the free nations of Europe.

In the near east, Africa and south Asia our policy is to offer economic and technical assistance if these people want it. Also, we are ready, if they want our aid to help them solve their complex problems of internal, political and social life which such nations as India, Parkistan, the East Indian Republic and other newly formed nations in that area face as a result of the dislocation and disturbances following the war.

The foreign economic policy of the United States is aimed at breaking down barriers to world trade and to increasing the international flow of investment capital through the reciprocal trade agreements program, the proposed international trade organization and the point four program.

The Marshall plan, the North Atlantic pact, the military aid program and the Truman doctrine in Greece and Turkey have withered Communist hopes for over-running the European continent. Our support of the so-called Schuman plan, it is believed, will end their hope of communizing western Germany.

It may have appeared that we had neglected or abandoned Asia and China, but as a matter-of-fact, negotiations had been going on for some time with a number of nations for economic and technical assistance, particularly in the field of agriculture, before the invasion of Korea.

One of the things that has been lacking in United States foreign policy is an effective world information service to successfully combat the Russian propaganda of lies and deceit.

THE FICTION CORNER

DAFFY ENOUGH

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

ONE DAY last spring a transcontinental air liner got off its beam over the Rocky mountains and smashed up against a rocky peak. It was a few hours before the disaster was suspected, and then the airports could only guess at the location of the wreckage.

Glen Owens, sitting alone in his cabin on the slopes of White Crest valley, heard the announcement over his dry cell set. Young Glen's cabin was located on the course of the liner's flight, and earlier in the evening he had heard sounds that now he remembered as being rather queer.

Glen strapped on his skis, loaded a pack with provisions and supplies and set off up the valley. Three hours later he saw a light and came to the wreckage. Two people were dead, and another was so badly injured that unless he had medical attention pretty quick he too would die.

On an improvised sled, Glen pulled the injured man to the nearest town and doctor.

Three days after this a man from Hollywood, Calif., arrived in Crest, looked up Glen and offered to pay him $500 a week to make a moving picture.

Glen smiled and shook his head. "Nope," he drawled, "I always wanted to be a legerdemainist, and now with this reward money I reckon I got my chance."

"Good gosh, man, it will take 20 weeks to make this picture. That's $10,000. Do you realize that!"

"It's a lot of money," Glen agreed, "but suppose folks liked me? Then I'd have to stay out there and keep making pictures."

Then he fashioned a sled, using his skis as runners, twisted some saplings into the shape of snowshoes and wove them with twigs.

"You'll be a dumbbell if you don't grab this chance."

"Maybe," said Glen good-naturedly, "I'm a dumbbell already."

"Glen! What is the matter? Last summer you wanted to start a dude ranch down in Arizona, but you didn't have any money. So you decided to go trapping for one winter so you could save enough money to buy a half-interest in a ranch and we could get married. And now you're offered $10,000 and you mumble something about being a leger—leger—whatever it is."

ALL of which made swell newspaper copy The reporters ate it up. So did readers. If Glen had been famous before, he was twice as famous now.

The next week three movie producers arrived on the scene. One of them offered a flat price of $25,000 for a single picture.

Leah Conroy was almost in tears "Glen, for goodness' sake, try and understand what this means. In another month you'll be forgotten. It's your chance. Do you want to be a trapper all your life?"

"Thirty thousand!" said the movie magnate desperately.

Glen heaved a deep sigh. "O. K. If that's the way you want it, Leah!"

So Glen Owens went to Hollywood and made a moving picture.

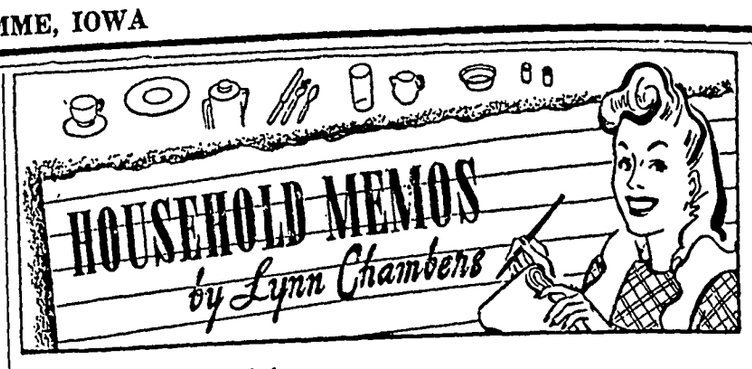
Glen returned to Crest, bearing his $30,000, and the next day he and Leah journeyed down into Arizona. Within a week they had purchased a ranch.

They were married in the ranch patio, and left immediately for a honeymoon to Honolulu. It was while they were on the boat that Leah asked the inevitable question.

"Well, honey, it was like this," Glen replied. "That offer of $10,000 was good, but we needed $15,000 to buy a ranch of our own, so I figured if I turned down the first offer folks would think I was daffy enough to make me more famous, and the movie folks would offer me more money. Which they did."

"Glen Owens, what is a leger—?"

"I dunno," Glen grinned. "And I figured nobody else would, either All I know is I saw it written out once and copied if off so's I'd be sure to get the spelling right in case I wanted to use it."



Help Family Health By Fortifying Meals With Nourishing Milk

AS EVERY MOTHER knows, children go through spells when they will not drink their quota of a quart of milk each day. It's smart of her at these times, especially, to get milk into foods that will be eaten.

Since desserts are bound to appeal to the youngsters, make them extra nutritious with milk. If you're budget conscious, you may use nonfat dry milk which has only water and fat removed, and all calcium, protein, riboflavin and lactose left in.

If your source of fluid milk is readily available, there are many ways in which to use this in the diet, especially in milk desserts.

HERE'S A LEMON Fluff Pudding which gives you just the right milk-rich dessert you want for a hearty meal. Served with a creamy custard sauce, you'll have no problem serving seconds.

Lemon Fluff Pudding
(Serves 6-8)

- 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1 cup boiling water
- ¾ cup sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup lemon juice
- ⅓ cup nonfat dry milk
- ⅓ cup water

Soften gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Pour boiling water over softened gelatin; stir until dissolved. Mix in sugar and salt; stir until dissolved. Stir in lemon juice. Chill until mixture begins to thicken. Meanwhile, sprinkle nonfat dry milk over water and beat with rotary beater until stiff, about 10 minutes. Beat thickened gelatin mixture until frothy, about 1 minute. Fold in nonfat dry milk and beat until well-blended and fluffy, about 1 minute. Pour into individual molds or 1½ quart mold. Chill in refrigerator until firm. Unmold and serve with Custard Sauce.

Custard Sauce
(Makes 1½ cups)

- 6 tablespoons nonfat dry milk
- 1½ cups water
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Sprinkle nonfat dry milk over water. Beat with rotary beater until just dissolved. Heat to scalding in double boiler. Combine eggs, sugar and salt. Stir scalded milk slowly into egg mixture. Return to top of double boiler. Cook over hot, not boiling, water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and coats a silver spoon. Pour at once in bowl and cool quickly. Stir in vanilla. Chill until ready to use.

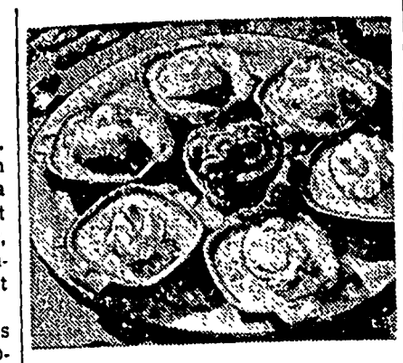
HOW NOURISHING and delicious is bread pudding, and how easy to bake right along with an oven dinner. Try yours with Lemon or Butterscotch sauce for a real treat in good, nourishing eating.

Raisin Bread Pudding
(Serves 5)

- 6 slices toasted white bread
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup raisins

Light, fluffy and delicious is this lemon fluff pudding made with nonfat dry milk which gives you a simple way of fortifying meals with milk which is occassionally not consumed in sufficient quantity as a beverage.



Few would turn down a luscious dessert like Spiced Cottage Custard fortified with not only milk but also cottage cheese and cleverly flavored with lemon, vanilla, cinnamon and apricots. Swirls of meringue add a festive touch.

- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 3 eggs
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 cups milk

Spread each slice of toast with butter. Arrange in shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with raisins and nutmeg. Beat eggs slightly, then stir in sugar, salt and milk. Pour over toast slices. Let stand 10 minutes, pressing toast down occasionally to absorb milk. Bake in a moderately slow (325° F.) oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until top is golden brown and custard is set. Serve with sauce.

Butterscotch Sauce
(Makes 1 cup)

- 1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- ½ cup corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1 tablespoon butter
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ cup cream

Combine all ingredients except vanilla and cream and cook to soft ball stage (236° F.). Do not stir. Remove from heat; add vanilla. Cool and add cream gradually.

SPICED COTTAGE custard is appealing to look at and good to eat with its cottage cheese, apricots and meringue topping.

Spiced Cottage Custard
(Serves 6)

- 2 cups milk
- 3 eggs
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- 1 cup sieved cottage cheese
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- Cooked, drained apricot halves.

Heat milk in top of double boiler. Beat 2 eggs and 1 yolk, reserving extra white for meringue. Add ¼ cup (4 tablespoons) sugar, cheese, salt, lemon rind, vanilla and cinnamon, stirring to blend. Slowly add hot milk, while stirring. Place 2 or 3 apricot halves in each of 6 buttered custard cups and pour custard over them. Place in a pan of warm water and bake in a slow (300° F.) oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until custards are completely set and lightly browned. Beat egg white until stiff and add remaining 2 tablespoons sugar, slowly, beating after each addition. Top each custard with meringue and place in broiler for about 3 minutes or until meringues are lightly browned.

Maple Custard
(Serves 10)

- 4 eggs, separated
- ⅔ cup maple syrup
- 1 tall can evaporated milk
- ⅔ cup water
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ teaspoon salt

Beat egg yolks with maple syrup. Add evaporated milk, water and vanilla. Stir until mixed well. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff and fold into custard. Pour into individual cups and place in a pan of hot water. Bake in a slow (325° F.) oven for about 45 minutes until custard is set.

LYNN SAYS:
Add Magic to Meat With these Seasonings

No time to make meat loaf? Pack two cans of corned beef hash into a square pan, made indentations for peach halves, top with the peaches filling their centers with chili sauce. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Skewer nuggets of leftover ham or luncheon meat on sticks with pineapple chunks and banana circles. Drizzle with barbecue sauce and broil for a delicious luncheon.

Try these hearty open-faced sandwiches for lunch: spread baked beans on buns or bread, top with a thin film of chili sauce and a strip or two of bacon. Broil until bacon is crisp. Serve with cole slaw.

Processed cheese melts quickly in the double boiler if a little milk is added, and can be used as a rarebit. Top roast or rusk with the rarebit and serve with small slices of smoked butt or Canadian bacon which are pan-broiling as the cheese melts.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

RONALD and Benita Colman had no idea, when they embarked on "The Halls of Ivy" series last January, that they were launching a show that would become so popular so soon. "Really adult entertainment" is the description given by its many devoted listeners. Not only the show, but its theme song, immediately became popular; in fact, so many people wanted a recording of the song that a record has been made by the group that sings it on the NBC Wednesday night broadcasts. College presidents and faculty members have praised the series; students lament the impossibility of finding a college president like Colman.

Joe Wilman, whose records in American Bowling Congress competition stamp him as one of the greatest bowlers of the decade, has signed to star in "King of the Ten-pins", of Columbia's "World of Sports" short subjects series.

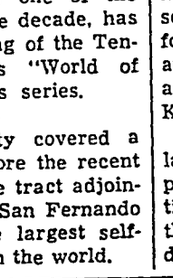
'Israel Revisited' Answer to What New Nation Is Like

By BILLY ROSE

Early in 1949, my missus and I took a trip around the world, and one of the countries we got to see was Israel. At the time, many of the streets of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem were still criss-crossed with barbed wire, and the roads leading through the hills of Judea were littered with burned-out trucks. Nevertheless, thanks to an old Chevvy and a pair of even older legs, I managed to see most of this tiny country, and when I left it a few weeks later I was pretty excited about what I had seen.

When we got back to New York, my old boss, Bernard M. Baruch, asked me to put my enthusiasm in my pocket and try to estimate Israel's chances of survival in this highly competitive world. I told him that one swing around the globe wasn't enough to make an economic expert out of a Broadway jumping-jack, but that I had come away from Israel with the general impression that its people were (a) intelligent, (b) tough as nails, and (c) prepared to work like all get-out to make a go of their new lives.



Billy Rose

"A business or a nation with those qualities usually gives a good account of itself," said Mr. Baruch.

* * *

SINCE MY VISIT, I've heard nothing to change my snap appraisal of Israel's chances. On the other hand, I've read darned little on the subject which could be classed as good objective reporting. Most of the favorable stuff was too favorable — obviously the work of men who were out to make as good a case for the new nation as possible. And as for the dissenters — well, as was to be expected, most of them sounded as if they were carrying a 2,000-year-old chip on their shoulders.

Recently a copy of a new book by Ralph McGill—"Israel Revisited," published in Atlanta, Ga., last month by Tupper and Love—showed up on my desk and I began to thumb through it out of a sense of duty. But what started as duty quickly became compulsion, for McGill, editor of one of the South's most trustworthy papers, The Atlanta Constitution, had obviously gone to Israel with an open mind and crammed it with facts and figures before making it up.

I've met Mr. McGill once or twice, and before I was halfway through his book I found myself wondering how this soft-spoken and hard-headed gentleman from Georgia had come to write such an incisive and insightful commentary on the complicated events now shaping up at the far end of the Mediterranean.

* * *

I GOT TO THINKING about it and, as I hunch it, the answer is triple pronged: First, McGill is an Irishman, which means that while he has a lively sense of justice in general he has no axiom to grind about Israel in particular. Second, he is first, foremost and fastidiously a newspaperman, avaricious for facts but plenty leary of special-pleading propaganda. And third, he has a long record as a fighting Southern liberal, and once he's gotten his facts straight he's not one to by-pass those touchy areas where even angels fear to tiptoe.

When I finished reading "Israel Revisited," I was, of course, tickled to find that McGill's conclusions jibed with mine, but that's neither here nor there. The important thing is that, without pulling any punches, he has written a book about this controversial little country which one can read without prejudice or without suspecting the author of same.

Here, at last, is a meticulous and meaningful answer to the often-asked question, "What's Israel really like?"

U. N. Forces Surprise Communists With Amphibious Attack at Inchon; Ministers Plan European Defenses

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:
Now the Offensive

With unexpected and dramatic suddenness the war in Korea turned from the defensive to the offensive.

It was sudden in that the American people were surprised that United Nations forces could be mustered to launch an offensive. And it was dramatic in its conception and execution by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

From June 25, when the Communist struck with surprising force and generalship, the people of America watched one continual withdrawal. They heard of one Communist advance after another and the fall of such cities as Seoul, Suwan, Kumsan and Taejon. Further and further the Communists advanced until U.N. forces held a beachhead in the southeast corner of Korea that offered little or no room for further retreat and little possibilities for an offensive.

And then in one stroke General MacArthur launched an invasion of Korea over 100 miles behind the Communist lines at Inchon. Other forces landed at Yongdok and at points on the east coast.

The main invading force on the west coast at Inchon had one objective: the capture of Seoul, former capital of South Korea, and cutting the supply routes of the Communists from North Korea. At the same time a general offensive was launched in the south from the U. N. beachhead.

General MacArthur did not try to hide his eventual hopes for the operation. He wanted to cut Korea just below the 38th parallel and thus have the Communists armies between two hammers that would slowly but surely beat them to pieces and destroy them.

The initial invasion was successful. U. S. marine and army divisions captured Wolmi islands in less than an hour, overran Inchon and advanced on Seoul Kimpo airfield, the best in Korea, was captured, and American troops stood at the outskirts of Seoul.

The southern offensive progressed slowly against stubborn Communist rear guard action. There were indications, however, that Communist defenses were crumbling.

SPYING:
Slack Admits Guilt

Alfred Dean Slack, a former chemist at a Syracuse, N.Y., plant, admitted in federal court at Greenville, Tenn., he was guilty of wartime spying for Soviet Russia.

Slack said he supplied Russian agents with a sample of RDX, a high explosive, and the formula for its manufacture.

U. S. attorney James M. Meck told the court there were "extenuating circumstances" in Slack's favor and recommended a 10-year prison sentence.

Meek told the court how Harry Gold, a Philadelphia biochemist now awaiting trial on espionage charges, made contact with Slack and asked him to obtain details of the manufacture of RDX.

Slack reportedly refused three times to give Gold the information, but when threatened with exposure as a "Soviet spy" obtained a sample of the explosive and the formula, and turned them over to Gold.

JAPAN:
Ready for Treaty

Since the end of the shooting war progress toward a Japanese peace treaty has been blocked because the big powers were divided over what the treaty should be and the procedure for drafting it.

Now, however, the United States has announced it is ready for a treaty and the state department representative John Foster Dulles instructed to begin "informal discussions."

Headliners

"That's a good sight for my old eyes," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said as he inspected six Red tanks, still smoking, where they had been knocked out near Seoul.

"If we lose, we lose forever," Bernard Baruch warned in his latest statement to the American people that all-out war must be waged by the U.S. to win in Korea.

"You see, kids, I happened to be caught in two wars inside 10 years, and the reason I am where I am today is because I am fighting for what I think is right," Pfc. John J. McCormick, 28, wrote in a letter to his two daughters. The letter was received three days after a telegram that informed Mrs. McCormick that her husband had been killed in Korea.

"If American warmongers force a war on humanity it will be their last war. The hate of honest and patient people will explode with a strength greater than any hydrogen bomb," shouted Soviet Marshal Semyon Bagdanow in a speech to bolster Russian morale.

BIG THREE:
Not in Accord

Diplomatic sources noted with concern a break, although not considered too serious, in the relations of the Big Three foreign ministers in their first series of New York meetings.

Dean Acheson, representing the United States, Robert Schuman of France, and Ernest Bevin of Great Britain were not in accord on the U. S. proposal to rearm western Germany. That was the major source of disagreement.

The United States, through Acheson, had urged the 12-nation North Atlantic council to reach agreement in principle that western German forces should become part of the projected western European army.

The U. S. idea was that German troop units would be included in the western European army. France, however, indicated that she wanted to go slow and easy on the question.

The gist of the French attitude seemed to be that it was premature to agree immediately on the principle of eventual German rearmament. That attitude was understandable in that France had not forgotten, or is likely to forget, World War I or World War II, sparked by German aggression.

Observers said that there was a possibility that the foreign ministers might come to some sort of agreement in principle among themselves, though it might not be announced publicly.

The ministers discussed a broad range of urgent problems. A communique issued by the three said they were fully agreed that the most urgent problem was that of strengthening the defenses of the free world both in Europe and in Asia and were equally agreed that immediate effective steps must be taken to that end.

That, perhaps, was a true indication of the atmosphere in which the ministers worked. It was not a question of what had to be done, but the best way to accomplish it.

Follow Through

A second offensive against communism began shortly after the invasion of North Korea with the Voice of America beaming broadcasts to the far east describing the exploit.

Factual reports of the daring maneuvers topped all broadcasts to the far east and near east and shared first attention with the foreign ministers meeting in broadcasts to Europe.

MARSHALL:
Anger Close to Tears

In an atmosphere of bitterness that at times brought senators to their feet in anger that bordered on tears, congress cleared the way for General of the Army George C. Marshall, a soldier for 40 years, to serve as secretary of defense.

The waiver to the unification act which forbids the office of secretary of defense to a commissioned officer within 10 years of the end of his active service was approved by the house 220 to 105 and by the senate by 47 to 21.

But before the vote in the senate. William E. Jenner of Indiana took the floor and for an hour, while the senators sat in silence and shame, launched into an attack on Marshall's honor that astounded foes and friends alike.

It was the reapparance of the bitter core of isolationism and Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio and Sen. Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska immediately made it plain that they were not going along with Jenner's denunciation of General Marshall as a soldier and a man.

Taft opposed the waiver on the grounds that it would put a military man in the cabinet as head of the military establishment and would strike at the old American tradition of civilian control of military affairs. Taft also contended it would strengthen the position of the secretary of state "in relation to the Chinese Communists." That was as far as he would go.

Jenner, however, attacked Marshall as "either an unsuspecting stooge or an actual co-conspirator with the most treasonable array of political cutthroats ever turned loose in the executive branch of the government."

Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois called Jenner's speech "reprehensible, irresponsible, the most diabolical speech in the halls of congress that I have ever heard in 16 years here." The Republicans in the senate were inclined to agree.

Most observers said that Jenner's attack on a man who has served his country for 40 years and is greatly respected by the American people in every walk of life, will have further and deeper repercussions. The Indiana senator is known as one of the most consistent isolationists in congress. His attack, although denied by such men as Taft and Wherry, still carries the label of the Republican party and may be reflected in the coming elections.

CONTROLS:
Curbs on Credit

With the restoration of government curbs on consumers' easy-payment credits affecting car, furniture and household equipment, 32 war materials—including steel, lumber, industrial alcohol, and nylon yarn—were placed under federal non-hoarding orders.

Although no consumer items were named, the "inventory control" was broader than had been expected. No shortages are expected to develop, but the move was made to prevent overbuying by businessmen.

N.P.A. administrator William H. Harrison said: "The purpose of the order is to make clear that national interest demands there be no accumulation of materials beyond what is needed for immediate production."

The new defense production law provides a $10,000 fine and one year in prison as maximum penalty for violations. Harrison ordered industry to "cancel, reduce, or defer" promptly any orders which already may have been placed, if they would bring stocks to an illegal size.

CIVIL-DEFENSE
Plan Handed Congress

A blueprint for a vast civil defense program, greater than that of World War II, was placed before congress. It was designed to rally the nation from an atomic attack and enable it to strike back swiftly and destroy the aggressor.

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the national security resources board which drafted the plan, said the program was needed because for the first time since the war of 1812 "an enemy has the power to attack our cities, and for the first time in our history that attack may come suddenly, with little or no warning."

The board's report said, "Granted a few minutes' warning, casualties could be reduced by over 50 per cent through proper organization and training in civil defense."

The program outlined a mutual-aid system reaching into every American home and calling for the services of hundreds of thousands of paid and unpaid workers at the federal, state, and local levels.

CONTRACTOR:
Tape Was Too Long

On the lighter side of the news, Michael O'Malley, a Chicago masonry contractor, sued F. W. Woolworth company and the Waterbury Lock & Specialty company for $20,000 for selling him a rule that was one foot too long.

O'Malley claimed the extra foot caused him to build several garages and a house a foot too big and he is being sued for not filling his contract.

BIRCHWOOD TRIM

Question: We have dull varnished natural birchwood trim in our house, satin finish, that is wax mixed with varnish to produce a dull finish. How can I clean this wood? I have used furniture polish, but it leaves it greasy and spoils the effect.

Answer: There are good commerical preparations for cleaning woodwork as well as floors. I suggest that you get one or two of these and follow the simple directions for use. Then, to restore the satin finish to the wood, apply a very thin coat of paste wax, let it dry hard, and then rub very well with soft cheese-cloth or something similar. You can also clean up the wood by going over it with a clean rag wrung out of soapy water made of pure mild soap. Or use stiffly-beaten soapsuds. Follow by another clean cloth wrung out of clear water and rub the surfaces dry. Follow by waxing as I have indicated.

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM
Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—
REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD
● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as MILLIONS do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.
FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon...right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . you feel weak, worn out.
But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

IT MAY PAY TO WINTER OVER BEEF CALVES

Since the beef calf is the beef herd's entire contribution to the farm income, farmers will want to market this product at the best time and to greatest adventure.

Farmers with shelter for the calves and plenty of good hay with some extra grain may want to winter calves over and sell them as short yearling stockers or feeders in the spring. Prices are usually higher at that time than in the fall, says W. G. Zmolek, extension livestock marketing specialist at Iowa State College. It's best to try for 1 to 1¼ pounds of daily gain per head if calves are wintered over.

If cattlemen have a lot of good pasture for the following season, they can winter the calves over with a little less gain, feed them on grass during the next summer, and then sell them as heavier feeders off grass. If there is plenty of grain on the farm, the steers can stay right there for fattening.

There's another possibilty for marketing calves, Zmolek points out. Calves can be put on grain in the drylot as soon as they are weaned. Then they can be marketed as finished baby beeves.

The bride is a graduate of the local high school and since has attended Iowa State College for three years, where she was enrolled in the department of home economics and where she was a member of Sigma Kappa sorority. The groom was graduated last June from Iowa State college, where he received his degree in agricultural engineering in the college of science. He was a staff sergeant with the air force in World War II, serving two years in the Pacific theater. Mr. Etchen is employed at Belmond and they will make their home at Goodell.

Attended Regional Meeting Of Infantile Paralysis Association

A five-state regional meeting of the National Infantile Paralysis Association was held at Des Moines Friday, with the following attending:

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Osman of Britt, and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson of Klemme, attended. Mr. Osman is chairman of the Hancock County March of Dimes for the coming year, while Mrs. Jorgenson continues as secretary.

At the meeting it was stressed that because of the large number of people who were and are polio victims this year, National funds will soon be exhausted and an appeal is made for donations to carry through until the annual drive.

Mrs. Ray Baker of Britt accompanied the group to attend a meeting of the Cancer Society at Des Moines, Saturday and Sunday.

JAMES DOLLIVER SLATED TO SPEAK AT BRITT, NOV. 1ST

Clint Daniels of Garner, Republican County Central Committee Chairman, has made arrangements to have James Dolliver come to Hancock County for a Republican rally to be held at the Legion Hall in Britt on Wednesday evening, November 1st.

Everyone is invited to attend this meeting.

Star Members Attended Friendship Meeting At Belmond

The Eastern Star Chapter at Belmond entertained visiting chapters from nearby towns at a Friendship meeting Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Ernest Gerardi, Mrs. Bertha Brown and Mrs. Marge Elling of the Garner Chapter took part in the work. Others from Klemme who attended were Miss Marie Blank, Mrs. Fred Arnold, and from Garner Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, Jr. and Mrs. I. R. Beattie.

EXPECT MANY NON-RESIDENT PHEASANT HUNTERS IN 1950 SEASON

The 1950 pheasant season will bring in more non-resident hunters than ever before if preseason inquiries indicate out-of-state interest. Letters for information have been received from New York, Florida, Texas, Calif., and other distant states. The bulk, however, are from the Middle West. More than 2,000 non-resident hunting licenses were issued in 1949.

Spokesmen for the Conservation Commission, explaining increased out-of-state hunter interest, believe the improvement of Iowa's pheasant population, coupled with a decline in birds and drastic curtailment of the South Dakota season, is responsible.

The non-resident hunting license cost is on a reciprocal basis, with Iowa charging the non-resident applicant the same fee as Iowa hunters are charged in the state of the applicant, with a minimum of $5.00. Under this schedule Kansas hunters are charged $5.00 and, at the other extreme, Wyoming hunters' license costs are $100.

The Iowa pheasant season is open for 25 days in 70 counties, and for 10 days in 13 additional counties.

The non-resident bag and possession limit is the same as for residents, three cock birds. Cost schedule for non-resident licenses may be secured at county recorders' offices or by writing the State Conservation Commission, 914 Grand Avenue, Des Moines.

Democrats Plan Big Day For Next Wednesday

COUNTY DEMOCRATS ARE PUTTING ON LIVELY CAMPAIGN

The Democrats of Hanocock County have a full ticket in the field and are really putting on a big campaign, through personal calls and advertising in the press of the county.

On Wednesday, October 25th they are letting go with both barrels with a big rally starting with a noon luncheon in the basement of St. Boniface Catholic Church at Garner at which time Al Loveland, candidate for U. S. Senator, and Maurice O'Rielly, candidate for Congress 6th District, will speak.

Then in the evening they move to the Community Hall at Duncan when the above men will speak at 8:00 o'clock. This rally will be followed with a free dance at the hall with music by Malek's Accordion Band.

They invite everyone to attend and to come and meet the fine men and women who are candidates for office.

Floyd Friedow & Sons Held Pure Bred Boar Sale Friday Evening

Floyd Friedow & Sons held their annual fall boar sale at their farm 8 miles west f Klemme Friday evening when they sold 40 pure bred Poland China Boars.

The top boar sold at $325 to the Sargent Farms. Last year the same bidder topped all U S. records by buying the top boar for $2,500 at Friedow's sale. The Friedows stated that they were well pleased with the results of the sale Friday evening which grossed over $5,000.

Lyle "Buddy" Wilcox Called For Active Service In Army

Lyle "Buddy" Wilcox, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman has been recalled by the Army for active service and will report for duty at Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri. Lt. Wilcox served in the Engineering Corps during World War II.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox now reside at Cherokee, Iowa, where Mr. Wilcox is a salesman for a feed manufacturer. Mrs. Wilcox will accompany her husband to Ft. Leonard Wood, where he will report for duty Tuesday, October 24th.

Infant Recovering From Major Operation

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schmidt and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kluckhohn drove to Stanhope Sunday to spend the day at the Eugene Kluckhohn home. Little Shiela Kluckhohn was released from the Ames hospital and brought home Friday, following a major operation. The little girl was only about 3 weeks old when she underwent a serious operation from which she is now making a wonderful recovery. Shiela is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kluckhohn.

Flew To Wyanet, Illinois To Attend Pure Bred Hog Sale

Ray Jorgensan, Jr. took Milton Friedow, of Kanawha, to Wyanet, Illinois last Thursday to attend a pure bred Poland China boar sale. The men made the trip in Jorgenson's air plane, and with a good tail wind made the trip in 1½ hours.

Milton purchased the No. 1 Boar, Fashion Plate 65781, sired by Dynaflo out of Model Lass. They returned home the same evening.

SOFT CORN WILL MAKE GOOD FEED

Making It Into Silage Good Way To Store It

Farmers who have soft corn this fall will still have good feed, according to Iowa State College extension livestock specialist, but they will have a storage problem.

Most soft corn makes good feed, says Rex Beresford, extension livestock marketing specialist. On a pound-for-pound dry matter basis, it equals mature corn in feeding value.

Starting soft corn is a problem because it will spoil in warm weather. This means that it must either be put into a silo, fed out of the crib before warm weather comes in the spring, or artificially dried. Not many farmers have drying facilities, so it's usually a choice between ensiling or feeding before spring.

Either method offers good feed, but there are points to remember when handling corn this way.

Put In Silo Soon

Soft corn that's caught by a killing frost should be put in the silo right after the first frost. The sooner after frost that corn is cut, the better silage it will make, Beresford says.

Soft ear corn silage is a good feed for cattle, sheep or hogs. Older cattle have more capacity than young feeders so they can handle soft corn better—they consume more dry matter when they take on a fill.

Pigs make efficeint gains on soft ear corn silage, reports E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist. The main thing to remember with feeding new corn to pigs is that the switch-over from old grain to new corn should be gradual. Dry whole or ground oats should be fed along with soft corn to keep pigs from scouring Quaife says.

Some Feeding Problems

Extension sheep specialist C. W. McDonald tells of good results from feeding silage made of soft corn to sheep. But remember that sheep can't handle moldy feed, McDonald warns. He points out that corn silage is used chiefly as a roughage replacement for sheep.

The story is about the same for farmers who crib their soft corn and plan to feed it before the weather warms up in the spring. They will want to remember that there is less starch and more protein in soft corn as compared to mature corn, Feeders should balance their livestock rations accordingly, Beresford says.

Soft ear corn can be fed to fattening lambs, McDonald explains, but more feed will be required than with sound corn.

Farmers who plan to crib their soft corn will do well to leave it out in the field as long as possible, Beresford says. That's the best place to store it because it can dry faster there than when it's piled in a crib.

$1700 CHURN INSTALLED AT THE KLEMME CREAMERY

A new churn drum, costing $1,700 was installed at the Klemme Creamery last week to replace the churn drum that was giving out.

Only the wooden drum part of the churn was replaced, the iron frame work, gears and motor drive being retained.

Manager Kenneth Medin remarked that the entire old churn cost only about half as much as was paid for just the new drum.

With the new drum on the churn, the equipment at the local plant is now in fine condition.

One Quarter Of Century Hunting Pheasant In Iowa

SILVER ANNIVERSARY FOR PHEASANTS

By James R. Harlan, Assistant Director State Conservation Commission

Just a quarter of a century ago some 75,000 licensed hunters thrilled to the announcement of the first legal pheasant hunting season in Iowa. For three half-days in 13 counties the ringneck was fair game. Twenty-five years later on November 11, 325,000 licensed hunters may hunt in 83 counties for as long as 25 days.

The first opening day, hunters poured into the open counties and found a fast, tough speedster later called by many game officials the perfect game bird.

During this 25-year period the "Chink" has stood up under relentless gunning pressure, in the face of intensified agriculture, blizzards, predators, and a host of other hazards. He has never lost his ability to fascinate the tyro, charm the cook, or fool the marksman. Even more important, he has steadily extended his range.

This year many believe the total number of ringnecks in Iowa is the greatest in the state's history. Unquestionably greater densities of birds in given localities have often occurred, but never has the ringneck been so firmly established in numbers over so great an area.

A review of the ringneck pheasant is necessary to appreciate this remarkable game bird. Leopold, in his "Game Survey of the North Central States," published in 1931, credits Iowa with the first north central states plantings in 1900.

The 1900 Iowa planting occurred when a thousand birds were liberated at the William Benton game farm at Cedar Falls when the fences blew down in a windstorm. Other private stockings followed shortly after.

Stocking by the state in these early days was primarily through the distribution of pheasant eggs that were sent to interested sports groups and hatched under Bantam hens. Later and continuing to date on a limited basis, plantings of adult birds and young were made in cooperation with many sportsmen's groups.

During the 25 years since the first open season, pheasant numbers have fluctuated greatly. The cause of these fluctuations is not understood, except that they occur in practically all species of wildlife and in certain types of animals are so marked as to become cyclic. In spite of fluctuations, pheasants have now spread from original focal points until they occur in the wild in every county in the state.

In recent years pheasants have increased phenomenally in some of the southern Iowa counties where for many years repeated attempts to establish shootable populations had failed. One reasonable explanation for present day success of the pheasant in these areas is that large acreages of badly eroded crop land have been allowed to go back to grass, one of the ringneck's obsolute necessities.

With a better understanding of the needs of the ringneck, it is probable that in the future, pheasant huning will be legal in every county.

Having lived with the ringneck for half a century, we have by trial and error and through research come to know many things as facts and have discarded many "facts" as fallacies. The most startling fact is that on typical pheasant range, even with modern gunning pressure, this bird cannot be overhunted as long as only cocks are killed.

It has been found that fertile eggs will be produced with a ratio of one rooster to ten hens. In 1949, with the heaviest hunting pressure of all time, cocks were shot down only to a ratio of one to two and three-quarters hens. Simply, this means that three and one-half times as many roosters could be killed in 1949 as were actually bagged. Even when pheasant populations are low, cocks can be killed without damage to next year's crop of birds as long as the ratio does not go below one rooster to ten hens.

There has been a gradual change in pheasant hunting methods in Iowa. During the early days of pheasant hunting, long lines of hunters drove the fields, flushing the birds at the ends of rows. Gang hunting has become less popular and less effective in recent years. Surveys show more and more parties of three or four hunters working over dogs, and limits are found more commonly in possession of hunters using dogs than in the bags of dogless hunters.

The "kill no hens" law is now almost universally understood and observed by our hunters. As a result the "golden eggs" continue to hatch chicks for fall shooting, and the future looks especially bright for the pheasant shooter.

The one ominous cloud on the pheasant hunting horizon is the farmer - sportsman relationship. Although it has become an exception to the rule to tresspass without permission, widespread and increasing "roadside hunting" is a red flag waving in the delicate balance of farmer-sportsman relationship.

Shooting from cars is dangerous and each year several serious accidents occur. The practice is unlawful and each year several hundred fines up to $100 each are assessed by the courts. It is unsporting and brands the "road shooter" as a pot hunter of low degree.

When roadside hunting is outlawed by the hunting fraternity itself, as hen shooting has been, we may look forward to a long succession of 25-year pheasant hunting anniversaries.

And to you, John Ringneck, a 300,000 gun salute. May your harem multiply and your tribe increase.

EXPENSIVE BEEF CATTLE BARNS UNNECESSARY

The cost of expensive beef cattle barns can be greater than the returns that cattlemen get out of them, says Rex Beresford, extension livestock marketing specialist at Iowa State College.

The beef cattle herd can best be taken care of outside through most of the year, he says. It's only in bad winter storms and during spring rains that shelter is really needed. And in those cases low sheds with south openings, straw sheds, or even just a straw stack or good tree windbreak have proved sufficient.

Beresford says that cows often have done better in this type of protection than in expensive barns.

Calving time is the most critical time of the year for shelter. Then it's important to have well-sheltered maternity pens to keep the cows and calves comfortable.

Thornton Women Died Sunday Morning At Mason City Hospital

Mrs. Edna Thada and Mrs. Ed. Thompson spent Saturday night with Miss Nettie Thada, who was seriously ill at a Mason City Hospital. Miss Thada passed away Sunday morning.

Miss Thada, who was a sister of the late Walt Thada of Klemme, had for many years taught in the Thornton Schools. She retired some time ago and was about 77 years old at the time of her death.

Truck Driver's Greeting To Friend Saves His Life

COLUMBUS, OHIO. — Carl Tennant is grateful to a friend who stopped to say hello.

Tennant, a truck driver, had finished loading at a railroad dock and jumped down from the platform to head for his truck cub.

A friend called and waved. Carl stopped and waved back. Just then two moving freight cars jumped a railroad abutment and crashed into the cab, demolishing it.

Acid Soil Fixes Phosphate And Makes Soil Infertile

What makes acid soils infertile? To find an answer to this question, John M. Heslep investigated two types of acid soils in northern California and reported his findings in his dissertation.

Heslep found that one of the main reasons for infertility is the tremendous power of acid soil to fix phosphate. So tightly is phosphate held by the soil that it would require a forbidding amount of fertilizer to satisfy the phosphate needs of the soil and make the element available to plants.

Using Romain lettuce as test plants, the investigations disproved two theories of what causes infertility in acid soils; manganese toxicity while present in acid soils is not responsible for the slow plant growth, and neither is lack of calcium. Calcium applications in the form of lime do neutralize the acid in soil and produce good growth, but infertility apparently is caused by soil acidity rather than by lack of calcium.

Heslep's work was the first study of infertility in acid soils in California. It was limited to two types of soil, and it remains to be seen whether his findings also apply to the several hundred other kinds of acid soils in the state.

Pocket Radiation Indicator Developed for Average Man

An accurate pocket-size radiation indicator, so simple that the man on the street can learn to read it after a few minutes instruction, has been developed at the atomic energy project on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

The device was developed by Dr. George V. Taplin and Clayton Douglas of the U.C.L.A. medical school's atomic energy medical research staff.

It measures radioactivity by a color change of chemical solutions in small vials. The chemicals are inexpensive, and it is estimated that the instrument could be produced on a large scale very cheaply.

The vials fit into a compact case about the size of a pack of paper matches, which could be worn around the neck like G.I. dog tags. They also could be adapted to a pencil-like container for the pocket.

The new radiation indicator was specifically designed to measure large doses of gamma and X-rays immediately after an atomic blast.

It also lends itself to the development of important peacetime applications, says Dr. Taplin. For example, it could be useful in the calibration of such radiation equipment as fluoroscopes and X-ray machines. It might be used to measure radiation from radio iodine absorbed by the thyroid gland in treatment of hyperthyroidism.

High School Students

High school students who earn the best grades follow specific study procedures, a northwestern university professor discovered in analyzing the study habits of more than 1000 secondary school pupils. Dr. William G. Brink, a professor in Northwestern's school of education, made the study to provide data for high schools considering changes in curricula to produce higher scholastic achievement. As the result of his investigations, Dr. Brink recommends that "guidance in the improvement of study habits should be integrated with instructional activities." The study habits of students in the upper fourth of their classes followed similar patterns, the educator found.

Bear Adopts 'New Look'; Carries a Traveling Bag

AUGUSTA, ME.—The "new look" for bears this season includes a traveling bag.

Game Warden Charles Harmon of Aroostook county reported to the state fish and game office here that he chased a black bear that was carrying such a bag.

"I didn't get close enough to shoot the bear," he said, "but I scared it so that it dropped the bag in flight."

Foresee Billion Barrels Jet Fuel from Oil Shale

Jet engine fuel by the billions of barrels can be produced from the Green river oil shale formation in northwestern Colorado, Dr. J. D. Lankford, acting chief, of the United States bureau of mines oil-shale demonstration plant in Rifle, Colo., reports.

Low cost oil shale mining already has been found feasible, Dr. Lankford says, and he predicts that the present trickle of 100 to 300 barrels of gasoline and Diesel fuel from the formation will become a mighty torrent as techniques improve.

"It is estimated that 88 volume per cent of the crude shale oil could be converted into a hydrogenated product containing a premium Diesel oil and a high-quality jet fuel practically free of sulfur, oxygen and nitrogen compounds," Dr. Lankford stated. 'If desired, the hyrdogenated material could be converted easily to gasoline by standard petroleum refining processes.

"The United States bureau of mines oil-shale demonstration plant at Rifle, Colo., is engaged in an integrated research and experimental program to point the way toward the development of a tremendous natural resource, oil shale, for possible wartime emergency and for the ultimate peacetime production of liquid fuels by private industry.

"Billions of barrels of liquid fuels are potentially available from the oil shale of the Green river formation of northwestern Colorado. Research and development work will be necessary over an extended period of time to bring this great natural resource to the stage where utilization will be possible."

Teen-Age Workers Injured More Often in Work Mishaps

Teen-age drivers have come in for their share of criticism, but how about teen-age workers?

The U. S. department of labor found that workers under 18 years of age are injured more frequently in industrial accidents in manufacturing plants than are workers 18 years of age or older, performing the same type of work.

Workers 18 or older had an average injury frequency rate of 15.7 (disabling injuries per 1,000,000 man-hours worked). But the rate for the younger workers was 22.9.

The frequency of permanently disabling, injuries such as finger amputations, was nearly twice as high for workers under 18 as for the older group.

The council says that the same characteristics of youth which gave teen-agers a higher traffic accident rate apparently apply also to work habits—lack of experience, impulsiveness, daring, and the desire to show off.

Figure Slimmers

How you do your housework may make a great deal of difference in whether you keep the waistline down, according to William Shaw of Chicago. He suggests these techniques. When you pick up the children's toys, Sunday's newspapers, or the snippings of cloth in your sewing room—bend squarely from the waist with legs stiff and straight. Occasionally, squat with back vertical and head held erect. Keep the posture erect when you go up and down stairs. And when you use the vacuum cleaner on draperies and walls, give your midsection a good stretch. Move arms freely and easily and clear into the shoulders.

Growing in Prayer

LIFE MAGAZINE, which does not set up as an authority on religion some years ago carried a story about a litte girl who was going to be confirmed in the Episcopal church. In describing the requirements for confirmation, the reporter said she had "graduated from 'Now I Lay Me' to the Lord's Prayer."

Most Christian ministers, including those of the denomination in which she was confirmed, would agree that (1) if that is as far as she had "graduated," she still had a very long way to go in learning about prayer, but (2) the little girl had got about as far as thousands of "Christians" ever go. They learn the Lord's Prayer when they are children and that's that. When they grow up they don't actually pray, themselves; they leave it up to Grandma or the preacher—or the tiny tots who "sound so cute" saying "Now I Lay Me."

* * *

The Lord's Prayer

THIS is not meant to say anything against the Lord's Prayer, or to imply that we are wrong every time we use it. But our Lord did not mean that prayer to be used as a magic formula, he did not intend it as a substitute for our own free prayers. We know this is so, because in the first place he himself never used that prayer again, and in the second place, although dozens of prayers by Apostles and others are recorded in the New Testament, the Lord's Prayer, as such, is never used. Then what is the Lord's Prayer?

It is his suggestion as to the lines along which, and the spirit in which, we ought to pray. (See the book by William Douglas Chamberlain on the Lord's Prayer, "The Manner of Prayer."

One truth suggested by the Lord's Prayer is that we are not alone in the world. Every verb, every pronoun referring to the one who prays, is in the plural—OUR Father . . . forgive US . . . lead US . . . We have to remember that God is Father of others, not of ourselves alone; that we dare not be selfish in asking special favors of him for ourselves.

* * *

Maturing in Prayer

PRAYER at its lowest level is nothing much more than "Gimme." The untaught pray-er may even talk to God as if he were a personal servant, a kind of celestial bell-boy on call whenever we ring for him.

The growing Christian will grow in prayer as in all things; he will grow to the point where, even when he prays as an individual, he will be remembering how many ties bind him to other individuals; he will pray less and less for his own necessities and more and more for what he may share with others.

The beginning Christian, the childish Christian, will pray as a child prays. If his prayers were all arrows they would all point toward himself. As for the mature Christian, if his prayers were visible arrows they could be seen pointing into all the world; he will have those in every land for whom he prays, for his heart bears their names in love and faith.

* * *

Learning God's Will

A GOOD deal of worrisome argument has gone on over the question: Can prayer change the will of God? We shall be less bothered by that question when we discover two truths.

One is that in the Lord's Prayer, and in the Bible generally, we have already revealed to us the lines along which God's will moves; and the other is that prayer itself is a means of learning God's will.

If we know that God's will is against something, then, if we have any sense, we know there is no use in praying for that thing. If we know God's will desires something, then we can be confident that our prayers in that direction will be heard with favor.

A study of the Lord's prayer, from this angle, will teach a Christian how to pray in accordance with God's will. Paul knew this. When he prayed that his Philippian friends' "love may abound more and more," he knew very well that this was precisely in line with the will of the Father who is eternal Love.

NATIONAL BIBLE WEEK

Laymen's Group Plans Week Of Bible Study and Meditation

Next week, October 16-22, millions of Americans of all faiths and creeds will observe National Bible Week.

People of every age and in all walks of life; factory workers and farmers, business and professional men and women, and housewives—the solid folk who are the backbone of America, will be encouraged by proclamations and prepared statements from their governors and mayors to make the week a major activity in their communities, one in which they can be well informed concerning the scriptures.

The Laymen's National Committee as sponsors of National Bible Week also asks everyone to make it an occasion for special prayer, a period to collect our thoughts, to marshal our hopes and to plant in our hearts a strong belief in our American way of life.

The laymen's committee, which originated National Bible Week ten years ago, is a non-sectarian, non-profit organization, composed of civic-minded citizens of all faiths, business executives and labor leaders. Rear Admiral Reginald R. Belknap, USN (retired) is honorary chairman. Dr. Alfred P. Haake, noted economist, business consultant, and civic administrator is chairman. Howard Kirock, LL.D., is executive vice-chairman.

Observance Grows

The committee said in a statement announcing the week:

"Ever since the start of National Bible Week each succeeding year produces more and more evidence of people being influenced to turn to the Bible for spiritual comfort and guidance. It is a potent antidote to the anti-God propaganda being put out today.

"The Communists won't like the observance of National Bible Week, but they can rest assured it will be the greatest observance in its history. Every community will encourage and promote it in every way.

"In the years of our forebears, the bible was a pillar of strength to them as they struggled to meet the adversities which beset a young nation. In the present period of immense sorrow and suffering and pain, the Bible is still a pillar of strength in preserving the moral values upon which America was founded.

A Desire for Good

"Make no mistake about it, We are at the crossroads of civilization. We must subdue the stupid pagans who are trying to eliminate God from the face of the earth. Millions of persons in our country, of all faiths, who have a determination to further the common good of all, will be reading the bible during the week of October 16-22.

"People all over America are beginning to realize more and more the importance of National Bible Week. They are showing a devoted and continuing solicitude for its teachings. They are exerting a tremendous influence for good. They are very much concerned for the future welfare of all men.

"Veteran groups, labor unions, fraternal organizations, women's clubs, youth movements, chambers of commerce and other organizations are asked for personal participation, and to concentrate on the one objective—National Bible Week. Many of them have already started the ball rolling in their communities. They are motivated by a desire for good and are hastening the day when peace will come to all mankind."

State Tax Burden Sets New Record Of $60.72 a Person

The state tax burden for the fiscal year 1949-50 reached a record average of $60.72 per capita in the 48 states, according to a report just issued by Commerce Clearing House of Chicago in its state tax review. This averages $3.21 more per individual than was collected in 1948-49.

The report shows extreme variations in per capita collections by states. Washington was highest with $97.76, Louisiana followed with $96.22, and California collected $91.41. New Jersey had the lowest with $39.23. Four southern states ranked next; Georgia collected $41.16, Kentucky and Alabama $42.80 and Mississippi $43.81.

Eleven states were in the middle classification: Massachusetts $63.57, South Dakota $63.27, Wisconsin $62.06, Iowa $60.48, Maryland $59.48, Vermont $59.09, West Virginia $58.75, Idaho $58.58, Connecticut $58.55 and North Carolina $58.53.

Total Revenue Increases

Five states reported startling increases: Delaware 58.7 per cent, South Dakota 26.2 per cent, Florida 25.9 per cent and New York 22.3 per cent, while Nebraska, which the previous year had shared the low mark in collections with New Jersey, raised its collection by 23.1 per cent.

The per capita tax load was raised by $10 or more in Kansas and Oklahoma and was hiked by $5 or more in ten other states.

Eight states lowered their levies. West Virginia cut its per capita tax revenue by 3 per cent, South Carolina 2.6 per cent, Pennsylvania 2.2 per cent and Mississippi 1.9 per cent. Illinois and New Jersey reduced by 0.9 per cent, North Carolina by 0.6 per cent.

Total state tax revenues reached nearly $9 billion for the year, the report said. This was 7.4 per cent more than the previous year's total, another record year, and set a new record of continued and uninterrupted climb for 17 years.

The report based on U.S bureau of census figures, shows the states collected $4,687 million, or 52.3 per cent of this revenue from general and selective sales and gross receipts taxes.

Beverage Tax Declines

Consistent consumer demand, rising prices and a high level of spending is credited for raising the general sales and gross receipts tax by 7.4 per cent or $322 million.

The only specific taxes to show a decline for the year were alcoholic beverage sales, off 1 per cent, and death and gift taxes, off 3.4 per cent.

ABSOLUTE PROOF HADACOL HELPS FOLKS SUFFERING STOMACH DISTURBANCES
when due to lack of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin in the system!

Mrs. John W. Geary, attractive and charming woman of 840 Ursuline Street, New Orleans, Louisiana: "I'd been sick quite some time and the doctors told me it was a nervous stomach. I couldn't eat regularly and lots of times I was unable to hold the food on my stomach. Then I heard about HADACOL. After the first few bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now my stomach doesn't trouble me at all. I eat anything I want, and my nerves are fine." (Give HADACOL a chance to help you.)

Mrs. Hilton Shuff, a loving mother of Route 1, Box 42, Ville Platte, Louisiana: "My son Mark Wendell has been sick for some time. A lot of the time he couldn't hold anything on his stomach. He was very weak and pale. Then I started giving him HADACOL, and he improved in just a short time. He's gained weight and has more energy than a dozen wild Indians." (HADACOL is great for puny, nervous kiddies with easily upset stomachs due to lack of important Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin.

Mrs. Alma Kincaid, 2125 E. Adelaide, St. Louis, Missouri: "I've been taking HADACOL for over a year. Before taking it, I had stomach distress for some time. Nothing seemed to help me. Then I took my husband's advice and took HADACOL. A good friend of his told him of the wonderful results he had from HADACOL. Now that I'm taking HADACOL I eat anything. I recommend HADACOL to all my friends." (A big improvement is often noticed within a few days.)

WHY CONTINUE TO DOUBT

These are just a few of thousands upon thousands of letters that constantly pour in telling of the wonderful results the great new HADACOL is giving. It's only a very foolish person who would continue to 'doubt' HADACOL'S effectiveness and continue to suffer in view of such overwhelming evidence.

Relieves the Cause of Stomach Distress Due to Such Deficiencies

So if you are suffering from stomach disturbance (gas pains, indigestion, heartburn), if the food you eat disagrees with you because your system is lacking Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin—don't delay—start taking HADACOL today. HADACOL is not a quick-acting antiacid which gives symptomatic relief—instead, HADACOL actually relieves the REAL CAUSE of such stomach misery due to such deficiencies. And continued use helps prevent such painful distress from coming back.

Hundreds of Doctors Recommend It

Hundreds upon hundreds of doctors recommend HADACOL. It not only supplies weak, deficient systems with extra quantities of important Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of precious Calcium, Phosphorus and Manganese—elements so vital to help maintain glorious health and guard against such deficiency ailments. And so inexpensive. Costs only a small amount a day. Trial-size bottle, $1.25. Large family or hospital size, $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

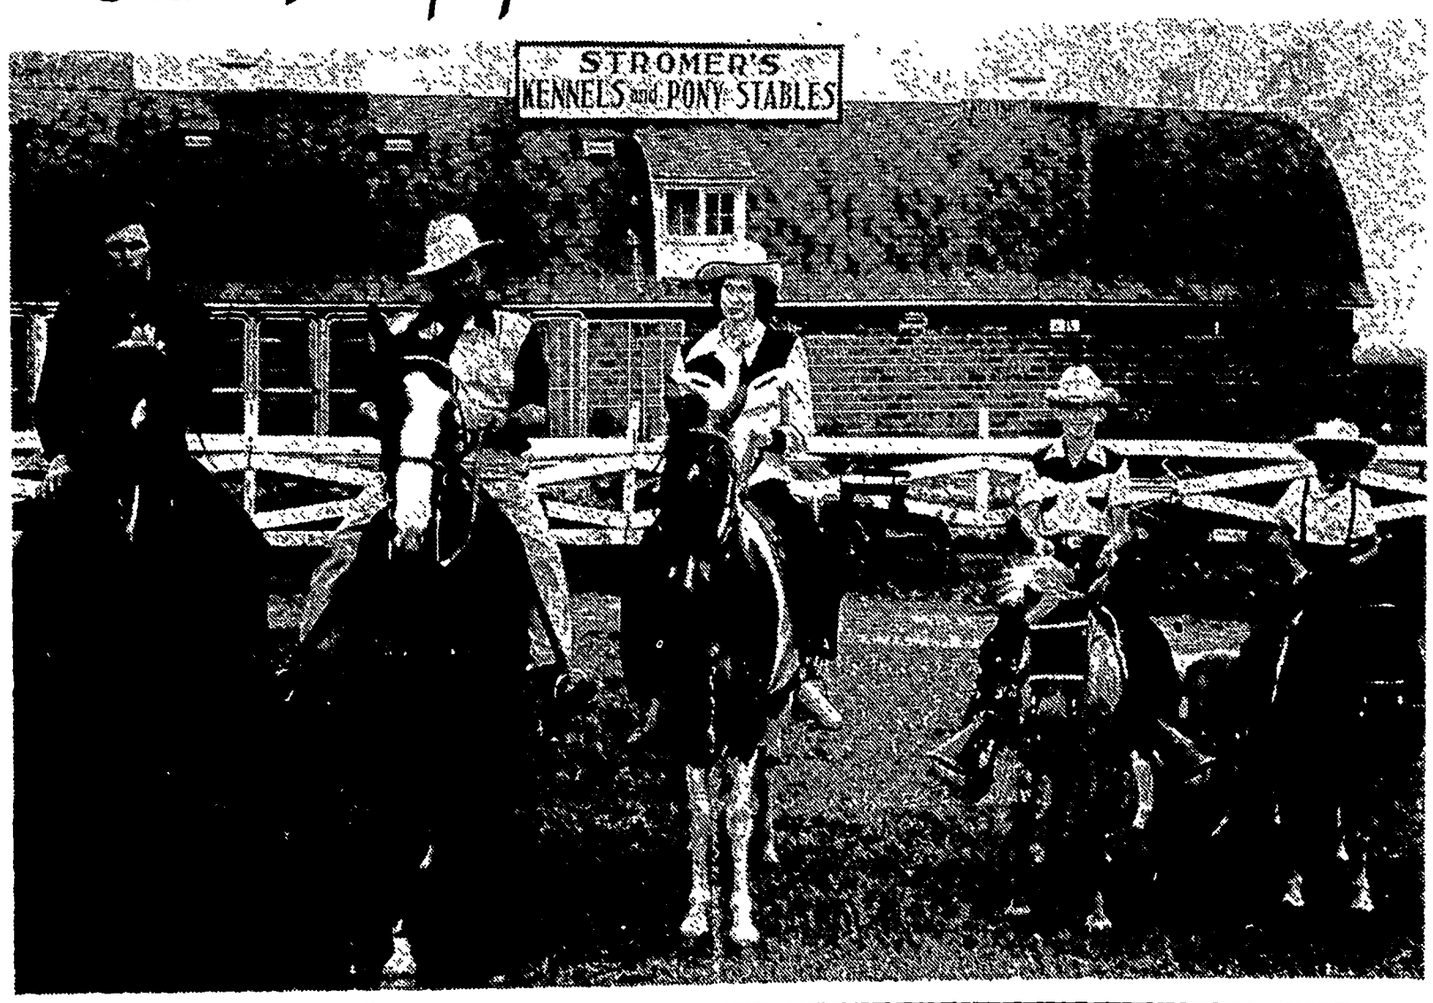
Entire Family Goes On Saddle Club Trail Rides



The following story is the 3rd of a series on the Stromer Kennels and Pony Stables. The story and pictures are through the courtesy of the Mason City Globe Gazette.

When the Garner Saddle Club goes on a trail ride, the Stromer family can be counted on for 5 riders. Stromer helped organize the club two years ago, and he is president of the organization now. Membership in the saddle club has grown to 140, and the Stromer family looks forward to the frequent trail rides and picnics.

Currently, Stromer is busy with plans for the horse show which will be held in Garner, Garner businessmen in sponsorship of the event.

Afternoon and evening performances are planned for the horse show, and a total of 22 Sept. 17. The Garner Saddle Club is co-operating with the classes are planned. Pleasure horse classes, stock horse classes, harness pony classes, a Tennessee walking horse class and several features such as obstacle and "Guess What" races will be on the program.

Stromer enjoys work in community activities which enable him to get away from the farm and make new acquaintances. He plays a tenor saxophone in the Garner Old Time band. And his father, H. R. Stromer of Garner, plays a trumpet in the band.

The Klemme farmer and his wife are members of the Midwest Shetland and Harness Show Pony association. They belong to the Farm Bureau. And the family attend the Peace Reformed Church just north of their farm.

Mrs. Stromer is a member of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the church. And she has held the offices of township chairman and district leader in the rural women's organization.

Progress Toward Peace— THEIR STITCHES WELD A WORLD

Iowa's homemakers are joining with women the nation over to make United Nations flags. The flags will be displayed in their home communities on United Nations Day, October 24th.

Throughout Iowa these days you will find homemakers of the state gathered together for sewing bees "Betsy Ross style. They are gathered to make a symbol of a united world—the United Nations flag.

"No program has quite so captivated the hearts and imaginations of women of the nation," said Louise Rosenfeld, assistant director of home economics extension work in Iowa. "We have already had numerous requests from women's clubs, League of Women Voters, homemakers' groups, church groups and many others to know what they can do in the flag-making program."

The impetus of the program is growing by leaps and bounds, for United Nations Day—October 24— is not far off, and women of Iowa want to see the blue and white banner of justice and peace fly in unison with the red, white and blue of Old Glory. There will be many other occasions, also, when the flags will be on display.

Ordering Kits

Kits for making the flags, with complete directions, are available from the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, 59 East Van Buren St., Chicago 5, Ill. The cost of a complete kit is $2.25 postpaid. A small kit, which does not include the blue cloth for background of the flag costs only 50 cents postpaid. If women buy the small kit, they can obtain the blue fabric (1 seven-eighths) at local stores. Blue indianhead, which has been recommended, is available in most yard goods sections, clothing specialists of Iowa State College indicate.

Plans for making the flags are sponsored by the National Citizens' Committee for the U N Day. The Extension Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has endorsed the program as have many other farm, industrial, educational, religious and other groups throughout the land.

The design for the United Nations flag is a sky-view of the world. It is encircled by two olive branches, and it's intended to embody the hope of people of our time for a world at peace.

How To Display

When the flag is ready for display, there's the question of how to display it. Here's what Miss Rosenfeld has to say about that:

First of all, the flag should be flown with the United States flag. Both should be flown—or displayed—at the same height. They should be about equal in size. But the red, white and blue banner of the United States is displayed to the right of the United Nation flag— to the right of a speaker on a rostrum or to the right of a markers in a parade.

Women of Indiana made the United Nations flags presented to President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson. At the New York fair women visitors to the fair took turns adding a stitch to the flag which will hang permanently in the building housing home economics exhibits there. And, in many states, women are busy preparing the flags which will soon become familiar to all as the symbol of nations united for peace.

HIGH-RANGE EWES HAVE ADVANTAGE OVER OTHERS

Farmers planning to buy breeding ewes this fall are reminded by Eugene Francis, extension sheep marketing specialist at Iowa State College, that ewes from the higher range areas are usually larger and have fewer internal parasites than those from lower altitudes.

He refers to high-range ewes as those of the Washington-Montana-Utah type.

Older lots of ewes with mixed solid and broken moths are costing around $18 to $22 per head. The 1 and 2-year olds run up between $30 and 32, Francis says. Ewe lambs have been bringing from $28 to $30 per hundredweight.

He suggests that the average farmer buy through the central markets or a reliable dealer. Buyers who are experienced enough so they can skillfully check mouths and udders on ewes may get by successfully by making their own purchases.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE HANCOCK COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

3RD ADJOURNED SEPTEMBER MEETING

Garner Iowa
October 2 1950

The Hancock County Iowa Board of Supervisors met in session on above mentioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird and F J Schoun present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

On motion and second the following quarterly reports are hereby approved

Fern Katter County Recorder.

Maynard Schoneman, County Auditor and Ruth Hughes, Clerk of District Court.

Supervisor Daniels is hereby appointed a committee to investigate and cause repairs to be made on D D No 151. Main

On motion and second proposals S-555 (1) S-511 2 and SN-...41 are hereby approved subject to approval of the Iowa State Highway Commission.

On motion and second the gravel pit lease between Hancock County Iowa by its Board of Supervisors and Clarence of Forest City Iowa for a term of 1 years from and after October 1950 at the agreed rental of $.1561 00 for the 1st year period and ...ensuing ... 1 acres being located in the NE¼ of ... Section 22 ...-22 Hancock County Iowa is hereby approved and F J Schoun Chairman of the Board is hereby authorized to execute a contract for ... said gravel pit lease.

This being the 2nd day of October 1950 a date heretofore fixed for a hearing on the proposed construction of D D No ... & Extension of D. D No 3 & 4 petitioned for by the Town of Garner Iowa by its Mayor C. E. Barnes, et al the Board having met at the hour fixed for said hearing having considered the report of the Engineer recommending the establishment, the proof of publication being on file and the Board being fully advised, said hearing was held as scheduled.

The petition, report of the Engineer and objections were read by the County Auditor and objectors and proponents were given an opportunity to discuss the necessity and feasibility of the establishment of the drainage district and objections thereto, petitioned for by the Town of Garner Iowa by its Mayor C. E. Barnes, et al as recommended in the report of the Engineer with an amendment to the petition and report recommending the addition of 5 intakes. All matters were duly considered by the Board and after such consideration it was deemed conducive to public health, welfare and convenience and the benefits to be derived will be greater than the cost thereof and that said construction of D D No 155 be established.

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa acting for and in behalf of D. D. No. 155, petitioned for by The Town of Garner, Iowa, by its Mayor C E Barnes, et al, which district is to be constructed through lands listed in the Engineer's report, be and the same is hereby established. On motion by Supervisor Daniels and second by Supervisor Bird that the proposed construction of D. D. No. 155 be established in accordance with the recommendation of the Engineer and the report and plans on file, all in accordance with section 455.25 Code of Iowa 1950 and the hour of 1:30 P M. on the 25rd day of October 1950 at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa is hereby fixed as a time and place for the letting of the construction thereof.

The County Auditor be and he is directed to cause notice of such letting to be published in the Garner Leader and Signal a newspaper of general circulation published at Garner, Iowa, which notice shall request bids on labor and material for the construction of said drainage improvement, the time of commencement and completion, the approximate amount and kind of work to be done, that the Board reserves the right to waive technicalities and to reject any or all bids, all in accordance with Chapter 455 Code of Iowa 1950.

SWEETCLOVER, BROME SEED WILL COST LESS

There will be more sweetclover and bromegrass seed on the market during the coming year according to seed crop increases reported throughout the state of Iowa and the large seed-producing states.

Iowa farmers who want to buy sweetclover or brome seed for pasture or green manure crop seedings may find it at reduced prices compared with a year ago. The nation's 1950 sweetclover seed crop acreage is 38 percent larger than last year's crop—54 percent larger than the 10-year average.

It's the same story with the bromegrass seed acreage this year, says Ed Dyas, extension agronomist at Iowa State College. He reports that USDA estimates for bromegrass seed production this year run three times more than a year ago and 2½ times the 5-year average.

About twice the normal Iowa legume acreage has been certified in 1950 at Iowa State College. This would indicate that there will be more seed for the farmers who need it for pasture or green manure crops.

Dyas says that sweetclover has shown up remarkably well as a green manure crop, and he thinks more of it should be plowed under in Iowa. Sweetclover and bromegrass are both recommended by college agronomists as good for pasture mixtures.

GET CORN OUT OF BEANS BEFORE HARVESTING

Iowa soybean growers may be in for some trouble when they market their beans this year, unless they do something with the volunteer corn in their fields before harvest.

Corn isn't considered to be Iowa's No. 1 crop when it's mixed with soybeans—it is classed as foreign material. Only 3 percent foreign material can be present in beans that grade No. 2, which is the common grade for most Iowa soybeans. If there is more than 6 percent foreign material, the quality drops down to sample grade which means a big decrease in price.

Corn is difficult to remove after the beans are harvested, says C. R. Weber of the USDA, who is in charge of soybean breeding at Iowa State College. It's too late to do anything about it then.

Weber says some farm families are going through their soybean fields with corn knives. That's a sure way of getting rid of the corn—probably the only way.

Volunteer corn is causing more trouble this year because of the severe wind storm of Oct. 10, 1949, coupled with extensive corn borer damage, Weber reports.

Kindergarten News

Darlene Lund is our new girl in Kindergarten. She came to this school this six weeks.

Mark Hueneman had his 6th birthday on Thursday. The children enjoyed his lovely gift.

The boys and girls have been bringing some of their records to school. We have enjoyed listening to all of the records. The boys and girls have learned many new songs this way.

—Miss Dobson

First Grade News

We have been making ghosts in art. The bodies are made of sticks, cotton for heads and covered with white cloth.

Billy Renner and Terry Lassahn brought back their dental cards this week.

Dick Green, Sandra and Jerry Murray have been absent this week because of illness.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

The new president of our Friday morning "Better Citizens Club" is Sharon Bachman, replacing Daryl Schlei, who was president the first six weeks. Besides discussing ways of being better citizens at our meetings, we read, learn and illustrate poems.

Many of the boys and girls have been bringing seeds this week, which we are classifying according to the way they travel, and are mounting them for display.

JoAnne Trampel brought back her dental card this week and Billy Heginger treated the class in honor of his birthday.

—Miss Brones

Third Grade News

The Halloween spirit has hit most of our third graders. Their interests now are centered mostly on witches, ghosts, gobblins etc. Our room is starting to be quite decorative with Halloween pictures the children have made.

In Geography class the children are starting to get acquainted with the map of the United States. The children each have a large outline map of the U. S. As they study each state and learn of the different characteristics they cut out individual states which are n puzzle form, and paste it on the large map.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

We are making geography notebooks which we are naming "Our World." Each one of us is making one and our first story is going to be about Norway.

Monday we are going to set up a miniature farm made of cardboard boxes. We hope it looks much nicer on the floor. than it does on the library table.

—Miss Franken

Seventh Grade News

Our little world series ended this week, it proved to be that sides were somewhat uneven. Starting next week there will be a short series of each grade competing for championship. There has been fine sportsmanship shown throughout the series.

We were happy to see the Jr. Class play this past week. We all think it was a good play and wish to compliment Mrs. Andreae on the success.

Top honors in spelling went to five girls this week. They had perfect papers. We are again remodeling our class room by many new pictures and poster displays.

Our attendance in school has almost been excellent. There are 14 students who have had perfect attendance. There are 14 students who hae had perperfect attendance. We are hoping the winter months will not change our attendance record.

—Mr. Beenken

Eighth Grade News

Last week we began our Little World Series softball games. Captains were chosen from the 8th grade and sides were chosen from the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grade rooms. Each captain chose a name for his team and are listed below with the results of the games played.

AROUND IOWA

Big Ones

When the conservation commission seined North Twin Lake recently, about 7,000 pounds of "rough fish" were removed. The lake contained quite a few northern pike the largest tipping the scales at 15 pounds.

Smoke Caused Death

A grass-fire caused one death on Iowa highways recently Mrs. Gerrit Koster was killed when the car driven by her husband ran into the rear of another vehicle. Swirling smoke obscured the driver's view.

Unhurt

Little Mary Lou Matney, 2, of Albia is a tough kid. She ran into the path of an automobile and two wheels passed over her stomach. There was no broken bones and she was up for breakfast as usual the next day.

Escaped Injury

Not all auto accidents have a tragic ending. Three Humbolt persons escaped death recently when their car careened into a bridge and plunged into six feet of water, landing right side up. The occupants, Morris Sorenson of Dakota City and Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Mattoon of Humbolt, crawled out without serious injury.

Feat

When a construction company desired to remove the "roof" of a filling station at LeMars to a new location, workmen drove a truck under the roof with the tires "soft," then built up the bed of the truck with wooden blocks. When they inflated the tires, the truck lifted the roof from its foundation and it was transported to the new location.

Stranded On An Island

Four New Hampton business men are back home from a trip to Canada. At one time, heavy storms made it impossible for them to get back across the lake to their camp and they were standed two days on an island.

Pile-Up Near Tripoli

Four cars figured in a freak pile-up near Tripoli recently. A car driven by Erwin Volker was turning off the highway and was struck by a following car, driven by Art Weihe. A third car, driven by Melvin Lampe of Frederika piled into the first two. As the 3 drivers were talking it over, around the bend came a car driven by Louis Pried of Waverly. His aim was true, hitting the Lampe car dead-center.

Tallest Corn

In a contest by Denison merchants, Leo McWeeney won the prize for the tallest corn, with a stalk of 14 feet, 2½ inches.

Unexpected Ride

A hen turkey got an unexpected aerial ride near Griswold recently. Mrs. Lyle Samuels saw the turkey dropped by a large horned owl near her home. Investigation revealed it had been picked up on the Roy Baker farm, over a mile distant. The turkey was injured only slightly.

County Line

When Wilford Blomgren of Ottumwa died in an auto crash recently, tire marks showed that his car went out of control in Tama county and he crashed to his death in Poweshiek county. The tragedy occured at the county line.

FEED PIGS DRY OATS ALONG WITH NEW CORN

With the new corn crop about ready to move into Iowa hog-lots, a word of warning is passed to feeders by E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College.

Start pigs easy on new corn, he says. They need some dry oats along with it to hold back scouring. Soft corn is especially bad for scouring, so the swine specialist urges farmers to watch their step when changing over to the new crop.

While scours in pigs may not result in any serious disease, loss of weight and unthriftiness will show up until the trouble is remedied.

Cranberry bogs are regularly flooded as a control for certain injurious insects.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Ever see a man rip off his own fingers? Or tear off his own hand? If the picture above were a movie instead of a still shot you might see just that! This man is disregarding everything that the manufacturer warns against in the use of a corn-picker.

Maybe an ear of corn got jammed in there or a couple of stalks got twisted around a moving part. Anyway the corn-picker is plugged up. The manufacturer says to stop the rolls before cleaning out the machine, but this man is in a hurry. So he leaves the rolls running while he starts cleaning out the machine with his hands.

If a corn-picker can twist off one ear of corn after another, and husk them too, surely a couple of fingers or a human hand won't be too much for it to handle!

There were 434 corn picker accidents reported on Iowa farms in 1948; about 261 last year. This year remember the urgent plea of the Iowa Safety Congress: "Be alert - Don't get hurt! Stop the rolls to clean out your corn-picker."

It's a wonderful machine, the corn picker, like all modern farm machinery. It'll make your work cleaner, faster, more profitable and safer, too, if you'll do your part.

REMEMBER: Stop the rolls to clean out your corn-picker-

COUNTY EXTENSION PROGRAM ADOPTED

Hancock County's 1951 extension program of work makes full provision for adjustments that may be required by the tense international situation. At the same time it continues to provide for the normal requirements of an educational program for the county, according to Paul Henderson, county extension director.

As adopted by the county Farm Bureau board of directors, the program stresses activities for all members of the family. In addition to educational work relating to youth, homemaking and agricultural production provision is made for considerable attention to problems of public policy. The entire program of work is so planned that the various projects will be developed with the special interests of the entire family in mind. Recognizing that work with youth is one of the most important assignments of the extension educational program, the 1951 program of work provides for further strengthening of this phase of the work. During the past year Hancock County had 30 organized boy' and girls' 4-H clubs with an enrollment of 500 members. During the next year it is planned to increase the membership to 538 members.

To meet the demands of young men and women above the 4-H club age for an organization that meets their education, social and service needs the program provides for further strengthening of the assistance now being given to the 1951 extension program of work Hancock County Young People's group.

Major activities in the agricultural program include the continuation of the soils and fertilizer meetings, soil conservation, livestock disease control, weed and pest control, storage of grain, windbreak and orchard demonstrations, dairy and beef cattle feeding and marketing and distribution of products.

In the family living field work to be undertaken will include leader training lessons relating to foods, household equipment, home furnishings and clothing.

Action to determine the program started several months ago when the county extension program planning committee met to determine what needs of county were and how they best could be dealt with through an educational program. Special committees were used to deal with some problems and the recommendations of these committees were studied by the program committee before it made its recommendations to the county Farm Bureau board.

Members of the county extension program committee are: Mrs. Harold Oxley, Mrs. Elmer Jante, Mrs. W. F. Dorow, Mrs. Leo Jass, Mrs. Harry Ostendorf, Clarence Bird, Clarence Chizek, Arthur Mulholland and Harold Kahlstorf. This is a rotating committee, Henderson said. 3 members each year and no member may be reappointed until 1 year has lapsed following his retirement.

The Federal Farm program, school re-organization, taxes, and other subjects of great interest to the people of Hancock County are likely topics of discussion which will come up at the Annual meeting of the County Farm Bureau. The meeting will be held Oct. 26, 8 p. m. at the Duncan Hall.

Gilbert Guenther, the County Farm Bureau President, this week issued an invitation to all Farm Bureau members in the county to attend the meeting.

"This will be the most important meeting of the year," President Guenther said. "This meeting will give all Farm Bureau members an opportunity to express themselves concerning Farm Bureau policy," he said.

Main speaker of the evening will be E. Howard Hill, Minburn, Iowa, president of Iowa State Farm Bureau Federation.

Other bnsiness of the meeting include the election of county Farm Bureau officers for the coming year. It is expected that 500 persons will attend the meeting.

TURN PIGS IN TO PICK SOFT CORN

Those 75 To 200 Pounds Are Best Size To Use

Many farmers are putting their hogs to work harvesting their soft corn this fall. E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College, says this is one of the best ways to get at least a part of the crop out of the way.

Hogs weighing from 75 to 200 pounds are best for hogging-down corn. Pigs that are smaller will need help in breaking the stalks down, and heavier ones will do better if they're more closely confined and are not forced to rustle for their feed.

Self-Feed Oats

A hundred shoats weighing 75 to 100 pounds each will clean up in a week an acre of corn that'll yield 60 bushels. After hogs reach the heavier weights, Quaife suggests using lighter hogs or brood sows to clean up the fields.

If soft corn is being hogged-down, Quaife advises self-feeding oats along with the corn. This will reduce the tendency of pigs to scour.

Young pigs should receive a full protein feeding while they are in the cornfield. Heavier hogs can be hand fed to cut down on consumption of the supplement.

Need Shelter

One of the main hazards of hogging-down corn is the possibility of exposure which can lead to flu. Hogs caught out in the rain may catch cold if they don't have dry, comfortable quarters to go into. Sleeping in drafts and poorly bedded quarters also subjects the hogs to disease.

The wine specialist recommends putting up a temporary shelter in the cornfield, if it is more than 80 rods from the permanent hoghouse. If the field is close to the farm buildings, the permanent shelter can be used. The protein and water should also be supplied in the field. This will help boost gains, as the pigs won't have to walk so far to and from their feed.

Lost Two Fingers

Seventeen year old Earl Sande of Humbilt lost the first two fingers of his right hand in a power saw. The youth was employed on a housing project.

Real Fan

Sumner boasts of one of Iowa's olest baseball fans. Jim McMeans, now 86, saw his first baseball game back in 1873 and is still an ardent "fan." When Mr. McMeans saw his first ball game, the rules permitted the batter to call for the type of pitch he wanted, either "high" or "low."

NEW RAT POISON HAS SEVERAL ADVANTAGES

A new rat poison called "warfarin" is now on the market and is expected to help Iowans deal rodents a stiff blow this fall.

Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, says that warfarin has some advantages over the older poisons such as red squill, barium carbonate and antu. However, these standby poisons still have a place in rat control, he says.

Warfarin kills by its action as an anti-cogulant. Victims bleed to death internally. But to do this they have to feed it about five different times, says Gunderson.

So it's necessary to keep bait boxes well filled.

Rodents won't become bait-shy when warfarin is used, since there's no taste or oder to the poison. Rats and mice keep right on eating without suspecting that it is causing death among them. When it's used in a dry bait there's no danger of spoilage or freezing. No pre-baiting is necessary, entomologists say.

Another advantage of warfarin is that it's practically non-poisonous to farm animals. They must consume a series of doses before it will kill them. This is not apt to happen, Gunderson points out, if precautions are taken in placing the bait. Poultry is resistant to warfarin.

In urban areas, Gunderson recommends cornmeal form the grocer as good bait. For farms, he suggests mixing equal amounts of finely ground cornmeal and ground oats. To this mixture add enough 0 5 percent warfarin to make about 5 percent of the total mixture.

Gunderson says that such poisons as arsenic, phosphorus, 10-80 and thallium sulfate are good killers, but they are too dangerous for untrained persons to handle.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Consular Service Consolidated With Diplomatic Branch in 1924

This is the fifth of a series of six articles on the state department and its personnel by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

By WALTER A. SHEAD

Washington, D.C. — Benjamin Franklin was the first member of the foreign service of the United States department of state when in 1776 he was appointed joint commissioner to France and in 1778 minister to France.

At least seven men who later became President served as chiefs of missions abroad. The consular service was launched in 1780 as an adjunct of the diplomatic service, but was not consolidated with it until 1924.

Briefly, the foreign service represents the American people and the American government throughout the world and is the means of carrying out American foreign policy abroad

In the set-up of the functional operation of the state department as now constituted, the foreign service operates directly under the secretary and the under secretary of state. It is broken down into six major departments and these in turn are broken down into 18 small offices. The six main bureaus, all under an assistant secretary of state, include the bureau of German affairs, bureau of United Nations affairs, bureau of European affairs, bureau of inter-American affairs, bureau of near eastern, south Asian and African affairs and the bureau of far eastern affairs.

With the eyes of the world focused today on the Far East and South Asia, these latter two departments are of tremendous importance. The Near East and the south Asian affairs bureau is broken down into the office of Greek, Turkish and Iranian affairs, the office of African and near eastern affairs and the office of south Asian affairs. The bureau of far eastern affairs is broken down into the office of Chinese affairs, the office of northeast Asian affairs and the office of Philippine and southeastern Asian affairs.

Presiding over the near eastern bureau is Assistant Secretary George Crew McGhee of Texas, an Oklahoma university graduate and a Rhodes scholar. Serving as chief of the Far Eastern affairs bureau is Dean Rusk of Georgia, a graduate of several American colleges including Davidson of North Carolina, and also a Rhodes scholar.

THE THOUSANDS of men and women in the foreign services are screened, chosen for particular aptitude and technical training for specific jobs, and are known as "career" men and women and generally make a life work of the foreign service.

So conscious has the department of state become of the necessity of winning political objectives through diplomacy after the country has won military victories or without military aid, the department in 1947 established the foreign service institute, which is actually a school for training young men and women in the foreign service of the country. It is departmentalized for specialized training, including schools for all the languages of the world.

The institute is now located in an eight-story building at 2115 C street N.W. in Washington and periodically its graduates, coming from every state in the union, find their way into the ranks of the foreign service. The institute also trains employees of other governmental agencies concerned with foreign affairs. The courses run up to six months, with the regular course for new foreign service officers now three months.

The school for basic officer training provides courses designed to prepare new personnel for initial field duty. The school of advanced officer training is concerned with graduate-level instruction in the social science fields, including economics, politics, law, sociology, social psychology, cultural anthropology, etc. And the school of languages is designed to equip the employees with a rudimentary or even advanced knowledge of the language of the country of assignment.

The foreign service institute equips the representatives of the American people to do a much better job for them in the 75 nations where consuls, embassies and other diplomatic missions are maintained. By the measurement of every yardstick the training is giving to the department a higher type of American citizen than has ever before been possible.

THE FICTION CORNER

SECOND WIFE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

LIFE began for Lionel Ainsley when he met Cynthia Trumble. She was the fulfillment of dreams that were dreamed while he sat alone by his camp fire in the wilderness, while he listened to the hoots of owls and the screeches of bobcats, and wondered if the time would ever come when somebody sat with him by the fire and listened to the night sounds that had been his only companions since graduation from the state school of forestry two years ago.

3-Minute Fiction

He met Cynthia when he came out of the bush one June for a short vacation. They were married the day he was due to start back into the woods.

The first week was deliciously sweet. Cynthia had been a country girl, and because Lionel was her first real love, she eagerly looked forward to spending weeks alone with him in the wilderness.

That was before they reached Woodsville, where Lionel had his base. There was a big packing company at Woodsville, run by a man named Benton, who had a son named Austin. Fresh from college young Austin had come to Woodsville to learn the packing business. Quite naturally the place was dull and boring to one so sophisticated.

Then Lionel and his new wife arrived, and Austin looked on Cynthia and vowed to know her better. Austin had that polish about him that attracts women.

So when Lionel finally headed his canoe toward Woodsville to replenish their supplies, Cynthia's pulse quickened a little, and she kept her eyes fastened on the bend in the river that would first reveal the great buildings of the packing house.

What followed made Cynthia a little ashamed. She hated to hurt Lionel, he was so fine and generous and kind. And so devoted. She thought he'd object to a divorce, and it was a little disappointing when he agreed readily.

AND SO Lionel went back into the wilderness shortly after the divorce was granted, and Cynthia, free and exultant, waited for Austin to come to her.

He came at last and stood near where she lay in a hammock. It was night and she could not see his face.

"Cynthia, darling, why did you do it? I feel like a cad, breaking up you and Lionel like that. He's a good sort and—well, I meant nothing by my attentions. It was all—well, sort of fun."

"But, darling, you do love me? You do want to marry me?" Misgivings chilled her heart.

Austin ran a finger under his collar. "Well, you see, Cynthia—you see, I can't, that is—I'm already married!"

Cynthia nearly swooned. When she again opened her eyes Austin was gone. She was alone. Panic gripped her, then fear. Later she thought of Lionel. She'd not known how to appreciate him. She'd wait. He'd be out of the bush again in three weeks. He'd understand.

It was almost unbearable, that waiting. The people of Woodsville looked at her curiously and whispered among themselves. Three weeks passed and Lionel didn't return. Another week dragged by and still no sign of him.

Then, at last, Lionel came back. Cynthia, watching from the veranda of her rooming house, saw his canoe sweep into sight, and her heart leaped. Lionel at last! Lionel, whom she'd loved and would love again. Lionel who had loved her so tenderly. Love like his didn't die. She had treated him miserably, but she'd admit all that, ask his forgiveness.

And then the canoe neared the shore and Cynthia went down to meet it. Lionel saw her, and waved a greeting.

Cynthia's heart stopped beating. There was someone else in the canoe. A girl.

The canoe touched the shore. Lionel grinned at her happily "Cynthia, it's good to see you again Hope you and Austin are happy." He gestured toward the girl, who had turned to stare. "Cynthia, meet the new Mrs. Ainsley."

All-Out Campaign

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—here in the heart of the rich agricultural and industrial Midwest the November elections will largely determine the political complexion of the next congress.

Realizing they have a better mathematical chance of gaining control of the senate this year than in 1952, the Republicans are going all-out to win control of the upper house with the knowledge that to do so they must not only hold the seats they now have, but must pick up seven additional seats. The facts are, however, they may fall short since there is a terrific battle in progress in the key states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, as well as in Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri, with the outcome undetermined in any of these states where the Republicans now now incumbents in five of the six states.

Fight of Career

In Ohio Sen. Robert A. Taft, "Mr. Republican" himself, is engaged in the fight of his career to hold on to his seat. And it's a toss-up with state auditor "Jumpin' Joe" Ferguson making his usual prairie fire campaign, backed almost solidly by labor and with the farm vote split about fifty-fifty.

Senator Taft, it will be remembered, squeezed through in 1944 by about 17,000 votes after having carried the state six years previously by more than 170,000. The senator is working as though his whole career depends upon this election, as it does, and is making up to 13 speeches a day covering Ohio's 88 counties.

The Republican organization, well financed not only from Ohio friends, but by powerful eastern groups, is making the battle with its back against the wall, while the Democrats, aided by the powerful CIO-AFL railroad brotherhood groups claiming a million and a quarter membership in Ohio, and well financed from the Democratic national committee, is optimistic that Ferguson, who has always run well ahead of the Democratic ticket, having gone before Ohio voters 27 times without a defeat, will unseat the senate Republican leader.

Indiana Contest Close

In Indiana, where Republican Sen. Homer E. Capehart also squeezed through with only 50.6 per cent of the vote in his first term bid, is likely to be unseated by popular Alex Campbell, of Ft. Wayne, a former district attorney and who resigned his job as assistant United States atttorney general in Washington to run against Capehart. The state organization in Indiana is also said to be lukewarm for Capehart and the Hoosier senator has alienated the labor and veterans groups generally by his votes on the Taft-Hartley act and his opposition to much veterans legislation, particularly on housing. He also opposed the 1949 bill providing aid to Korea and voted for substantial slashes in the European recovery program.

As in Ohio, the Indiana farm vote is split almost 50-50 with the tenant and small farmers professing a Democratic trend and the big farmers and farm owners going along their traditional Republican ticket.

The recent tirade of Sen. William E. Jenner of Indiana against Gen. George Marshall as secretary of defense has hurt the Republican cause in Indiana considerably, and there are many here who believe the intemperate upbraiding of the respected and generally well-liked Marshall may prove the straw that will break the Capehart back in Indiana. Capehart could not repudiate the Jenner statement and without so doing he is regarded as feeling the same way about General Marshall.

As a matter of fact, while there is some confusion in the minds of many people in Indiana, as elsewhere, over our early reverses in the Korean war, this reporter can find little of the so-called "isolationism" either in Indiana or Ohio.

Lucas Has Edge

In the Illinois arena, Sen. Scott Lucas, the Democratic majority leader in the senate is also fighting the political battle of his career against former Congressman Everett M. Dirksen. While Senator Lucas is making a middle of the road campaign, opposing the Brannan plan, which has been endorsed by President Truman, he is being hard hit by his opponent as a top advocate of the Fair Deal.

On the other hand, Lucas comes from "down state" at Havana, and has been able to poll more rural and down state votes than any other Democrat which, added to the tremendous Cook county Democratic majority, has pulled him through. Dirksen is supported by Col. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune and is being attacked as an isolationist and "inconsistent" on foreign affairs votes while in congress. This race looks like a toss up with the edge going to Senator Lucas. But the majority leader will know he's had a battle.

Patsy Campbell, star of CBS's "The Second Mrs. Burton," and her radio actor husband, Al Reilly, have yet to get a taste of Bermuda sunshine. They've returned from a ten-day vacation there—and it rained every day.

Irene Beasley, mistress of ceremonies of "Grand Slam," has been doing a little figuring. The show recently celebrated its fourth continuous year on the air, and Irene says she's used approximately 3,000 questions and distributed 16,600 prizes.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

30 Months Late, Letter Makes a Christmas in August

By BILLY ROSE

This morning's batch of mail included the following from a man in Great Neck, L. I.:

Dear Billy Rose:

As you probably noticed in the papers one day last August a boy named Henry Turrill found a sack of undelivered mail in the rear of a junked automobile on the outskirts of Great Neck.

It consisted mostly of Christmas cards which had been mailed in December, 1947, and the post office, after apologizing for the delay, promised to deliver them the next day.

Well, one of the pieces of mail was addressd to me—a letter from my wife, postmarked Cleveland, Ohio, and dated December 19, 1947. But what was in that letter won't make sense to you unless I first tell you something about myself.

Billy Rose

Shortly after I was married in '44, the draft boards began taking anything with two legs, and after ten months in Texas I was put on a boat and shipped off to that swamp called Okinawa. By the time I got there, the shooting was over, so I guess I was better off than most of the boys, but it was a dull and muddy sort of life, and I was plenty glad when I was shipped back and discharged in '47.

• • •

IT WAS TWO DAYS before Christmas when I arrived in Great Neck, and you can imagine how let down I felt when I found that my wife wasn't there waiting for me. Instead, there was a note on the table saying her mother wasn't feeling well, and she had gone to Cleveland. She'd be back in a few days if everything was all right.

This, of course, wasn't the homecoming I'd been figuring on and I took it pretty hard. But realizing there was nothing I could do about it—her mother didn't even have a phone—I sent her a Merry Christmas wire and told her to hurry back as soon as she could. It wasn't until after New Year's, however, that my wife showed up.

That was in '47, and in the past three years a lot of nice things have happened to us—a son, a pretty good job, and most of the mortg. ge paid off on our house. None of which would have come about if the letter my wife sent me from Cleveland had arrived on schedule.

In it, you see, she confessed there had been another man while I'd been away—nobody she cared anything about, just someone who had happened along while she was lonely and miserable. She said if I didn't want her to come back to write and say so and she'd understand, but if she didn't hear from me she'd figure I had forgiven her and would return and try to make it up to me.

WHEN THE MAILMAN handed me this three-year-old letter a couple of weeks ago, I wondered what the heck was in it, so I ripped it open and read it right there on the porch. And corny as it sounds, all the time I was reading it I could hear the vacuum going inside and my son making a racket in his upstairs bedroom.

Chances are, had I gotten this letter when I was fresh out of the army and plenty jumpy, I would have called my wife every dirty name and busted up our marriage as fast as the law would allow. But standing there on the porch I thought of the three good years we'd had together and the 30 more, maybe, coming up—not to mention the fact that I hadn't always been a saint myself. So, I put the letter in my pocket, and that night after work went to a jewelry store and made a down-payment on one of those wristwatches with little red stones.

When I handed the present to my missus after dinner, she said, "What's this — Christmas in August?"

"Exactly, baby," I said, and then I told her I had finally gotten her letter and how happy I was it had come 30 months late.

Since then we have talked a lot about this lucky accident, and today we decided there's a lesson in the story which might help a lot of other couples who feel like busting their marriages the first time something goes wrong. If you run this letter in your column, we'd appreciate it, of course, if you didn't use our real names.

Kind Words for a Few Managers

By GRANTLAND RICE

ANYONE DESIRING to walk into trouble up to his ears can do so easily. All he has to do is pick the manager of the year in baseball—and then prove it.

There have been several managers in both leagues who have done better than a minor job so far. On or off the record, I would say that a few of them had turned out work well above the average and rate at least a sprig or so of laurel or olive.

Grantland Rice

There are three managers in the American League who deserve more than a few kind words. They are Red Rolfe, Casey Stengel and Steve O'Neill. There are also three in the National. They are Eddie Sawyer, Leo Durocher and Billy Southworth.

This means six managers out of 16 starters who were above average—leaving only 10 who turned out a routine job, or a trifle worse.

Rolfe started with what looked to to be the best pitching staff in the league. Later on he had to use rare judgment to keep it working effectively. He always had a great outfield, especially on the offensive side, but only a fair infield and fair catching.

Stengel had to operate with his two stars, Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich, below par physically. DiMaggio was magnificent on his big days. Ordinary in others. Henrich was of little help. Casey had to lean heavily on Rizzuto, Berra, Johnny Mize, a pretty fair but unheralded outfield and better than a pretty fair pitching staff.

Steve O'Neill apparently inherited disaster. He took over the Red Sox when they had just lost one of the greatest managers of all time, one of the star ballplayers of the decade, Ted Williams, and were eight games out of first place.

The Red Sox were promptly thrown overboard by the critics. O'Neill applied some brand of soothing ointment that was more effective than any cure Tom Yawkey's hired men had ever known.

• • •

In the National

At this moment Eddie Sawyer and Leo Durocher have the call in the National with Billy Southworth's case depending on the stretch run.

The affable, scholarly Sawyer was far in the lead until his young Whiz Kids started skidding first losing five games in a row, and then skidding a trifle in others

But it was better than merely normal to take a young team and plant it in first place by a margin of seven games on Labor Day, or shortly thereafter.

After all, when the eight-club field was spread out in April, the assembled experts in a compact body picked the Dodgers on top. A few scattered votes went elsewhere, but the Dodgers were the people. There were five clubs given a chance: Brooklyn, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

Sawyer's main job, once his young team moved into first place, was to keep them from getting the jitters or the yips, which are too often the result of inexperience roosting too high.

It would be difficult to find a greater job than Leo Durocher has given his Giants.

Durocher had a bad-looking ball club for the first month or so. The pitching espeically was on the morbid side. The team couldn't locate itself and back in June was 12 or more games out. There seemed little chance around July Fourth that the Giants would finish in the first division. They weren't any better than the Cubs or Reds.

The arrival of Sal Maglie and Jim Hearn was the lifesaver, of course. But it can also be remembered that Durocher had a much better looking outfit working. It was a team that had improved in every way. And much credit for this improvement must be handed to the Lip.

With two weeks left, Leo Durocher could challenge Eddie Sawyer. The Giant manager, always a star field director, was at his best after a poor start. He has had his best year.

Billy Southworth has never been sensational this season. He has given his fans a good year.

Drive, Approach, Putt

Which is the most important—the drive, the approach or the putt? Johnny Farrell says: "We drive for pleasure, but we putt for money." Jim Barnes says: "The drive sets up the hole."

Hogan can handle all three assignments, day in and day out. Sammy Snead is a master with wood and iron, but he only wins when he is putting well—and he isn't as consistent around the greens. Yet he tied Hogan in the Los Angeles Open.

It is seldom the average or even pretty fair golfer can blend his drives, approaches and putts into one good pattern. Once in a while he will get two of the three big patterns working. More often only one of the three.

In this battle of the three big factors in a golf swing, I'll have to award the prize of importance to the approach. It is more important than either the drive or putt.

THE HIGHWAY STORY
By Burr Combs

One of Iowa's traditional high-school games was played recently. You may know the towns by name, but that's not important. The important thing is the game, and the long-standing rivalry, and the sportsmanship that prevails.

But this year the game was a flop. Oh, it was played all right. They had a good, clear night; good crowd, not popcorn, no trouble with the lights and the band never missed a step at half-time. The playing was pretty good, not spectacular, but not bad.

You see everyone was there - the coaches, the players, the crowd, the cheerleaders - everyone was thinking about a gap in the loser's team.

A week or so before the game Rob had gone over to the other town - the rival town, where the prettiest girl in three counties lives. But not even for her would Rob break training, so after an early show he took her straight to her home, took one last kiss and headed for his own home - fourteen miles away.

Rob must have been traveling 65 or 70 in his Dad's car when he came to the bad turn on the old part of the highway. Maybe his head was still spinning from that kiss, or filled with dreams. Anyway he must not have been paying much attention to his speed.

When the car bucked against the turn and went into the guard rails, the wire cables held it for awhile as post after post snapped off, but finally the speed and smashing impact won and the car hurled over the cables and down the bank.

The gap Rob left in that football team was filled - physically by another boy who played his heart out. But Rob is gone forever.

Sunday School Convention To Be Held In Klemme Friday

The Klemme Church will be host to the Hancock County Sunday School Convention on Friday. The morning session is scheduled for 9:45. The lunch at noon will be pot-luck with our WSCS providing the coffee. It is hoped that many of our Sunday School workers will benefit from the morning and afternoon sessions.

HANCOCK COUNTY SOIL CONSERVATION GET $2,157.23 STATE AID

The Hancock County Soil Conservation District received a total of $2,157.23 from State aid for the past year and has a budget of $3,491.05 for the current year, according to Ben Riemer, Chairman of the Soil Conservation District.

The State aid was made available by the 53rd General Assembly through the State Soil Conservation Committee for aid to Soil Conservation Districts in Iowa.

Riemer reports that their local District expended their funds for clerical and technical assistance, and for needed equipment such as a posture chair, steel file, desk lamp, 3 hand levels and a 35mm camera. The Commissioners of the local Soil Conservation District believe that State aid has substantially increased application of soil conserving practices in the local district, as well as in other Districts in Iowa. They further comment that aid in the local District has made it possible to keep the office open while technicians are working in the field. The clerk made it possible to increase production of farm plans about 25 percent. A technicians helper was hired for 106 days to assist technicians with preliminary survey for drainage and assist in layout work of conservation practices.

According to H. Wayne Pritchard, Secretary of the State Soil Conservation Committee, a total of $169,476.16 was allocated to the various Soil Conservation Districts on a need basis during the fiscal year 1949-50. It was used for clerical and technical assistance and for needed equipment. A total of $26,865.44 was allocated for Commissioners expenses, office supplies, demonstrational material.

The District Commissioners serve without salary in the interest of soil conservation and Commissioners of the Hancock County Soil Conservation District, in addition to Chairman Ben Riemer of Garner are W. J. Rasmuson of Britt and S. A. Barber of Kanawha.

The Soil Conservation District appropriation asking for fiscal years 1951 through 1953 is $450,000 for each year of the biennium. If this appropriation is granted by the 54th General Assembly of Iowa it will make possible technical and clerical assistance for each of the 99 organized Iowa Soil Conservation Districts.

Prior to the appropriaton by the 53rd Genral Assembly—Soil Conservation Districts had no funds for their use, for either administrative or technical service.

HANCOCK RECEIVES HELP FROM NATIONAL POLIO FUND

A check for $1,000.00 to help pay for medical care for local patients has been received by the Hancock County Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, it was announced yesterday by Roy L. McMillin, Chapter Chairman. The funds were provided by national headquarters of the March of Dimes organization.

Heavy polio incidence this year, following the worst epidemic in the nation's history in 1949, has exhausted the local treasuries of many National Foundation Chapters, the chairman declared. A late September rise in cases indicates there will be more than 30,000 cases before the year is ended, Mr. McMillin said, making 1950 the second highest polio year on record.

Picture Party Held At Henry Buseman Home

Some 25 people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buseman Sunday evenng to view projected colored slides of pictures taken by Mrs. Rank Buss and Mrs. Albert Priebe.

After seeing the fine variety of scenic pictures all enjoyed a nice lunch.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Have you had a close shave at night? Just miss a boy on a bike, or nearly hit a loaded wagon, or come close to piling into the rear of a truck?

What saved you then? It was the red tail-light, wasn't it? Yes, that ruby-red rear light has saved a great many lives. That's why the law requires it.

Here's what the law says: EVERY VEHICLE on the highway must have a red rear lamp — lighted and visible for 500 feet — from a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise — and at any time when you can't easily see 500 feet ahead.

But what's a VEHICLE? Cars, trucks, buses and motorcycles, of course. But it means tractors, wagons, trailers combines and other farm machinery, too. Vehicles means trailers, buggies, scooters and bicycles All of them, according to law, must show red tail-light at night on the highways.

Bicycles can get by with red reflectors, visible 300 feet away. But every other type of vehicle must have lighted rear lights, visible for 500 feet. And if the load sticks out more than four feet behind, the end of the load must carry another red lamp at night or a red flag in the daytime.

Through the fall and winter months, as the nights get longer and there's more murkey weather to obscure your vision, the Iowa Safety Congress urges you to check your tail-lights and use them. The law that requires red lights may save your life as well as others.

Large Crowd At Reception For Teachers At Schools

RECEPTION FOR TEACHERS DREW LARGE CROWD WEDNESDAY EVE

Excellent Program Was Given, Followed By Visiting Rooms And Teachers

There were perhaps about 400 people who attended the reception for the Klemme teachers last Wednesday evening.

To start off the evening there was a good program of local talent on the high school stage, with Ernie Gerardi doing a bang-up job as master of ceremonies and who kept things rolling at a lively clip.

The Barz Barber Shop quartette gave several numbers, with Ray Barz, Allen Barz, Edward Barz and Milvern Barz vocalizing. The four men were in costume for the occasion.

Next on the program was a talk by Rev. Egeland who brought out a number of humrous situations in his talk as well as handing out some sound advice.

Richard Ulrich and his guitar impersonated Gene Autry in several vocal numbers really "brought down the house."

Rev. Jaberg, our "new" minister gave an excellent talk and a welcome to the teachers, stressing their influence on our community in character building of our young people.

"Sam" Terhufen and Ernie Gerardi presented a comedy act when Terhufen appeared in front of the stage curtain playing a rather small accordion and doing a real job of it. The pay-off came when some joker slowly rolled back the curtain showing Ernie was the musician and Sam was only going through the motions!

The stage show closed with a number of ladies appearing in the old song, "An Old Fashioned Garden." For this number the stage was set with appropriate scenes, a white wooden picket fence, a garden gate and lots of flowers and shrubs, and lovers' bench. Mrs. Wesley Patterson, Mrs. Vern Bisom and Mrs. James Carlson, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, sang "An Old Fashioned Garden." The second time through the chorus was acted out by Miss Marie Blank, as the dashing young man and Mrs. Merlin Neuberger as the bashful, blushing maiden. Mrs. Claude White, back of the piano contributed the floral effects. This number closed the program and parents were invited to inspect the several class rooms and meet the teachers in both the high school building and the new grade school building.

At the grade school building dining room a nice lunch was served. A special long table had been set for the teachers.

Ernie Gerardi was again on band with accordion numbers and soon found an able assistant, Arthur Carlson, a grade student, who would rather sing than eat! Between the two of them there was a large assortment of community singing and the building really shook when everyone sang "Good Night Irene.' Young Arthur, Gracka Gerardi and Paula Goll introduced a new song which was soon caught up by the younger people.

It was a great evening, a big success and a lot of credit goes to the Music Mothers, the ladies of the two churches and others who gave of their time. Nearly everyone present expressed their opinion that we should have more of such gatherings. Perhaps it can be arranged to have several get-to-gethers during the coming months. Everyone had so much fun that they would like to have more like the one Wednesday evening.

Klemme and community has a lot of talent, let's use it in more good community entertainments.

KANAWHA WANTS HIGHWAY PAVED

A petition was circulated for hard surfacing the county highway running east and west through Kanawha, the road to be paved past the cemetery west of town. The concrete is to be poured next spring.

A group of men, Elmer Hanson, Nick Christians, Glen Larson and S. S. Tande met with county board of supervisors and asked for the improvement. The preliminary work will be done this fall, according to the county engineer.

CHICKEN THIEVES BUSY IN HANCOCK

Chicken thieves have been active in the southwest part of Hancock County according to Deputy Sheriff R. E. Nesbit, who says approximately 500 have been reported stolen in recent days. The thefts have all occurred in the same general vicinity and may be the work of one gang according to Nesbit.

FARM HANDS WILL PARTICIPATE IN THE SOCIAL SECURITY PLAN

Hired farm hands will be participating in the Federal Social Security plan program beginning January 1, 1951, as the result of amendments to the Social Security Act that have been passed by Congress and signed by the president.

Regular farm workers can now begin building up an insurance fund that will go to themselves or to their survivors in their old age.

To Hancock County farmers this means that they will pay a social security tax of 1½ percent of the cash wages paid to their hired help, Paul Henderson, county extension director reports.

This makes a total of 3 percent of the wages that will go to the government for social security, with the employer and the employee each footing half the bill.

Farmers who employ regular help must send this money to the government along with a report showing how much in earnings should be added to laborers' social security account, says Carl Malong, extension economist at Iowa State College. This reporting is to be done every 3 months.

Workers should be able to show farm operators a social security card so farmers can send in the tax under the exact name that is on the card, as well as the correct number, Henderson adds.

The new social security tax includes not only outdoor laborers that are connected with farming operations, but it takes in cooks and household workers as well. Husbands, wives, parents or children—if they are under 21—of the farm operator cannot get social security credit for work done on their farm.

SQUIRREL SEASON BETTER THAN EXPECTED

The squirrel season, well past the halfway mark, is proving to be more successful than was expected. Reports from squirrel shooters throughout the state indicate "much better hunting" than in 1949, when squirrel hunter success was termed "good." Conservation officers indicate that is some areas more hunters are present than in the prevvious year. However, in most squirrel territory fewer hunters have been out during the warm weather than in 1949.

Reports Enrollment

Hancock County Supt., Charles S. Whitney, this week released the enrollment figures for Hancock County rural schools and reported that final figures show 687 pupils. This is an average of approximately 12 pupils per school. Included in the total are the pupils of Miller Independent and St. John's parochial school.

CLERGYMAN SEEKS DAMAGES IN SUIT

The Rev. Gerhard J. Hjelmaas of Crystal Lake has filed a damage suit in the Hancock County district court against Joe Conibear of Crystal Lake, in connection with an automobile collision near Hayfield on Oct. 16, 1949. The plaintiff requests a jury trial

The collision was between the cars driven by Mr. Hjelmaas and Conibear. The clergyman asks judgement of $2,031 for pain, suffering and nervous shock; $639 damages to his car, hospital bills and loss of the equivalet of 15 days wages from his profession. Interest of 5 percent per annum from October 16, 1949, is requested in connection with the judgement.

BEN GREIMAN'S INVENTION WILL BE BOOM TO FARMERS

Machine Can Be Used For Drying Corn, Grain, Beans Quickly

Ben F. Greiman, local farmer and inventor, has gone into the field of drying grains with a new machine which he has built and patented, and which will be in operation at his farm north of Klemme by the end of this week.

Mr. Greiman's new invention is a portable dryer and is very simple in operation. Roughly it consists of three tubes, about 21 feet high. The center tube is about 10 inches square and at intervals are baffle plates, the pitch of which can be regulated by a chain. This is the tube which the grain drops through an air current in the drying process

On opposite sides of the square tube are round tubes, 4 or 6 inches in diameter in which power-driven augurs operate. The augurs pick up the grain from a traveling belt, elevate it to the tip of the square tube, The grain then descends from one baffle plate to the next, through air that can be heated, until it finally arrives at the bottom where it is picked up, goes to the opposite augur and is elevated into a spout that leads to the storage bin.

The above is rather rough description of the corn drying machine. The Times hopes to have a picture of it for next week. The blower for the machine can operate either with or without heat and as much air blast can be applied as deemed necessary.

Will Save Field Time

Mr. Greiman points out that by using his drying machine that labor can be saved in the field. For instance, in harvesting small grain, the grain can be cut standing and do away with wind-rowing, as if the grain is a bit green or damp, the machine will take care of it. There are screens at the top of the tubes which will screen out weed seeds and chaff, so that the finished product will be good seed grain.

In harvesting corn, Mr. Greiman will machine pick the corn, dump it into a corn sheller, from which it will be picked up and run through the dryer. The corn can be elevated back and forth through the dryers and the moisture removed for storage.

Manufacturers Shields

Mr. Greiman also has a rotary cultivator shield on the market. It has been made at Des Moines, but Mr. Greiman has made arrangements with a large Kansas City concern to manufacture and put on the market his shields. There are already hundreds of Greiman's shields being used by farmers in Iowa and they say they are very successful. Some improvements are being made to the shields that will go on the market next year.

PLACE OF VOTING IN ELL TOWNSHIP CHANGED TO TOWN HALL

For several years voters have gone to the Klemme Legion Community Hall to cast their ballots.

On Tuesday, November 7th, voters will cast their ballots at the Town Hall in Klemme. The former place of voting is now in use as a grade school building.

Don't forget to vote next Tuesday, November 7th, and don't forget that voters in Ell Township and the Town of Klemme will vote at the Town Hall, one block south of the Corner Store.

Unlimited Popularity

The manager inquired the length of their act.

The pair hadn't had an act for a month of Sundays and didn't know just what to say; but, being resourceful, replied, "Twenty-five minutes."

"Twenty-five minutes!" exclaimed the manager. "Why, my dear sirs, ours is a long bill. I cannot give you 25 minutes. I suggest that you go on for eight minutes."

The performers stared at him aghast.

"Eight minutes!" they screamed. "Why, we bow for seven minutes!"

ALWAYS A GENTLEMAN

His car and her car met head-on. Both drivers got out and, with that fine courtesy so characteristic of motorists nowadays, both began to apologize profusely.

"I'm sorry," said the woman; "It was all my fault."

"Not at all, madam," the man responded with a gallant gesture; "I was to blame myself."

"But I insist the fault was mine. I was on your side of the road."

"That may be true; but, my dear madam, I am responsible for the collision. I saw you coming blocks away, and I had ample opportunity to dart down a side street."

Doctor's Advice

Doctor: "The best thing for you to do is to give up drinking and smoking."

Patient: "Doctor, I feel I don't deserve the best. "What's the second best?"

NEWSPAPER STYLE

The cub reporter had one bad habit: his stories were too long and wordy. After being warned to cut them short, he reported an accidental death as follows:

"J. Jones looked up the elevator shaft in the Blank building to see if it was on the way down. It was. Age, 48.

Lucky Girl!

In the park, the kindly lady making conversation with a bright little girl, inquired, "Tell me, dear, have you any little sisters at home?"

"No," the youngster replied, "but I have two brothers—and they have a sister." And then she joyfully added, "And I'm the sister!"

A GOOD REASON

Difference of Opinion

ONE day a brokerage firm learned that in his lectures at Georgetown university Supreme Court Justice John M. Harlan sometimes discussed pending cases. Immediately they had a smart idea. Why not have their lawyer enter the class at the university, and thereby garner some advance hints on court decisions which might affect the stock market? The deed was done.

One night the justice disclosed the principles involved in an important pending case, and set forth his conclusions. The broker's lawyer rushed away to his firm and counseled them to play the market to fit the anticipated ruling

Came the decision, but the firm lost heavily in the market, because the decision had been contrary to the lawyer's expectation. When the lawyer anxiously sought the printed decision, he was struck by a single line printed at the bottom, which read: "Mr Justice Harlan dissents."

WHIPPERSNAPPER

The clock struck 12, Father came to the top of the stairs and boomed:

"Young man, is your self-starter broken?"

And he received this retort:

"It doesn't matter as long as there is a crank in the house."

SHORT RETORT

One of the shortest letters on record was written by a New York renter in response to his landlord's notice to vacate the house at once. Aware of his rights under state regulations, the renter replied:

"Sir:

"I remain,

Yours truly."

DEFENSE:
Military Gets First Call

In the first sweeping priorities regulation issued by the national production administration, the government gave the atomic energy commission and the military first call on the nation's factories and raw materials to assure success of the rearmament program.

The order required producers to put military orders ahead of everything else—even if civilian production such as automobiles and refrigerators must be shunted aside.

Effective immediately, the order covers most of the goods and materials the military will need for rearmament. It does not, however, cover electric power, farm equipment, fuels, gas, petroleum, and transportation.

In excuting the order, the defense department, or the atomic energy commission, will put a D.O. (defense order) priority rating on war contracts with a business firm. This means the company must give first attention to fulfilling the contract, whether or not it wants to.

The firm with the priority contract has the right to extend its priority to other concerns from which it must get parts or materials to fulfill his contract. This puts the war contractor in the position of requisitioning anything he needs, with the government back of his authority.

The automobile industry was the first to comment on the order. A spokesman for General Motors said a cut of 10 to 15 per cent in truck and car production may take place within the next 12 months.

Already hampered by a shortage of certain materials, the spokesman said "now that much scarce materials will be diverted to the rearmament program, there's nothing we can do but plan ahead for a drastic cut in production of civilian goods."

"We'll feel the worst of it in about a year," he said.

Well and Nobly Done

In the name of the people of the United States, President Truman sent Gen. Douglas MacArthur congratulations on the victory in Korea.

The President said in his message:

"I know that I speak for the entire American people when I send you my warmest congratulations on the victory which has been achieved under your leadership in Korea. Few operations in military history can match either the delaying action, where you traded space for time in which to build up your forces, or the brilliant maneuver which has now resulted in the liberation of Seoul.

"I am particularly impressed by the splendid cooperation of our army, navy and air force, and I wish you would extend my thanks and congratulations to the commanders of those services—Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy and Lieut. George E. Stratemeyer.

"The unification of our arms established by you and by them has set a shining example My thanks and the thanks of the people of all the free nations go out to your gallant forces—soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen—from the United States and the other countries fighting for freedom under the United Nations banner. I salute you all, and say to all of you from all of us at home, 'Well and nobly done.'"

DRAFT:
Vets May Be Called

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, proposed that the draft take veterans and men with dependents and that the length of service for inductees be stretched from 21 months to 30.

For that large group of Americans who felt that victory in Korea would mean a slacking-off of U. S. armed services' need, it was a rude awakening.

Hershey said the pool of men under 26 years of age, and eligible for the draft under present regulations, is down to 1,500,000 and that the rejection rate runs about 50 per cent.

He recommended:

1. Extending the period of draft service, with six months to be spent in training and 24 months in service.

2. Changing the rules for deferment because of dependency so that collateral dependents wouldn't count.

3. Changing the law to permit induction of veterans under 26 years of age.

Hershey also criticized draft qualifications established by the armed services. He contended they are too tight.

Ambassador

Walter S. Gifford, former head of the American Telephone & Telegraph company, was named by President Truman to succeed Lewis Douglas as ambassador to Britain.

FARM PRICES:
Up 9 Per Cent

The agriculture department reported farm prices rose about 2 per cent in September, pushing the level to 9 per cent above that prevailing before fighting started in Korea.

The sharpest gains were reported in cotton, cottonseed and citrus. Other gains of many farm products aided in pushing the farm price level upward.

Prices of commodities and materials and labor used in farm production also increased during the period, but less than half as much as the increase in prices received by farmers.

Also in the farm news, officials reported the government may have to spend nearly as much on potato supports as last year's $90 million outlay.

This year's potato crop is considerably larger than last year's and there is no indication of any change in the long downward trend in consumption.

Price supports on potatoes will be withdrawn altogether on next year's crop unless the law is changed.

Casualties

The defense department announced U. S. casualties in the Korean war as of October 1 totaled 17,200. The total included 2,211 dead, 11,050 wounded and 3,959 missing in action.

Of the dead, 2,211 were killed in action and 230 died of wounds, the department said.

Fifty prisoners of war and 167 other men were included in the missing list.

GOP to Retain Seats

OKLAHOMA CITY — Indications are that here in the central west plains states the November election will maintain a status quo insofar as the political complexion of the United States senate is concerned. There is, however, a slight chance for the Democrats to gain a seat if the bitterly contested race in Missouri can oust Sen. Forrest C. Donnell, the Republican incumbent.

In South Dakota, Iowa and Kansas, all now held by Republicans, it appears the GOP will hold its own. Here in the Sooner state of Oklahoma a razzle-dazzle race is being conducted between Congressman Mike Monroney on the Democratic side and the Rev. W. H. (Bill) Alexander, Oklahoma City Christian church pastor and lifelong Democrat, on the Republican side. Monroney appears to be an easy winner.

Therefore, in their determined fight to recapture the senate, the Republican party apparently has little chance of gaining a seat in this area, and it does have a chance of losing in Missouri. They need seven seats to win control

Local issues are playing a big part in the Missouri election and the GOP state organization is pulling all the stops on the gambling issue in St. Louis and Kansas City, the murder of some gang leaders in the latter city; resurrection of the old Pendergast issue and the fact that the man favored by President Truman in the primary, Emery W. Allison, lost out to former Congressman Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., who is conducting a whirlwind campaign. Hennings is a colorful figure and while he was considered a New Dealer when he served in the lower house from 1935 to 1940, he made his primary campaign as an independent, although he came out strong for civil rights. Senator Donnell is considered the official i-dotter and t-crosser of the senate and is an expert on legal grammer. He has a lack-lustre personality and is considered a poor speaker, despite which facts, he has a large personal following in Missouri. Republicans and Democrats alike agree that Hennings is giving the Republicans a tougher race than Allison could have had he been nominated in the primary.

• • •

Hickenlooper Favored

In the tall corn country of Iowa, farmer Albert J. Loveland, who resigned as under-secretary of agriculture, is making what appears to be a losing race against probe-conscious Bourke B. Hickenlooper, the GOP incumbent.

In some circles it was believed that Hickenlooper's back-firing and unsuccessful charges against the atomic energy commission and of Communist infiltration in the state department, would hurt him in Iowa. However, he blasted all opposition in the primary and apparently his Washington failures have not hurt him with Iowa voters.

Loveland is an advocate of the Brannan farm plan which is one of the main issues in the Iowa campaign. Although Iowa elected a Democratic senator in 1948 it is considered essentially a Republican state. There are those who believe the GOP may turn to Iowa for a presidential candidate in 1952, with the spotlight turned on Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

• • •

Carlson Has Edge

Kansas, traditionally Republican, of course will turn the trick again although some election interest is being engendered by the creditable showing being made by Paul Aiken, who resigned as assistant post master general to make the race on the Democratic side against Gov. Frank C. Carlson, the GOP nominee. Sen. Harry Darby, appointed by Governor Carlson to fill the unexpired term of the late Clyde Reed, is not making the race.

• • •

Alexander Weak

Rev. Alexander, the GOP senatorial nominee in Oklahoma, is a young, handsome, wavy-haired enthusiast, a ready talker who leaves his would-be followers little choice or room to stand on his ultra-narrow platform. He is not catching votes in Oklahoma when he brands all Fair Deal, New Deal and Democratic adherents as Socialists, and brands the President and all around him as stupid misfits. He admits he has been a lifelong Democrat and filed on the Republican ticket after the state organization informed him they were for Congressman Monroney.

• • •

Murray Is Candidate

"Mike" Monroney, a former newspaper man, won an impressive victory in unseating the veteran Elmer Thomas in the primary. Local interest is whetted in this Oklahoma election because Johnston Murray, son of "Wild Bill" Murray, colorful governor of an earlier era in Oklahoma politics, is the Democratic gubernatorial nominee. This should make for some hot politics n that state before the election.

Iowa's Election

"Listen to those politicians tear into each other," Ed Purdy said, as we tuned in last night.

Yes, we have a lively election in Iowa this fall.

But, from where I sit, the important thing about elections is that every candidate has his say . . . every voter a right to his choice. That's democracy!

Sure, there are folks who believe they could think for us, better than we can think for ourselves. In Europe they call them dictators. In our town we call them cranks.

They're just born narrow minded and intolerant. There's no place for them in America. Because the cornerstone of our freedom is a man's right to choose his own way of life.

It's our right to pick our own candidates, choose our trade . . . even our own preference in such things as a temperate glass of beer, ice tea, or pineapple juice, if you will.

Let's hold fast to that right of free choice, and we can be sure our democracy is sound.

NINE CONSERVATION PLANS APPROVED BY HANCOCK SOIL COMMISSIONERS

The monthly meeting of the Hancock County Soil Conservation District Commissioners was held Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 18th in the basement of the R.E.A. in Garner. Those attending the meeting were Chairman Ben Riemer of Garner; Commissioner. W J. Rasmuson of Britt; L. E. Kuester, District Conservationist of Fort Dodge; Vernon Moss and Ernest Fernley, SCS personnel; Mercedes Ann Formanek, state clerk of Hancock Co. SCD; and Paul Henderson, County Extension Director, secretary of the Soil Conservation District.

Farmers attending whose plans were reviewed were: Roy McMillin and C. C. Horstman of Britt; Wilmer Hauge of Goodell; Kenneth Gast and John Schroeder both of Garner. Other plans reviewed but farmers were not present at the meeting were: Theo. Nelson, Goodell; LeRoy Hollatz, William Hoeft, Henry Askland and Earl Anderson all of Garner. On motion by Rasmuson, seconded by Riemer the nine plans presented were approved.

Requests for assistance by C. C. Horstman and Merle Smith were approved.

Moss reported that planning meetings are now being held in Group 18 which consists of 10 farms in Bingham and Orthel townships. The first meeting was held October 16th with farmers from nine of the farms represented and two visitors also present. Second and third planning meetings are scheduled for October 23rd and 30th, with planning to begin the first of November.

Moss further reported that Don Cowles, Soil Scientist for the Soil Conservation Service will start mapping farms in Group 19 on Tuesday, October 24th. Conservation surveys in Groups 19 and 22 will be completed this fall. As soon as surveys are completed in group 19, planning maps will be prepared and planning meetings will be held. It is the intention of local technicians to complete planning in Group 19 the end of this calendar year and to begin planning with group 22 soon after the first of January.

WORM GILTS BEFORE FALL BREEDING TIME

Wormy pigs are money losers because they're often stunted and unthrifty and they waste feed. To combat the worm menace, Iowa State College extension swine specialist E. L. Quaife suggests worming the gilts before breeding time this fall.

Even though the pigs were wormed during the summer, they still may have worms and worm eggs that will infest hog lots and cause trouble, Quaife says.

Sodium fluoride is recommended by Quaife and the U. S. Department of Agriculture as a dependable treatment for worms. Mix 1 part by dry weight of sodium fluoride to 99 parts of ground feed. Slightly underfeed gilts a day before the worming mixture is put before them.

Then leaves the mixed feed in front of them for a day. After that, pure ground feed can be added to medicated feed which should be nearly cleaned up after 1 day of feeding.

Since the sodium fluoride is poisonous to man and animal, Quaife urges that cans containing the chemical be plainly labeled and kept in a safe place.

He reminds farmers that worming pigs is not a substitute for sanitation. It takes a combination of worming and sanitation to lick the worm threat.

FARMER OPERATORS WILL NOT BE BROUGHT UNDER SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Farmer operators will not be brought under the Social Security by the recent amendment to the Social Security Act, but farm labor who are "regularly employed" will be covered, as will employees of non-profit organizations.

The following analysis of the amended act as it affects Hancock County agriculture was given by Paul Shurts, County Farm Bureau Fieldman.

1. Farm operators remain excluded from coverage, both as to benefits and taxes, along with other professional groups.

2. Personnel of non-profit associations of agriculture, are covered.

3. Agriculture labor, which is regularly employed by the same farmer is brought under coverage of the act. A qualifying period of three months in a calendar quarter is required to establish "regularity." Thereafter, 60 days employment by the same farmer in every succeeding three-month quarterly period, while being paid in cash at least $50.00 is required for continuance of coverage. This will exclude from coverage the irregular, itinerant, casual and migrant workers.

4. Rate of tax will be 1½ percent for employer and employee beginning January 1st, 1951, remaining at this rate until the end of 953. For 1954-59 it will be 2 percent on each.

5. Payment of the tax will be made quarterly, by the employer, to the collecter of Internal Revenue.

According to an explanatory issued by the Federal Security Agency in Washington, said Mr. Shurts, the monthly retirements benefits are paid at age 65, if the worker is fully insured. Monthly survisors benefits are payable at death if the worker was either fully or currently insured. If the workers was fully insured, benefits may be paid to his dependent children under 18, to his widow if she is caring for his children, to his widow who is age 65 or over, and sometime to his dependent aged parents.

When the benefit formula in the new law is used, the old-age benefit amount will be one-half of the average monthly wage for persons with an average monthly wage of $100.00 or less. For those whose wages average between $100. and $300, the benefit amount will be between one-half and one-fourth of the average monthly wage.

It is hoped, said Mr. Shurts, that this information will assist both employer and employee in understanding the newly amended social security act as it affects agriculture in Hancock County.

WATCH HOGS NOW FOR SIGNS OF FLU

Make Sure Pigs Aren't Sleeping Out Of Doors

Sudden weather changes at this time of year are an important factor in the outbreak of hog flu, according to Dr. D. B. Radloff, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Pigs get used to sleeping outside during the summer and are slow to change their habits when nights get cold. The result can be flu which hits fast and can spread through a whole herd in a hurry. Radloff suggests keeping a watchful eye on pigs at this time of the year to see that they come into dry, warm quarters to sleep.

Swine flu may be confused with hog cholera. If there is any doubt, Radloff says to call a veterinarian.

Steps To Take

Pigs with flu run a high temperature. This makes them thirsty, so Radloff says there should be an ample supply of drinking water where hogs can reach it easily.

Sick pigs need plenty of dry bedding and well ventilated houses. Radloff recommends taking pigs sick with flu off corn for a few days and feeding oats. Guiacol added to the drinking water will help relieve coughing. Some of the new sulfas mixed with water cuts down the chances of secondary pneumonia and will hasten recovery.

Flu usually lasts about 4 to 6 days, but there's danger of secondary pneumonia unless good care and management are practiced, Radloff warns.

LENA SCHROEDER GIVEN A SURPRISE PARTY AT THE ARNOLD HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Arnold successfully carried out a birthday surprise party in honor of Mrs. Lena Schroeder Thursday evening.

Mrs. Schroeder frequently baby sits at the Arnold home and when she was asked to come for the evening she gave it no more thought. In the meantime Mrs. Arnold had invited a number of ladies to the party and when Mrs. Schroeder appeared to care for the Arnold children, she saw the many ladies in the living room who promptly sang "Happy Birthday." It was a complete surprise for Mrs. Schroeder.

The evening was spent playing rook, after which all enjoyed a nice lunch. Mrs. Arnold had the table decorated with colored fall leaves with a decorated birthday cake as the center-piece. Mrs. Arnold had baked and decorated the cake, white with pink and blue decorations and "Happy Birthday Greetings" and served with ice cream, strawberries, tea and coffee.

Mrs. Schroeder was presented with a basketfull of birthday cards and each card contained a nice handkerchief. She wishes to thank Mrs. Arnold for having such a nice party for the elder people.

WES HAEFNER INJURED IN BUZZ SAW LAST WEDNES.

While cutting wood at the Wm. Thiel farm at the southeast edge of Klemme last Wednesday afternoon, Wes Haefner was seriously injured. The blade of the saw cut into the upper part of his left arm clear through the bone.

Mr. Haefner was given first aid by a local doctor and then taken in Wellemeyer's ambulance to a Mason City hospital where the bone was pinned back together and his wounds sewed up. He is getting along fine at this time.

Mr. Haefner does not know exactly how the accident happened. It is thought the saw frame suddenly jumped and tilted when the blade struck his upper arm near the shoulder.

FARM FIRES STILL ARE ON INCREASE

Iowa Had 504 Last Year, But Only 443 In 1948

Death and property loss from fire on the nation's farms is higher today than ever before. For this reason, Fire Prevention Week, October 8-14, should be important to U. S. farmers this year, says Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College.

On Iowa farms the picture is slightly brighter but only from death standpoint. Fire claimed 46 lives in 1948 but dropped to 38 in 1949. On the other hand, the number of fires climbed from 443 in 1948 to 504 in 1949.

Because this threat to farm living is generally on the increase, the Extension is cooperating with national safety officials by reminding farmers to watch for fire hazards.

Reports from Iowa's elementary school children have shown that many fire hazards exist on farms. In a fire prevention program carried out through their schools the children found 4,045 fire hazards on 3,498 farms, or an average of more than one hazard on every farm that could easily cause fire, Wardle points out.

The most common fire hazard that Iowa school children found on farms was a lack of protection from lightning. This also happens to be the main cause of fires on Iowa farms.

Fire hazards in defective chimneys, around stoves and furnaces were second among those most often found, and likewise ranked second in the cause of farm fires.

Hazards from electric wiring have been found to be increasing too. The school children also reported extra additions being made on farm wiring systems. These additions are often made in such a way that they are fire hazards and likely to start a blaze at any time.

Although keeping a farm free of fire hazards is a year-around job, Wardle thinks it's a good idea to take an extra special look around during Fire Prevention Week, just to make sure that some hazards haven't been slipping by before.

Radium is 3,000 times as valuable as gold.

According to surveyor's measure, 36 square miles comprise a township.

The high-light of the evening was a "scavenger hunt" in which the young folks had a lot of fun.

SEEK UNIFORM ASSESSMENT IN IOWA

Assessors from 11 North Iowa counties met at the courthouse in Garner for a regular meeting of the North Central group

The group discussed the price guide recently adopted by a committee appointed by President Richard Cherney to formulate an aid to abtaining uniform assessments throughout Iowa in the 1951 personal property assessments. Ervin Christensen, Emmet County assessor, reported on manuals being used in various other states. The next meeting of the group will be held on November 15th.

Canning For Keeps—No Reason For FOOD SPOILAGE

Gleaming jars of fruits and vegetables on the shelf—will they keep throughout the winter months, or will some of them show signs of spoilage? Food specialists say spoilage is preventable.

On your last trip to the cellar, did you check to see if your jars of tomatoes were all right or if any of them might be "working?" Or did you happen to wonder why that particular jar of peas looked cloudy?

Perhaps your canning comes through each winter season without a "bad" jar in the lot, and then again, perhaps you've had some jars which spoiled. Did you put it down to bad luck?

Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College, says "remember that putting food in sterile jars or cans and processing it as recommended doesn't absolutely guarantee that food will be sterile. You destroy bacteria which would cause spoilage under ordinary conditions, but you may not catch some highly-stubborn bacteria. If they survive, they're all set to start growing again if the environment is just right."

That environment might be the warm air high in the kitchen cupboards where you keep the canned food handy but out of the way. Or perhaps, it is the damp, warm temperature of the basement. Best storage areas are clean, dry, dark and cool.

Less Spoilage

Fortunately there's less spoilage among home canned foods than there used to be That's due to a number of reasons. The pressure canner has come into common use. We can get our equipment and foods cleaner with running water in the kitchen. And more women are using tested and approved canning methods.

The most common types of food spoilage are: molds, flat sour, "swells" (the tomatoes "work"), fermentation and putrefaction. What happens depends on whether the troublemaker is a mold, yeast or some type of bacteria.

Some bacteria are harmless some are toxic. Some heat-loving bacteria (thermophilic) will thrive in warm temperatures, 100 to 130 degrees F. Others mesophilic) grow readily in ordinary room temperature and only in the absence of air Another kind prefers the acidity of canned tomatoes or tomato juice.

Work Quickly

Your canning rules say "work quickly with small amounts of food at one time and use only high quality fruits and vegetables." A main reason for his advice is that by working quickly and carefully, and with good food, you keep down the bacteria "load." Some bacteria form spores (tiny seedlike organisms) which can withstand a great deal of heat; others do not. But the more bacteria or spores you have to contend with, the higher the temperature must be to destroy them Bacteria are more easily destroyed in the presence of acid as in fruits or tomatoes). That is why you can use the hot water bath method to can those foods. But when canning low acid foods (meat and vegetables) always use a pressure canner to reach very high temperatures.

Never, Miss Graham cautions, use the oven to can. In the first place, it cannot heat the food hot enough to kill dangerous bacteria. (Spoilage may not show up right away.) Also, there is extreme danger of explosion. The steam heat building up within the jar, in contrast to the dry heat outside the jar, gives an ideal situation for jars to explode. Homes have been wrecked this way.

Third Grade News

Our dental cards have been coming back very rapidly. The boys and girls are having a race to see which group will be the first to have theirs in. At the present time the boys are ahead.

One of our boys, Billy Greiman brought a beautiful fall bouquet to school. The vase is made out of a gourd, which has been hollowed out. The outside of the gourd is painted in many pastel shades. To add to the attractiveness he has painted different weeds, such as the milk weed pod, golden rod and many others. He also has added a few stacks of wild rice which adds to the beauty of the bouquet.

We had one birthday in our room this week, and that was Gordan Lasshan's.

Fourth Grade News

On Wednesday the fourth grade welcomed a new girl to their class. Her name is Carol Ann Pavey. This new addition brings the class enrollment up to seventeen We now have seven girls and ten boys.

The dental cards returned since the beginning of the school year are those of Myrna Barz Mardell and Marlin Stadtlander.

Everyone liked the farm we built of cardboard boxes, but today we must take it down and after Halloween we want to start a new project.

We have a Cleanliness Inspection Patrol. If we pass inspection for a whole week we get a badge. Those getting badges this week are Myrna Barz, Virginia Kudje, Jerry Lee LaFavre Craig Larson, Cozette Lau, Carroll Priebe, Dorothy Roul, Mardell and Marlin Stadtlander and Carol Ann Pavey.

Fifth Grade News

The fifth grade elected their new officers for this six weeks They are as follows:

President ---------- Roger Olson
Reporter ---------- Joan Christie
Duster ---------- Sandra Medin
Erasers ---------- Joyce Lassahn
Librarian ---------- Douglas Roul
Waste Paper ---------- Larry Ulrich

Writing reports for language has been very interesting. The boys and girls gave these reports orally before the class Each child wrote a report about one pioneer topic in a booklet.

We now have six dental cards turned in.

Sixth Grade News

The sixth grade boys and girls have been busy in science and health taking tests and working experiments. We have learned how air works for us.

We have been working division problems with three numbers in the quotients. We learned if we check our work we have better grades.

The art class made paper sack men last Friday and decorated their faces and some even made costumes for their men. We have also been learning to draw trees.

The sixth grade dipped leaves in wax for decorating the room.

—Betty Schlawin

Seventh Grade News

Our little world series of grades ended. The champions were as follows: eighth grade boys and seventh grade girls.

We had five perfect spelling papers In science we are starting to read a new book entitled "The Wonder World Of Science" Our room has been in very nice order this past week. We wish to thank the parents and friends who came and visited our room. We extend a welcome again for anyone to visit our class.

—Mr. Beenken

Eighth Grade News

The class has finished the story of their lives entitled "History of My Life." These booklets were on display during the "Open House" last Wednesday evening. This book was an autobiography and contained pictures and all. Everybody including students took great interest in working on these booklets.

Dick Dulmes and Terry Koerner turned in their dental cards during the past week, making a total of five turned in so far. Lets be the first to be 100%.

Open house on Wednesday of last week was a big success with a great number of parents attending. This was a very good get together and a chance to meet the parents.

Our grade series softball tournament concluded on Thursday with the following results:

Boys

5th (4) ---------- 7th (10)
8th (7) ---------- 6th (5)

Championship

8th (14) ---------- 7th (12)

Girls

8th (18) ---------- 5th (6)
6th (1) ---------- 7th (10)

Championship

8th (6) ---------- 7th (8)

Our motto this week is:
"He that seeketh--findeth."

Hunters Returned

When John Junko and Lawler Carsteen Steen and Ed. Hamann of Decorah returned recently from a hunting trip in the Yukon territory of Canada, they had bagged two moose, two caribou and three grizzly bears One set of moose antlers measured 62 inches.

MANY HUMAN DISEASES TRANSMITTED BY RATS

When rats run around the farm they do more than destroy property — they threaten the health of farm families.

Iowa State College extension entomologist Harold Gunderson reports there are a host of human diseases that are transmitted by rats. Some of these have just recently been attributed to rats. For example, salmonella food inspection, a common food poisoning, has been traced directly to rats. They have found to be common carriers of this infection.

Then there's tularemia, which most Iowans call rabbit fever. Here again, the rat can be blamed. Rats also spread rabies and trichinosis.

Histopiasmosis, a fever disease, and leptospirosis, a summer fever comparable to yellow fever, are two more diseases that rats can carry onto the farm.

These are only the more common diseases transmitted by rats, according to the State Department of Health officals and Iowa State College entomologists who work together in rat control. In addition, there is haverhill fever, plague, Q fever, ratbite fever, relapsing fever, ringworm, typhus fever, amebiasis, dwarf tapeworm infection, and cerebral meningitis.

There are some pretty good reasons for Iowans to launch an all-out campaign to exterminate the rat, Gunderson says.

ABSENT VOTER'S BALLOTS AVAILABLE

The County Auditor, Maynard Schoneman states that applications for absent voters ballots may be made this week at his office. Applications must be made in person 15 days before election, November 7th. If applying by mail, the application must be signed by the applicant. The ballots have to be back in the Auditor's office by November 6th, in order to be counted.

PREVENT PICKER ACCIDENTS BY CHECKING PICKERS BEFORE YOU START

The first steps for a safe corn season should begin at the machine shed before the picker goes to the field, Paul Henderson, County extension director, pointed out today.

He has information from Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College, that indicated failure to use safety devices and pickers that don't work properly in the field are major causes of picker accidents on Hancock County farms.

A check now to see that the shields for the power take-off and other moving parts are in their places might save a tangled leg or arm the day the picker is given a trial run in the field. The same applies to replacemen of other badly worn or broken parts. Makeshift repairs made hurriedly in the field take time and trouble, and can cause accidents, Henderson says.

The hitch and the tractor seat need to be securely fastened, and handy mounts for the grease gun and fire extinguisher should be installed where they are easy to get at.

Henderson emphasizes that the important thing out in the field is to stop the picker completely before trying to clean or adjust it. A farmer should never try to clean trash out of a machine while it is in motion.

It is also a good idea to clean out the picker before the clogging gets too bad. It's easier to remove the cause of trouble if it is taken care of quickly and it reduces the temptation to leave the machine running while the job is being done.

Another safety precaution Henderson urges taking, is keeping the manifolds and exhausts free from any chaff that might accumulate on them. This will help prevent fires.

Other fire prevention measures are tight fuel line connections, and a metal sediment bulb. This type of bulb is better than a glass one because it won't break.

Won Ribbons

Fred Fullmer's hogs scored 100 percent at the Iowa Hampshire association show recently. The Belle Plaine farmer entered three hogs and each won a ribbon; a red, a white and a blue.

For Family Meals Choose—

CHEESE TO PLEASE

For good eating any time of day or evening, cheese is always ready to serve, tops in food value, and a tasty companion for fruits and nuts. More than that, cheese can be the main-stay for casserole dishes you prepare when the weather is chilly and appetites keen.

Just when menus need an extra tang, some added zip and energy, cheese comes into the limelight. Of course, it's one of our best year-around foods for it fits easily into springtime, summer or wintertime meals, but right now when family appetites are sure to be keener, cheese proves how good and how healthful it can be. It packs high quality protein, plus calcium, riboflavin, and vitamin A into our diets. So it's good news that cheese, so full of food value, and so tasty, is one of our most abundant foods on the market this fall. More American are eating cheese all the time, and yet cheese production is at a record high.

Many Varieties

There are 18 to 20 different types of cheese, but within these types there are more than 400 varieties. Most Iowa homemakers are familiar with cheddar cheese, but perhaps it isn't as well known that American cheddar comes in several different sizes and forms. The original form, known as "cheddar," is a cylinder weighing about 70 pounds. A "twin" is half as deep as a cheddar. A "daisy" is a round form, weighing about 20 pounds, and a "Longhorn" is a long cylinder, weighing about 12 pounds.

Any of these will come in "aged" or "less aged" cheese depending on how long they have been cured.

Natural cheese cured by natural fermenting is made into 'processed' cheese by grinding it quite fine, heating and adding milk or emulsifying materials which make the product soft and smooth so it spreads readily. Either cheddar or process cheese work rapidly into casserole dishes, souffles, custards and sandwiches. For salads, the tangy cheeses (camembert roquefort and edam) are excellent. Swiss, with its nut-like flavor, is best eaten as is, along with fruits or other deserts.

Abundant Too

Other foods, abundant right now, in addition to fresh fruits, are onions and cabbage. Either one of these foods is excellent when prepared in combination with cheese, suggest nutrition specialists, Iowa State College. For some tasty main dishes they suggest:

Scalloped Vegetables

Pour cheese sauce over fresh-cooked or left-over vegetables—snap beans, carrots, turnips, pear, corn Put in a shallow baking dish, cover with bread crumbs, bake until crumbs are brown and the vegetables heated through.

Baked Eggs With Cheese

Break eggs into a well-greased shallow baking dish. Dot with fat, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with milk. Then sprinkle with grated or shaved cheese and dry bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven until eggs are set and crumbs are brown.

A note on wise cookery, the specialist point out, is never to use a high temperature when preparing cheese dishes. Cheese is a concentrated protein food which becomes tough and leathery when temperatures are too hot. Thus all cooked foods involving cheese, should be prepared at a moderate to low temperature.

CATTLE TO BE FED OUT ON GRASS NEED SHELTER

Feeder cattle bought this fall for pasturing next summer need shelter during the winter and enough feed to gain about 1 lb. per day if they are young, says Rex Beresford, extension beef cattle specialist at Iowa State College.

Then the yearlings can go on pasture in a gaining condition next spring and grass gains will be larger. This is important whether the cattle are sold as grass fats or put onto feed later in the summer.

Older cattle intended for grazing the following year will sometimes show a profit if they are wintered only on stalk fields or other low grade roughage, but calves or yearlings can't do it.

Young feeder cattle bought this fall for grain fattening next year will put on the necessary fall and early winter gains if they are turned onto cornstalks and good fall pasture. Then winter them on quality hay and enough corn and cob meal so they'll gain from three quarters to 1 pound per day, Beresford advises.

When grass gets nutritious next spring, these thriving cattle can be turned in for about 2 months of pasturing without corn. Then full feed corn and cob meal until the grass gets poor. Finish out with 70 to 90 days in drylot.

It probably will take 90 to 100 days in the drylot if no grain is added to the grass ration during summer months. Drylot finishing can be shortened to 30 or 40 days if farmers keep grain before their feeder catle all during the time they are on grass.

CORN PRICES LIKELY TO RISE

While large amounts of soft corn may cause a market drop in that grain at picking time, corn prices are expected to average higher than last year, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

Soft or high moisture corn is ineligible for loans and is likely to be cleaned up rapidly through feed lot operations. This probably will cause a greater than usual price rise during late winter and spring, and the farmers with sound corn will be wise to hold for late winter sale, the economist believes.

Although the national loan rate is 7 cents above the 1949 figure he expects corn to average at or above these loan levels later in the year.

The nation's corn production is estimated at 3,163 million bushels and with 950 million bushels being carried over, the total corn supply is expected to be second only to last year's record amount.

Poor crops in foreign corn growing countries, however, may raise the export demand for the United States feed grains. The last Argentine crop was a failure, and reports of sharply reduced yields in the Danube Basin area point to an increase in corn exports, the economist reports.

Industrial uses of corn also may be stepped up, with alchohol production already on the rise to meet expanding defense needs.

IOWA TRAPPING SEASON ANNOUNCED

The State Conservation Commission has announced a split trapping season opening noon November 10th for 60 days on "long-haired" burbearing animals, and opening noon November 25th for 15 days on muskrat, beaver and mink.

A special 30-day season was set on muskrat and mink opening noon November 25th and closing December 24th at Midnight on the Mississippi River north Muscatine city limits to the Minnesota line, east of the Milwaukee railroad tracks. Special regulations for muskrat and mink trapping on Big Wall Lake, in Wright County, were set, with the season opening at noon November 25th and closing at midnight December 1st.

Protected fur-bearing animals on which the Commission has declared a 60-day open season include raccoon, opossum, skunk, badger and spotted skunk. There in a continous open season on wesel, red fox, gray fox, ground hog, and wolf-coyote, and a continuous closed season on otter.

The state-wide 15-day open season on beaver is the firs in modern history. Thirty-three counties were open in 1949 to beaer trapping for 7 days.

Fur prospects were considered good for all species except muskrat and mink, which were considered fair by Commission biologists.

Hamburger is so called because it originated in Hamburg, Germany.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Ten Key Men Direct Activities Of U.S. Department of State

This is the last of six articles on the state department and its personnel by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

By WALTER A. SHEAD

Washington, D. C.—If you know the top men in any organization whether it be a lodge, fraternal organization, business organization, bank, or a government agency, you can judge fairly well the type and kind of personnel that go to make up that organization. Particularly is this true of top men in government who necessarily live in a glass house of publicity.

Any person who has met and talked to Secretary of State Dean Acheson is impressed by his earnestness, his sincerity, his intelligence and his integrity. The son of an Episcopalian minister, he was born in Middletown, Connecticut, April 11, 1893. He is a graduate of Groton and Harvard with honorary degrees from Yale and Wesleyan. He is a member of the law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson and Shorb in Washington and a member of many important clubs. He has a farm near Sandy Spring, Maryland, where he lives and which is his hobby. If you have a picture in your mind of a suave, highly polished diplomat, never ill at ease, never at a loss for a word, who does not know the words "quit" or "can't", then you have a picture of Dean Acheson.

His next in command is Under Secretary James E. Webb, a native of Granville county, North Carolina. He is a former marine corps major, tall, athletic and a fighter. He is former director of the federal budget and was with the Sperry corporation before coming into government service, and is a recognized master at organization. He is a law graduate of George Washington University, a member of many clubs and well known business organizations.

Ambassador at Large Philip C. Jessup is a native New Yorker, a graduate of Hamilton college, Yale and Columbia universities. He served as lecturer on international law both at Columbia and Hamilton and as assistant to Elihu Root at the conference of jurists on the permanent court of international justice at Geneva in 1929. He has served his country in scores of international meetings and conferences and was named ambassador at large in March, 1949, for special assignments throughout the world in negotiations with other governments. He is of Irish-English ancestry and his great-grandfather, Judge William Jessup, was a delegate to the Republican convention in 1860 and chairman of the committee which drafted the platform upon which Lincoln was elected.

JOHN E. PEURIFOY, deputy assistant secretary of state and in charge of personnel and administration of the entire department, has been in the department since 1938 serving in various capacities. He is a native of Walterboro, South Carolina, and attended the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, American and George Washington universities. Prior to his entry into the department he was engaged in the insurance business for the Kansas City Joint Stock Land Bank and the American Surety company of New York.

Willard L. Thorp, a native of Oswego, New York, was educated at Amherst, the University of Michigan and Columbia. He is assistant secretary in charge of economic affairs. He is an economic expert, a former director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in the department of commerce and a former partner of Dunn & Bradstreet.

Edward W Barrett as assistant secretary in charge of public affairs acts as sort of general manager and directs the office of international information and educational exchange. He was born in Birmingham, Alabama, is a former newspaper reporter and radio man and was editorial director of Newsweek.

Jack K. McFall was a navy commander during World War II. He is assistant secretary and has charge of congressional relations. He spent fifteen years as clerk of the house appropriations committee. Born in Tacoma, Washington, he lived in Colorado and Indiana and is a graduate of Georgetown and National universities.

George W. Perkins, assistant secretary in charge of the bureau of European affairs, is a native of New York, an army colonel, a graduate of Princeton, and was executive secretary to former postmaster Gen. Will H. Hays. He is a trustee of Princeton University and wears the Legin of Merit badge.

John Hickerson of Texas is an assistant secretary in charge of the bureau of United Nations affairs. His is a foreign service officer of 25 years experience, a graduate of the University of Texas and a lecturer since 1928 on diplomacy and consular practice at the Georgetown University school of foreign service.

George McGhee, also of Texas, is director of the bureau of near eastern, south Asian and Farican affairs. He is a geologist, formerly with a Dallas firm. He is a former naval air combat intelligence officer, saw service at Iwo Jima and Guam with the 21st bomber command, and has the legion of merit and three battle stars.

These are some of the top men in the state department, their background and the field of their service.

THE FICTION CORNER

SOUCOOK MASSACRE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

CHARLIE Poe lived by his wits. Not because he had to but because he liked to. I could name a half dozen jobs he had been offered, all legitimate, all of which he turned down. He couldn't bear the thought of routine and being tied down.

I met him unexpectedly one day last summer in Boston.

3-Minute Fiction

"Not doing anything," he said when I questioned him.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"Looking for something," he confessed.

"If you've nothing lined up," I suggested, "how about taking a ride up country with me? I'm making a two-day trip to Burlington."

"Like to," he said.

We started the next morning. Charlie wasn't the cheerful companion I anticipated. Obviously there was something on his mind.

Halfway across New Hampshire we came to a place alongside the road where a dozen or more cars were parked. A sign proclaimed the reason. "Visit the site of the famous Soucook Indian massacre," the sign read. "Nothing like it anywhere. Free lecture. Offers much by way of historical value. A scene you won't forget. Admission 25 cents."

"Stop!" said Charlie. I stopped. We got out and walked over to a shelter beneath which a man was selling tickets.

The man with the tickets saw us and urged us to buy, eloquently elaborating on his printed sign. Charlie dug into his pocket and produced a half dollar. Presently about 20 people had purchased tickets and the man got down off his stool and led us through the gate.

We followed him along the path. He talked as we progressed. By the time we reached our objective we were all steamed up with apprehension.

Halfway across New Hampshire we came to a place a sign proclaimed the site of the famous Soucook Indian massacre.

We had entered a small clearing. Beyond it was a ledge, overhanging a shallow gorge through which a trickle of water flowed. We stood on the ledge while our guide told us how, 250 years ago, a detachment of militiamen had pursued a band of 20 Indians through the forest. Hard put, the Indians came to this ledge. Below them was the gorge, at that time a good many times deeper than now. Thus the redskins had their choice of leaping into the gorge or being shot.

IT was a gruesome tale. We were all silent and impressed as we made our way back to the cars.

"That," said Charlie, "is the best gag I've ever seen."

"Maybe," I said, "but how can that guy prove any such thing happened there?"

"How can the tourists prove it didn't?" Charlie asked. "And what do they care. That chap knew what they wanted and he gave it to them. They were satisfied." He became thoughtful.

Charlie didn't mention the Soucook massacre again during our trip, but I suspected it was on his mind. When he left me in Boston two days later he shook hands warmly.

"Where are you off to now?" I asked him.

"Oh, the western plan of mine is still rankling." He grinned. "See you around."

Late in September I had occasion to go north again. Traveling the same route that Charlie and I had taken, I remembered the Soucook Massacre. The shelter was still there and there were cars parked outside. But a different man was selling tickets. The man was Charlie.

"How about this?" I asked.

He grinned. "You gave me the idea," he said. "Remember you wanted to know how the guy could prove the massacre happened here? Well, I asked him, at the same time flashing a tin badge I sometimes carry around. He decided to move on."

"Is that sort of thing ethical in your profession?" I asked.

"Sure. We're all suckers. Some of us are smarter. The guy was getting fed up anyhow. So am I. Some day somebody is going to ask me to prove that massacre story. If I'm smart enough I'll be gone before he gets here."

Suits Him to a Tee

"It must be nice to own a chain of stores."

"Yes; you can spend all your time on the links."

JEAN Simmons, newly arrived from England to help promote producer Sidney Box' "Trio", suggested that perhaps there was something wrong with her face—"Because I've looked like myself in only one picture." But her beauty has been triumphant whether she appeared as the native girl in "Black Narcissus" or the pale "Ophelia" in "Hamlet", with Olivier. Only 22, she has honestly earned stardom by giving one excellent performance after another, during the eight years since she was chosen for her first part. And that break came as a surprise, when she and her older sister were aiming at a career as dancing teachers.

Frieda Catches Flu, but the Germ Turns on Charlie

By BILLY ROSE

For as long as I can remember, my Uncle Charlie has been complaining of good health—not his own, mind you, but my Aunt Frieda's.

For 40 winters, to hear him tell it, he has been an easy mark for colds, catarrhs and rheumatic pains, while his wife has never developed so much as a sniffle.

Last February, when I dropped in to see them at their Allen Street flat, Charlie was in bed, runny-eyed and carmine-nosed.

"What gives!" I asked.

"What always gives?" said my uncle. "Your aunt loses the flu, I find it. She's got a constitutional like a horse."

Billy Rose

Frieda was in the kitchen warming up a plaster. "Like a pastrami sandwich she treats me," said Charlie. "I'm all over mustard. Every reasonable woman lays down in bed once in a while. But not her—she won't give me the satisfaction. . . ."

• • •

MY FAVORITE relatives came to this country around the time Teddy Roosevelt was elected, and the voyage over, according to Charlie, was the roughest in the history of navigation. It took 23 days and even the captain was seasick. Frieda was the only one on board who ate regularly, and she gained an average of a pound a day. When the helmsman took to his bunk—still according to Charlie— it was she who took the wheel. As for my uncle, he spent the entire trip with his head sticking out of a porthole and, the weather being what it was, it was a miracle he wasn't drowned.

Because of this apparent immunity to disease, Frieda has always been one of the favorite daughters of the East Side, especially when any of the neighbors are ill. For years now, she's been carrying soup and solace to their homes, tending their kids and lecturing family doctors on their therapeutic shortcomings.

"Herself, she don't get sick, but to me she brings back the germs," is the way Charlie explains her.

• • •

A FEW DAYS AGO, however, my uncle telephoned and, without bothering to suppress the triumph in his voice, said, "Frieda is flat like a pancake. She's got a flu, with complications yet."

"I'll send my doctor down," I said, "and I'll be around in the morning."

But when I walked up the three flights to their apartment the following day, the door was opened by an obviously in-the-pink Frieda.

"What are you doing out of bed?"

My aunt motioned me in, and in the bedroom, propped up on pillows as usual, was Charlie.

"What happened?"

"What should happen?" said Frieda. "Your uncle got overheated running up and down the stairs like a chicken."

"I thought you had the flu."

"Oh, that," said Frieda. "I fixed it with a guggle-muggle."

For the benefit of the uninitiate, a "guggle-muggle" is an old East Side remedy composed of warm milk, egg, honey, cinnamon and whiskey.

"Wish your uncle happy returns," said Frieda. "It's his birthday."

"Yea, it's my birthday," groaned Charlie, "and for a present she gave me her flu."

What's Your Intake?

Lesson for October 29, 1950

FEW PEOPLE would care for a diet of sawdust, mixed with old bacon rinds and with carbolic acid for a drink. Yet some people who are very careful of what goes into their stomachs are astonishingly careless about the intake of their minds.

Dr. Foreman

What goes into your mind counts for more, and lasts longer, than what goes into your mouth. What you eat can kill you—your body, that is; but what you think, what you read, what you hear, can kill your mind. It can even kill your soul. You can afford to be particular Down at the Cracked Cup Cafe they give you no choice. If you don't like the 50c dinner you can walk out; and if you are at all particular you will walk out. But at the best restaurants you are offered a wide choice, and the experienced diner-out will read the menu carefully before ordering.

Are you a Christian? Then don't feed your mind at the mental equivalent of the Cracked Cup Cafe. Go to a better spot. The beauty of food for the mind is that the best costs no more. The best foods for the table are rather expensive; the best mind-foods, soul-foods, are not.

• • •

Ear-Gate

IS WHAT you listen to, good for your mind? What's your intake, by ear? A woman who had roomed in another woman's house for some time was looking for a new place. Her old room was inexpensive, sunny, convenient, clean; there was nothing wrong with the room. But she had to listen to the landlady every day, and from her she never heard good of any one.

"If I stay there any longer I shall go crazy," the roomer confided to a friend. "She'll get me to thinking the way she does, and she thinks everybody's a crook."

In Tennyson's "Idyls of the King" is that fine rule of the Round Table: "To speak no slander—no, nor listen to it . . . " Listening to slander, trash, mean and malicious gossip, day after day, is bound to have a serious effect on any one's mind.

• • •

Eye-Gate

THE STRANGE thing is that Christians can be seen taking the greatest of pains picking out the right food for their dogs and cats, and yet never exercising the least choice in what comes into their minds by ear or eye. They will let the radio run on hour after hour, they look at whatever the television puts on the screen,—the dirty with the clean, the trash with the jewels (if any). They read the newspapers from front to back, or vice versa, they read all the comics whether they are amusing or not. But when it comes to picking out something good for their minds, really going to the trouble of selection, and paying out folding money for it, how many, even Christian people, will do it?

It would be interesting to compare what most people spend on quite unnecessary stuff like soft drinks and cigarettes, with what they spend for books in a year's time. Would you like to sit down with a great and good man or woman and let him talk to you by the hour, to give you the best of his mind and heart? It can always be done—with a good book. Not, usually, the best sellers!

An intelligent Christian woman recently had to move almost a thousand miles; when you move that far and have to pay by the pound for what you take, you screen your stuff pretty carefully. "I am throwing away all my best sellers," she said. "There's not a one worth wasting freight on." She was right about most best-sellers. But the old-time, long-time, all-time best seller of them all is the Christian Bible.

Is Your Mind a Vacant Lot?

IT IS MORE than a question of what you read and see and hear. An even more serious question is: What do you think about? Good reading, even the Bible, was never meant to be a substitute for thought. One of the great books of ancient times was "Consolations of Philosophy," written by a man in jail without a book in his cell. But the fine books he had read were in his head and heart, and when he became a political prisoner, alone and poor and friendless, his mind was still a garden. What is your mind—a garden, or a desert, or only a vacant lot littered with junk?

Ratio of Elders Doubles in Century

The ratio of elders to those at the main working years of life has doubled in the United States during the past century, and has increased by nearly two thirds since 1900.

One hundred years ago there were only about six persons at age 65 or older for each 100 of the population at 20 to 64. By 1900 the ratio had climbed to eight, and since then it has risen even more rapidly and is now 13.

Although the segment of the population at 65 or over has been increasing, the relative importance of the dependent population as a whole has declined, due to a rapid drop in the ratio of children to the population at the main productive ages. The number of children under 18 per 100 persons at ages 20-64 has been cut in half, from 107 in 1850 to about 54 in 1950.

In very recent years, however, due to the war and postwar spurt in the birth rate, this trend has been reversed and the child population has increased at a more rapid rate than people at ages 20-64. This will continue for at least a decade, even if allowance is made for a steady decline in the birth rate from its present level, and at the same time the population at the older ages will continue its long-term upward climb.

As a result, we are entering a period when the country will have to provide for the expanding social and economic needs of both its large child and aged populations, each growing at a faster rate than the population at the main working ages.

BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN

Soviet Satellites Use Propaganda To Discredit West's Democracies

The often ridiculous propaganda charges made by Russian satellites from behind the Iron Curtain have provided the American people with a number of chuckles in this time of world crisis. But there are other items of news that are not so amusing and give a true indication of how the people are fed a constant diet of propaganda. An organization which calls itself the National Committee for a Free Europe has compiled a few.

Letters from Poland, for instance, smuggled into this country via Austria, report the growing prestige and popularity of Gen. Douglas MacArthur among the Poles. Many still remember the general's visit to Poland prior to World War II. His role in the Korean war has aroused a wave of enthusiasm and admiration which the Communist press tries to counteract by denunciations of the famous American.

Among the methods used to discredit him is to charge him with reactionary and fascist tendencies, cowardly behavior, and a policy of personal enrichment in the Phillippines. He has also been accusod of leniency toward Japanese war criminals and especially Emperor Hirohito.

Solidarity Preached

In Hungary the press is preaching solidarity with North Korea. The Szabad Nep, published in Budapest, said in July that there was no special, made-to-order peace for that country. The newspaper said: "If houses are ablaze in Korea, then our homes are endangered, too. And if a neighbor's house is on fire, it is our duty to help him.

"The Korean people have shown that the eastern border of our peace camp can withstand any onslaught victoriously. A solidarity which has burst into flames in the fire of battle is sweeping all strata of our people. We will and shall take up our stand on the western border of the peace camp. . . ."

Another article in the same newspaper reported "the name of the FBI creates a feeling of fear and horror in every average American."

"No one is sure," the article continued, "when he might be seized by the secret police at his work, in his home, or even in the street. There is no protection against the FBI. Its charges are based on secret information, anonymous letters and denunciations.

"In the American 'democracy' a man has only to utter a careless remark, some criticism of the Marshall Plan to his neighbor, and he will be pounced upon by the FBI, his colleagues and his boss questioned; he will be smeared, accused, fired from his job and only too often ruined. . . ."

The Hungarian press also reported: "Pope Pius XII has acquired the agency for Coca cola in Italy. This beverage is harmful but yields great profit to those who sell it. It seems indeed that it has been especially invented for the Vatican."

Another of the ridiculous items of Communist propaganda originates in Czechoslovakia. On June 28, 1950, the Czech government published a proclamation announcing that vast parts of Bohemia had been infested with Colorado beetles dropped by American airplanes.

On July 11, 1950, the ministry of foreign affairs presented two notes to the U. S. embassy, one protesting against alleged flights of American aircraft over Czechoslovak territory, the other reading.

"It has been irrefutably ascertained . . . that American planes have dropped large amounts of Colorado beetles on territories of the German democratic republic. An increasing number of the authorized flights of U. S. airplanes from the U. S. zone of Germany into Czechoslovakia shows clearly that the spreading of the Colorado beetles in this country is due to the same cause."

Tito Scorns West

A great many Americans seem to believe that because Soviet and Yugoslavia relations are somewhat strained we have a friend in Marshal Tito. But this is what Tito believes and preaches about western democracy:

"Where do we find true democracy? In Yugoslavia or in western countries? In Yugoslavia, democracy serves the large masses of the working people. The west is accusing us of not having true democracy, of being a police state, of living in misery.

"Indeed, we live in need of many goods and materials. Yet the essential difference between our democracy and the western way of life is that we aim at creating a high economic standard of living for everybody, not for a small minority as is the case in the west.

"What good is it to the man in the western countries that the warehouses are buldging with goods? All he gets is desire for their possession. But they are not for him. They are available only to a group of 'chosen' people who form the ruling class. The large masses of working men and women have to live without any of these goods.

"Theirs is a democracy of a minority. The workers live in dependency on this minority, they earn so little that they can never provide for even the essentials; or they are jobless and unable to assert democratic rights. The western countries are good for the rich 'upper-class' only, the working masses of the people exist merely to produce and supply wealth and prosperity for a few."

That doesn't sound like a friend to western democracy.

According to the propaganda handed out by countries behind the Iron Curtain their industries are models of efficiency. A recent report on conditions in the Iron and Steel Works at Jesenice in Yugoslavia would indicate otherwise.

Industry Has Problems

The report said the chief problem of "this industry is the accumulation of finished goods in the warehouses and the resulting immobilization of the working capital of the enterprise. Furthermore there is too much top-level personnel in relation to too few workers."

The report continued: "The problem of accumulated finished products existed in 1947, but the situation has worsened since. Whole sections of the plant were at times stuffed with finished goods. The consequent disorder and waste are incredible.

"Another cause of the present plight is shortage of manpower which stems mostly from inadequate housing provided for workers. The discipline among the workers leaves much to be desired, too. The workers come late and leave early, thus creating a loss of at least one work hour per day per man."

In the state owned mines at Velenje, miners had to perform 60 per cent of overtime work to make up for unjustified absenteeism among the rest of the mining crews.

And of the state owned farms, figures are just as disappointing in agricultural production.

Romania Prepares for War

Private reports from Greece, by reliable Romanians who recently left their country, convey the impression that Romania is getting ready for armed emergencies.

One report said: "All summer leaves for officers in the forces have been cancelled. Many reserve officers were recently called up. Allocation of freight cars for railway transportation of goods and agricultural products is subject to authorization of the general staff."

Romania is also concentrating on propaganda telling of alleged preparations for bacteriological warfare in the United States. One recent broadcast gave a good many details of names and places supposed to be engaged in preparing bacteriological weapons.

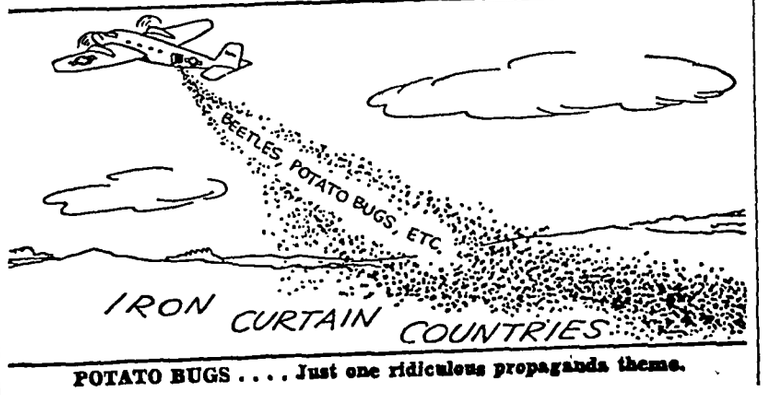
The broadcast announced that a central bacteriological station was situated at Camp Letwich in Maryland where the army maintained gigantic laboratories for testing typhus, plague and cholera germs. Other laboratories were asserted to be situated in Mississippi, Utah and Indiana.

One of the major dislikes of Communist countries is the Marshall Plan. The Polish press said recently:

"The Marshall Plan will expire in the spring of 1952, and Washington is looking for new ways of keeping the western European countries in a state of dependency. The plan itself has fallen so far into disrepute that it cannot be continued in its present form. Therefore it will be succeeded by the so-called "plan XX of integral defense" for the Atlantic treaty countries."

The Polish press is also down XX on the labor government of Great Britain. A recent article stated: "The labor government has now definitely proved to be no different from the warmongering policies of Winston Churchill."

These are but a few of the propaganda themes and methods of the countries behind the Iron Curtain.



POTATO BUGS . . . . Just one ridiculous propaganda theme.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Did you have a .22 rifle when you were a boy, or does your son have one now? They're a wonderful little weapon - accurate, handy, inexpensive. You can bring down squirrels from the high-tree or shoot rabbits clear over at the other side of a snow-covered field. A .22 is not too powerful; yet it can kill a human being.

Or how about shotguns? Take a .410 for example, the smallest of the shotguns. It's handy for squirrels and rabbits - quail, too, if you're quick and good. Mostly a small game gun, yet a .410 can blind you up to 300 yards. Nearer, say within 50 yards, a .410 can kill a person easily.

The big shotguns - the .12 gauge - is used, besides a favorite hunting gun, for killing men. In warfare, or with criminals, heavy buckshot is used, but ordinary birdshot can just as easily smash a hand or a foot or a head.

The hunting season in Iowa will be a good one this year. Ducks, quail and pheasants are reported all over the state. The seasons are long enough and the bag limits are adequate.

There are plenty of hunters, too - including you. Your Iowa Safety Congress wishes all of you luck in the field but reminds you - THERE'S NO BAG LIMIT ON HUMAN LIFE! A gun is safe only when properly used. Treat every gun as a loaded gun!

KANAWHAN HEADS THE HANCOCK COUNTY HEALTH COUNCIL

Oscar E. Johnson of Kanawha is the newly elected president of the Hancock County health council, having been elected at a recent meeting at the Hull Cafe dining room. Johnson succeeds Erwin L. Buck, who has served as president of the council for two years and announced his retirement.

Other officers elected are: County Home Economist, Elsie Mae VanWert, vice president, and Mrs. Oscar Johnson af Kanawha, secretary-treasurer.

Approximately 45 people attended the annual meeting which included the annual report of Hancock County health nurse, Mrs. Faye Svaeri, and a talk on the Iowa heart program by Dr. H. R. Rathe of Weverly, president of the Iowa Heart Association.

SCHMIDT STOCK YARDS OFFICE ENTERED BY THIEVES SATURDAY

Some time during the night Saturday the office of the Schmidt Stock Yards in the north part of town was entered by someone who gained entrance by unlocking the door.

Abiut $35 in cash was taken from the desk and a quantity of checks. Nothing else was disturbed. Sometime Sunday night the robber returned the checks, leaving them outside the office.

Sheriff "Dutch" Brower investigated the robbery Monday morning.

Evidently the stock yarts office was the only place in town that was entered. Clues indicate the job was done by local talent.

Jim Vrba, Liberty Farmer, Died Saturday With Final Rites Tuesday

JIM VRBA DIED SATURDAY EVENING IN MASON CITY HOSPITAL

Had Farmed West Of Klemme For The Past 16 Years

Mr. James Vrba, Liberty township farmer, was admitted to the Mercy Hospital at Mason City for treatment on October 11 and died Saturday evening, October 28th at 10:30 o'clock. Death was attributed to virus pneumonia.

Funeral services for Mr. Vrba were conducted from the St. Wenceslaus Catholic Church, with Requiam High Mass on Tuesday morning, October 31 at 10:00 o'clock with the Rev. Msgr. W. Hradecky in charge, and laid to rest in the St. Johns Catholic Church Cemetery at Duncan, Iowa. The Bohn Funeral Home of Garner was in charge of arrangements.

James Vrba, son of Thomas and Filomena Vrba was born in Bukova, Czechoslavakia on Jan. 22, 1892. At the age of 18 years he came to America. After spending one year in Chicago he came to Hancock County where in the vicinity of Duncan where he had lived.

On February 6, 1922 he was united in marriage to Louisa Wellik in the St. Wencelaus Catholic Church at Duncan with the Rev. Fr. Kopecky officiating. To this union one daughter, Marcella, was born.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Vrba located on a farm one mile east of Duncan, and later they purchased the Henry Suckow farm west of Klemme which they have farmed for 16 years.

James Vrba is survived by his good wife and his daughter, Mrs. Paul Thiel of Clarion, Iowa; three brothers: Joseph, Thomas and Frank all of Chicago and one brother Jacobs; also three sisters: Anna, Filomena and Mary who still live in their native land of Czeckoslavakia.

Those attending services from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vrba, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vrba and daughter Mrs. Blanche Uhlar, all of Chicago; Mr.and Mrs. Joe McGill and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Ledden of Fort Dodge, and Mrs. Mary Thiel of Clarion.

Those serving as Pall Bearers were Joe Hadacek, Hugh Hummel, Fred Pringnitz, James Drabek, Frank Fric and Edward Wellik.

BE ON GUARD FOR PICKER ACCIDENTS

Follow Safety Rules, Use All Safety Devices

Following a few commonsense safety rules and using available safety devices can cut down the number of accidents during the corn picking season this year.

Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College, reports that there were 260 corn harvest accidents in Iowa last year—193 with corn pickers, 27 with tractors, 23 with elevators and 10 with wagons.

Husking Rolls Biggest Offender

The husking rolls were involved in more of the picker accidents than any other part of the machine. They accounted for 41 percent of all picker accidents. Others were with the snapping rolls, power take-off gathering chains and the elevator in the picker.

"Using an unsafe method" was the main reason for most of the accidents, according to Wardle. Hurry, failure to use available safety devices, fatigue and lack of training were other contributing factors.

Follow These Rules

Wardle says a study if these accident statistics indicates several obvious safety rules that will cut the number of accidents during 1950.

In order of importance these are: (1) Always stop the snapping and husking rolls to clean them out; (2) Train new operators in proper operation of the machine; (3) be particularly cautious during mid-morning and mid-afternoon; (4) always keep the power take-off shield in place; (5) wear snug fitting clothes; (6) never adjust or lubricate the picker while the machine is running; (7) never use a stick or cornstalk to push clogs while the machine is running; (8) never take a chance, particularly when working late.

Mrs. Grosshuesch Enjoys Her Work At Marshalltown

The Times is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. Alice Grosshuesch, who is employed at the Deaconess hospital in Marshalltown.

Mrs. Grosshuesch cooks for 12 nurses and usually has 3½ hours off each afternoon. When she cooks for the night nurses she is off duty at noon and does not return to the hospital until 9:30 and is all through again at 11:30 p. m.

Mrs. Grosshuesch and daughter Gertrude have a nice apartment close to the hospital and they enjoy frequent visits from Rev. Ruben Grosshuesch and family who usually come once a week. Bill Grosshuesch and family usually visit them about once a month, and Ewald Grosshuesch comes from Thornton about every other week for a visit.

Miss Gertrude Grosshuesch is now in surgery and likes her work very much.

Celebrated Silver Wedding Anniversary October 25th

HUMPHREY-SCHAEFER EXCHANGE VOWS

Ceremony Performed By The Rev. E. Morris Egeland

Pictured above are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Schaefer, who were united in marriage, Sunday, October 15, 1950, at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Schaefer, who was Miss Retta Humphrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Humphrey, and Mr. Schaefer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schaefer of Klemme, were married at the Methodist Church in Klemme, the Rev. E. Morris Egeland read the double ring ceremony.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin gown made with a high neckline a fitted bodice and a full skirt extending into a train. Her fingertip veil was edged with French imported lace and held by a tiara with insets of rhinestones. Her jewelry was a rhinestone necklace, a gift of the bridegroom. The bride carried a bouquet of red and white roses.

Miss Verneil Humphrey, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a fuschia gown and carried a colonial bouquet of fall flowers. Miss Edna Robison, cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid and wore a gold gown and carried a colonial bouquet of fall flowers.

Linda Lee Humphrey, sister of the bride was the flower girl and Troy Weaver, nephew of the groom was the ringbearer.

The bridegroom was attended by a very close friend, Terry Peck, and his brother, Donald Schaefer, they were attired in brown suits with white carnation boutonnieres.

The bride's mother wore a royal blue dress with black accessories. The grooms mother wore navy blue with matching accessories. Both had identical corsages of rose and white carnations.

Maurice Jacobs, organist, played nuptial music preceding the ceremony and accompanied Mr. Wilbur Hollotz who sang, "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a reception for about 150 guests was held in the church parlors.

Mrs. Emory Weaver, sister of the groom, cut the wedding cake and Mrs. Robert McCormick and Mrs. Royal Molander poured. Mrs. Russell Bailey was in charge of the guest book.

Mrs. J. H. Denny, a cousin of the bride, and Iris Schaefer, sister of the groom, were in charge of the gifts. Miss Joann Smith and Miss Beverly Robinson were waitresses.

For going away the bride wore a gray gabardine suit with green accessories and a corsage of red roses.

The couple is at home on the John Humphrey farm after a sight seeing tour of Minnesota which included Lake Superior and other points of interest.

A car in which two Red Oak teen-agers were killed recently has been placed on public display in the city square, by the Montgomery county safety congress.

KLEMME COUPLE HONORED ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ausborn of near Klemme celebrated their 25th or Silver Wedding Anniversary on Wednesday, Oct. 25.

In honor of the event, their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Ausborn entertained them and relatives and friends at a 6:00 o'clock dinner, with the following guests present, besides Mr. and Mrs. Ausborn and family:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Groh and family of Livermore; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Loeffler, Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Erdman of Belmond; Mrs. Ed. Gifford of Ventura; Mr. and Mrs. Jake Erdman, Mrs. Louise Knoke and the Ausborn Brothers, all of near Klemme; Mildred Bunk of Kanawha.

The table was beautifully set and decorated for the occasion and a decorated 4-tier wedding cake served as the center-piece.

The evening was spent in playing cards and visiting, and all enjoyed a fine time.

Entertained At Dance

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ausborn entertained a large number of relatives and friends at a dance held at the Community Hall in Duncan.

OVER 2 HUNDRED ATTENDED DEMOCRATIC DINNER

Some over two hundred people from all parts of the county enjoyed a fine dinner served at the Catholic Church dining room at Garner last Wednesday noon, sponsored by the Hancock County Democratic Central Committee of which C. E. Proctor of Garner is the chairman.

All of the county candidates for office were present and introduced, as well as other honored guests. The main speakers on the program were Maurice O'Reilly, candidate for Congress from the 6th District, and Al Loveland, candidate for U. S. Senator. Both gentleman gave very good talks and had good, sound ideas that each supported.

Rally In Evening

In the evening the County Democrats had another big meeting at the Duncan Community Hall where O'Reilly and Loveland again gave inspiring talks to an immense crowd.

Following the speach program Malek's Accordion Band provided music for a free dance. Everyone had a fine time.

Ell Midgets Held Meeting At Home Of Byron Greiman

The regular meeting of the Ell Midgets was held at the Byron Greiman home October 24. We had the election of officers and Byron Greiman was elected as president; Darrel Goll, vice-president; Darwin Wille, secretary-treasurer and Lyle Goll as reporter. Harlan Block, Roger Johnson and Larry Greiman were the new members present. Clifford Greiman and Emory Weaver were put back in as co-leaders. Forrest Kohrt was at the meeting and discussed advantages of keeping a good record book. The meeting was adjourned at 9:15 and a nice lunch was served.

LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION

51st International Live Stock Show Opens in Chicago Nov. 25

All roads lead to Chicago every year when the International Live Stock Exposition is on in the international amphitheatre at the Chicago stock yards. And this year will be no exception when the big show, world's leading event of its kind, begins its second half century, November 25 through December 2.

Show window of America's greatest single industry—agriculture—the exposition attracts world-wide interest and attention.

It not only brings approximately 200,000 farm folk to Chicago, but the greatest news and radio coverage in the world carries the story of the exposition to people around the globe.

William E. Ogilvie, secretary-manager of the exposition since its revival after World War II, believes that the coming 51st edition should set new precedents in scope and quality.

He points out that increased prize money for the show should help to encourage the exhibition of the very tops of livestock from both the United States and Canada. Especially outstanding are the increases subscribed in the cattle department which it is anticipated will attract record entries.

Prizes for all cattle classes will be $61,370, the largest total ever offered. Many prize increases made in other breeds to mark the occasion of the golden jubilee show are retained this year.

Two years ago the horse show, which highlights the entertainment program with 13 performances, took on a western flavor with the addition of a "cutting horse contest" for quarter horses, so named as being the fastest horse over a quarter mile and ideally adapted to ranch work. This contest, in which the horses "cut" a calf out of a drove of cattle, just as he is required to do in his work on the western range, proved so popular that it has been installed as a permanent fixture, similar to the sheep dog act which is a perennial favorite with all exposition audiences.

Dr A. D. Weber, of Kansas State College, Manhattan, will return to judge the steers again this year. The only American to judge these classes since the exposition departed from the custom of having foreign judges two years ago, "Dad" Weber, as he is known among his students, is one of the most popular cattle judges in the country.

THE EIGHT DAYS of the exposition are packed with thrills for agricultural visitors. But the real high points of the show are when the grand champion steer is selected on Tuesday and when he is sold on Thursday.

Last year's champion, a hereford named Judge Roy Bean, was purchased from his Pecos county, Texas 4-H club owners at a record $11.50 per pound by Dearborn Motors of Detroit. Dearborn hauled the steer in a special plane on a 10,000 mile tour of the country.

But the glamor of the steer show in the amphitheatre, which houses most of the livestock at the international, does not dim in the importance of the great show of carloads of fat cattle, sheep and swine that goes on in nearby pens of the Chicago market. Says Dan D. Casement, veteran Kansas cattleman, concerning the carlot fat stock show in the yards, "It would be impossible to give too much credit to the magnificent show of fat carlots that have invariably appeared at the international during my lifetime. It is undoubtedly the greatest fat stock show in the world."

Other features in connection with the international that have become familiar in the years since 1900 include the grain and hay show, which is recognized as the world's largest competitive showing of farm crops, with exhibits from nearly every state and all provinces of Canada; and the interesting and educational meats show, first staged in 1924, which provides a display window for the final phase of meat production from packer to consumer's table; and the national 4-H club congress held in conjunction with the exposition.

Reviewing the first internation in 1900, an early day writer said, "Scarcely a feature of this exposition missed the sensational. The union of elements which gave it birth, its magnitude, the character of its exhibitors, the outstanding quality of its stock, the contagious enthusiasm engendered at its auction sales, its record-breaking prices for bullocks, the overwhelming evidences of popular appreciation—in these features it has built an enduring monument. Great is the livestock industry, and the International Livestock Exposition is its prophet."

THE FICTION CORNER

BILL SWEARS OFF

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

BILL Clifford is off women for life. Dagmar Fanchon is the reason. It happened this way.

Carolyn, Bill's sister, brought Dagmar up to the Clifford camp on Lake Winnepesaukee last June after school closed. The two girls had been roommates at Wellesley. Bill's mother and father and Bill were all present. Bill was up from New York for his annual two weeks vacation.

As a rule women didn't interest Bill very much. But this Dagmar female bowled him over. She was a brunette with dark brown eyes and a petite figure. Bill took one look at her and fell.

Even so, Dagmar, who rather went for Bill also, had competition. For Bill was a man with a hobby. Fishing. He was nuts on it, and as usual had planned to spend his annual two weeks frisking about in coves and inlets and bays with rod and line. It depressed him to think he'd have to divide his time between flirting with trout and flirting with Dagmar.

But on the second day the situation was settled. For Dagmar, after listening to one of Bill's fish stories, announced that she thought fishing must be fun and would Bill take her?

They set out the next morning in Bill's outboard. Bill produced a couple of Whirling Duns and proceeded to rig tackle. "Fish are sensitive to color," he explained. "On a day as bright as this a dull fly does the trick."

Very patiently Bill unsnarled her line from an overhanging bough and explained how the thing was done.

They entered a cove, cut the motor and drifted. "We'll be sure to land something here," Bill explained.

He cast and Dagmar cast. Very patiently Bill unsnarled her line from an overhanging bough and explained how the thing was done. Dagmar nodded and tried again.

THEY fished for an hour and failed to land the big one Bill promised. It grew cloudy and the sun disappeared. "Ah," Bill said, "We'd better change to a bright fly." Dagmar suddenly said: "There's something pulling on my line!"

"You've got a bite!" he yelled. "Start reeling in!"

He got up and stumbled over a creel. When he looked up Dagmar was holding her line clear of the water. A ten-inch trout was dangling on the hook.

"No!" Bill yelled. "That's not the way! You've got to play him!"

But Dagmar didn't understand. She began swinging the fish like a pendulum. Presently she caught the line on the up swing and held it, the 10-incher squirming on the hook.

"LOOK out!" Bill yelled. "You'll lose him! Don't do that! You've got to play him! Bring him in with a net!"

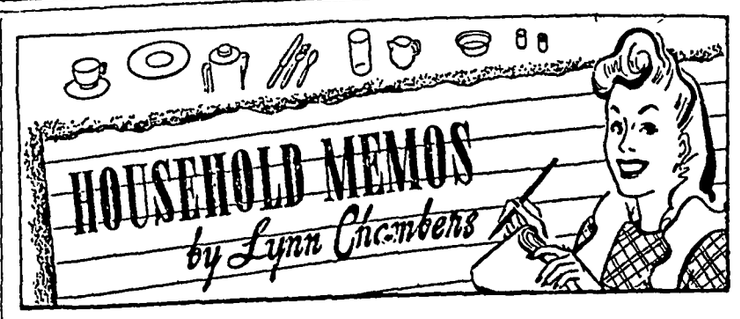
But Dagmar said: "I can't see what's wrong with this method. After all, the idea is to catch fish, isn't it?" And she dropped the trout, hook, line and all in the bottom of the boat.

Bill made a lunge at her rod, but he tripped again, fell sidewise The outboard wabbled. Dagmar, caught off balance, threw out her hands to brace herself, missed the gunwale and went sprawling overboard. Bill was already in the water, and it wasn't until he'd gone down and come up again spluttering, that he remembered he could not swim. He yelled, splashing around with his hands and shipping a lot of water. He went down again and came up. Then suddenly he felt a pair of hands grabbing him underneath the shoulders. He clutched at the hands wildly, and something hit him a stunning blow on the jaw.

When Bill opened his eyes he was lying on shore. Dagmar was close by, wringing out her dress Bill sat up. "What happened?"

Dagmar smiled: "You tell me."

Bill thought back, and the picture his memory conjured was most humiliating. Right then and there he made his resolve that he was off women for life. Unless, of course, he marries Dagmar Fanchon.



Casserole Cookery Helps Cut Down Soaring Food Bills

WHEN THE FOOD budget evades all your efforts to keep within its necessary limits, then it's time to start fixing those nourishing, appetite-satisfying casseroles. There's a good bit of eating in a fine casserole, and you can frequently use leftover meats and vegetables in them rather than wasting them.

Even when saving money is no object, there are many people who like the home-like atmosphere of having a casserole dinner. Plan them as well, cook them as carefully as a roast, and your family will enjoy them as much as the Sunday dinner with chicken or a roast.

PROTEIN-RICH eggs and milk extend less than a pound of ham in this tasty casserole dish:

Deviled Ham Puff
(Serves 6)

- 8 slices, day-old white bread
- ¾ pound cooked ham, ground
- 3 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon horseradish, if desired
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 2 cups milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Pepper to taste

Spread bread out and let stand several hours to dry out; then toast lightly. Cut crusts from the slices and place crusts in a greased, shallow pan, 9x9x1½ inches. Combine ham, mustard and horseradish and spread in an even layer over the crusts, then arrange the whole slices, cut in half diagonally, on the top. Mix the eggs, milk, salt and pepper and pour slowly over the bread so as to saturate the top slices; allow to stand for one hour. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for one hour. Serve immediately.

* * *

Dried Beef Casserole
(Serves 6)

- ¼ cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- ¼ pound dried beef, shredded
- ¼ Cup fat
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 2 cups cooked macaroni
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup cooked peas
- ½ cup grated American cheese

Cook onions, celery and dried beef in hot fat until onions are golden. Blend in flour, then milk gradually and stir until slightly thickened. Add macaroni, salt, pepper, peas; then pour into greased 1½-quart casserole. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven 15 minutes.

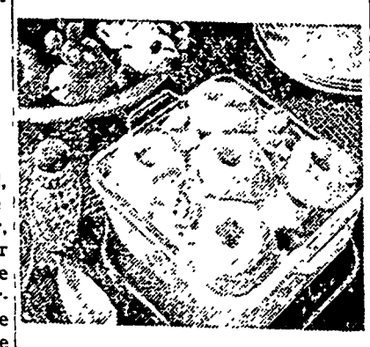
Frankfurter-Tomato Casserole
(Serves 6)

- 6 frankfurters
- 4 slices dry bread
- 1 No. 2½ size can tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ¼ teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon dry mustard

Place three frankfurters on bottom of greased 1½-quart casserole.



Meat, potatoes and several colorful vegetables are included in this delicious main dish pie. Note the effectiveness of baking powder biscuits cut with a doughnut cutter as topping.

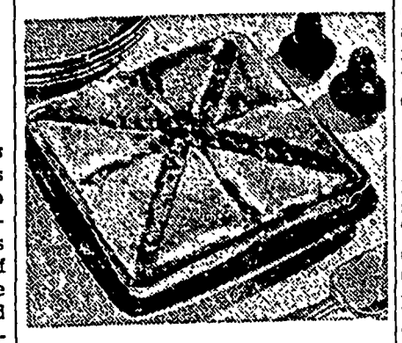
Salads Add Color, Contrast to Meals

Leftover bits of roast duck make an elegant salad. Combine with cut-up orange and ripe olives. Use a tart French dressing made with both lemon juice and tarragon vinegar with enough freshly ground pepper for high seasoning. Serve on watercress.

For a simple fruit salad, roll orange slices or sections in shredded coconut and serve with honey French dressing on a bed of greens.



This interesting casserole uses leftover ground ham with protein-rich eggs and milk, a seasoning of horseradish, with toast triangles, to make a dish worthy of hearty eating.

Liver Casserole
(Seryes 6)

- 1½ pounds liver
- 2 onions, sliced
- 2 slices bacon
- ¾ cup spaghetti
- ½ green pepper, sliced
- ½ red pepper, sliced
- 1½ Cups strained tomato
- 2 teaspoons salt

Place liver, in one piece, in casserole with onion. Lay pieces of bacon over liver. Place in a very hot oven (500°) for 20 minutes. Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain and add to liver. Add peppers, tomato and salt. Cover and bake in a slow (300°) oven for 3 hours.

Meat and Vegetable Pie
(Serves 6)

- 1 medium onion, sliced
- ¾ cup celery, sliced
- 2 chicken boullion cubes
- 5 tablespoons butter
- 5 tablespoons flour
- 2½ cups milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups diced, cooked veal
- 2 cooked potatoes, diced
- 2 cooked carrots, sliced
- ½ cup cooked peas
- ½ cup cooked lima beans

Cover sliced onion with boiling water and let stand until needed. Cook celery until tender in ½ cup water. Dissolve bouillon cubes in boiling water. Make a white sauce of butter, flour and milk; add salt. Combine with drained onion, celery, bouillon, meat and vegetables. Turn into buttered casserole or baking dish and cover with small baking powder biscuits.

* * *

Baking Powder Biscuits

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅓ cup butter
- ½ cup milk

Sift flour, measure; sift twice with baking powder and salt. Add butter and cut with pastry blender or two knives. Add milk and stir quickly. When dough is formed, turn on floured board and knead for about 20 seconds. Roll to ¼-inch thickness and cut into small biscuits; lay on top of mixture in casserole. Bake in a hot (450°) oven for 12 to 15 minutes.

Southern Sausage Casserole
(Serves 4)

- 4 large sweet potatoes, cooked
- 1 pound pork sausage meat
- 4 large apples
- Salt, Water, Brown Sugar

Peel potatoes and cut into thin slices. Place half in the bottom of greased casserole; cover with sausage, shaped into 4 cakes. Add apples cut in thick slices. Sprinkle with salt, brush with water and sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for about 1 hour.

Canned pineapple, fresh pear sections and preserved ginger offer a tasty combination for cold weather eating.

Cooked green peas and diced potatoes can be combined with leftover lamb for a main dish salad. Add some chopped mint to the French dressing before serving.

Banana, pear, orange and pistachio nuts folded into half mayonnaise and half whipped cream make a salad lovely and tasty enough for a ladies' luncheon.

Another good party salad uses: cling peach halves with cream cheese balls, and shredded almonds which are either plain or toasted

MIXING COLORING WITH PLASTER

Question: We are going to have our new home plastered and I would like to know if the integral coloring mixed in with the plaster is a good thing to have done.

Answer: Yes, I consider it a very good way to get color in your walls without having to do a separate painting job afterward. To be sure of a uniform color use only the factory-mixed material. Color mixing of plaster "on the job" is not always satisfactory.

Ineptness With Equalizer Even Found Among Gangsters

By BILLY ROSE

Because I sometimes tote around more than two dollars, and because my house has demonstrated a tendency to get burgled, I have a license to carry a revolver—and sometimes do.

But I certainly hope I never get into a spot where I have to use it, because I doubt whether I could hit the back wall of a brewery if I were 20 feet away.

And it isn't because I haven't practiced a-plenty. There's a makeshift pistol range back of my house up at Mt. Kisco, and over the years I guess I've used up enough ammunition to keep a small Balkan war going. But no matter how carefully I sight and squeeze the baby gun with the short nose, I've never been able to do much more to the bullseye than glare at it. And two will get you 20 that most of the Dead - eye Dicks you read about can't do much better.

Billy Rose

The U. S. army evidently agrees with me about the difficulty in handling this tricky bit of mechanism effectively. Next time you see newsreel closeups of the kids who are doing the fighting in Korea, look closely and you'll see they're armed with rifles—Garands and Browning automatics—but about the only place you'll see a six-gun will be in the holster of a two-star general.

I FIRST LEARNED that expert shooting with a revolver is more bull than bullseye when I moseyed down to Ft. Worth 14 years ago to stage that city's centennial exposition. One of the whoopty-doos I put on, "The Last Frontier," was a wild west show, and the cast included the best hoss hands in the business—Galahads in 10-gallon hats who had won prize money in every rodeo from Pendleton to Madison Square Garden. Naturally, I wanted to include an exhibition of pistol shooting, and as a charter member of the Zane Grey club I figured that almost any one of my bronco busters could pop a clay pipe out of a girl's mouth at 30 feet.

Well, I figured wrong. There was no one in the cast who could hit the pipe without taking the mouth with it, and I wound up having to import the national pistol champion—a skinny kid from Brooklyn who had learned marksmanship in a Coney Island shooting gallery.

This ineptness with what Damon Runyon used to call "the equalizer" is even more common among gangsters. Sure, the hoodlums of the '20's pistoled many a citizen, but almost invariably the victim was in a motor car, and the range a couple of inches from the nape of his neck. Whenever the corpse-to-be figured to be more than a few feet away, the killers used sawed-off shotguns with a three-foot spread, or tommyguns which produced a spray like a garden hose.

A few years back, an ex-bootlegger—now vice president of a national whiskey company—told me a story about Al Capone which illustrates my point. It seems Al was tipped off that one of his bodyguards was playing footsie with a rival gang, so he threw a banquet for 200 of his hired help, and after the feed made some complimentary remarks about the double-crosser and asked him to get up on the table and take a bow. As the guest of honor was bowing, the 200 hoodlums reached for their rods and let him have it. But when Capone—always the good bookkeeper—counted the bullet holes, he found only 20 in the carcass—180 of the triggermen had missed.

YEARS AGO, I used to haunt the 42nd street shooting galleries, and got so handy with a .22 rifle that I could knock the dancing celluloid ball off the stream of water five times out of ten. And I was plenty cocky about my marksmanship until one day when I went up to see Ben Hecht at his place in Nyack.

Hecht, fed up with my big talk about small arms, suggested I shoot it out with Charlie Lederer, the screen writer, who was spending the weekend with him.

"I've got nothing against Lederer," I said modestly. "Let him live."

"The target will be a tomato can at 10 feet," said Ben, "and you and Charlie can take turns with my .22 automatic pistol."

We went out on the lawn and Lederer, sighting carefully, hit the can two out of three times. I didn't even nick it.

Last month while vacationing in Hollywood, I lunched with Hecht and reminded him of the debacle which ended my career as a marksman.

"I might as well have been shooting blanks," I said.

"As a matter of fact," grinned Ben, "you were."

"The White Church" is the title of the above painting by Grandma Moses which will appear this year on Christmas cards. The tiny New York state farm woman has become America's most famed painter.

LIFE BEGINS AT 90

'Grandma' Moses Still Paints And Takes Many Honors Lightly

Grandma Moses is no more ruffled by the honors that have followed her 90th birthday, and the opening of the newest exhibit of her paintings, than she was by her first public exhibit just 10 years ago this month.

She is back at her white farmhouse here in Eagle Bridge, N. Y., vigorously brushing the bright colors onto the canvases that have made her famous, unperturbed by the attention accorded her by Gov. Thomas Dewey and other dignitaries. Her daily routine hasn't changed, she said.

"I get up about seven and go down for coffee. Then I go to my room, tidy it up and paint or read as I see fit," she explained.

Grandma, who is formally Anna Mary Robertson Moses, a York-state farm wife who has become the dean of American primitive painters, was honored with a testimonial dinner at the state capital, opened an exhibit of 60 of her paintings at the Albany Institute of Art, completed an appearance in a full-scale color movie, and checked the progress of 60 of her works on exhibit through Europe, all within the last few months.

"The Mailman Has Gone" is the title of this recent painting by Grandma Moses. It, too, will appear on Christmas cards this year.

Meteoric Rise to Fame

She still paints nearly every day. "I've always thought every painting would be the last, but I keep right on," she remarked.

The little old lady whose "discovery" as a painter started her on a meteoric rise to fame at the age of 78, lives in a two-story white frame house set here in the rolling hills of the Taconic range 200 miles from New York City. She lives with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy Moses, and a granddaughter. It's a pleasant, but unpretentious house built in the late 18th century with a spacious kitchen, a dining room big enough to accommodate 20 Christmas-dinner guests, and two front living rooms whose walls are hung with Grandma's remarkable paintings.

There is also a television set now which is obviously of keen interest to Grandma. "I don't care for the boxing or wrestling or those things," she said with a twinkle, "but I like the historical things and the plays if they wind up happy."

It would be hard to imagine Grandma Moses unhappy. There is dignity and intelligence in her face and complete serenity. She is tiny and weighs hardly enough to jiggle a scale. Her eyes are bright blue, alert and crinkly, and she wears spectacles. Her white hair is gathered in a knot atop her head. She has high check bones, a small, straight nose, and a decisive chin.

Lived in Virginia

On her painting, well—"I paint things that I see and some that I remember," she said, "a great deal is historical and a great deal is just imagination."

Her canvases are panoramic views of the countryside, the marks of the four seasons, the chores and activities of farmlife, rural holiday customs she observes or recalls in her mind's eye.

Grandma may have inherited from her Scotch-Irish forebears some of her artistic inclination but her style, taste and craftsmanship are strictly her own developments. Born on a farm near Greenwich, N. Y., on Sept. 7, 1860, she remembers that her father painted a little. Shut in by illness one winter, he spent the time painting murals with house paint on the living room walls.

She has a vivid and remarkable memory for the scenes and events of her early life. She recalled details of Thanksgivings spent in 1864, 1868, and 1870. In 1868, her mother's sister, "Aunt Sophie," spent Thanksgiving with them. Names, places and dates from a half century or more ago come readily to her.

She lived on the farm near Greenwich until at 28 she married Thomas Solomon Moses, a neighboring farmer. The young couple started for North Carolina but got only to Staunton, Va., where they lived for nearly 20 years. In 1905, they returned to Washington county and moved into the house where she still lives.

Grandma had no artistic training, never took a painting lesson in her life. She began making needlework pictures in 1937, at the suggestion of her daughter, and shortly afterward was encouraged to take up a paint brush. Her first paintings were done on wood.

"Anyone can paint if they want," she said thoughtfully. "All they need to do is get a brush and start painting. They'll make something. And as time goes on it will get better and better."

Self Trained Artist

Her first exhibit, prior to 1940, was in a drug store in Hoosick Falls, a nearby village, where an art collector happened on her work and brought it to the attention of Dr. Otto Kallir of the Galerie St. Etienne in New York. Dr. Kallir staged her first public exhibit and has fostered her progress ever since.

Nearly 100 exhibits have followed in galleries and museums in scores of cities here and abroad.

Untaught, uneducated, with little understanding of her own great gift, Grandma Moses is unquestionably a true and probably even a great artist, in the opinion of Dr. Kallir:

"I think maybe the answer to the Grandma Moses riddle lies in a combination of things—her prodigious native talent, her fantastic ability constantly to learn more about paint technique at an age when other people regard it as a miracle to be alive at all, and, more than anything, a purity of spirit so great as to be incapable of vulgarity.

"It is this last trait which enables her to keep turning out scores of pictures of the most banal subjects . . . and have each one emerge a distillation of the joys of nature and the simple life."

90-Year-Old Artist Continues Career

While most people are happy just to be alive when they reach their 90th birthday, Grandma Moses has launched upon a more active career with her painting. She has a number of works underway and continues to read and sew.

She said recently at a birthday party she was looking forward to her 100th birthday. She wasn't planning anything big, she said, "just to ask a few people over for a dance.

Sacred Tibetan Volumes Displayed at Yale Library

Eighteen leather-covered cases containing a collection of rare and sacred Tibetan books arrived at Yale university library some time ago, after a six-months' journey by pack train and steamer.

The 99 volumes within the hand made crates make up Tibet's holy "Kagyur." The collection was presented to Yale by His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama, 14-year-old ruler of that remote land.

The "Kagyur"—or "Kanjur" as it is known to American scholars—contains almost 1,100 seperate works attributed to the Buddha and is immensely valuable to Sanskrit scholars because of its great accuracy.

Each one of the 99 volumes was wrapped in orange cloth, symbolic of Tibetan reverence. The books measure two feet long by six inches wide and contain between 300 and 400 loose-leaf pages, block printed on both sides and held together by boards.

The books were placed in wooden crates and then the skins of yaks—Tibetan oxen—were bound around the crates, stretched tightly and sewn together with rawhide. The skins protected the books from the elements.

A pack train of small Tibetan horses carried the collection from Lhasa, capital of Tibet, across a 1,000-mile mountain route to New Delhi, India. The crates were then sent to Calcutta and finally shipped by freighter to the United States.

The newly-acquired Yale collection is a Lhasa edition, which exists in this country only at Harvard university. It was first printed in the reign of the 13th Dalai Lama, who was enthroned in 1893 and died about 1933.

Dreary Barn May Lead To Pneumonia for Calf

Reports in veterinary medical journals indicate that calf pneumonia is becoming more prevalent, especially on diversified farms and in small herds where not enough attention is paid to scientific housing. Generally, it strikes calves under six months old, the most susceptible age being three to eight weeks. As calves grow older, they become more resistant to the disease and even if they happen to contract it, their chances of recovery are better.

In human beings, pneumonia is likely to strike when the body is in a weakened condition, such as after a bad cold or after influenza. The same applies to calves, particularly if they are neglected when they have digestive disturbances or if a seemingly mild case of "sniffles" is allowed to go on unchecked. Susceptibility to pneumonia is even greater when, in addition to such disturbances, the calf is inherently weak—due to improper nutrition of the cow during pregnancy.

Under such conditions pneumonia can easily gain a foothold. Chilling or exposure to dampness and filth may be the opening for a serious attack. If the calf is housed in a dark, gloomy pen, with little or no exposure to the sun's rays, its powers of resistance are lowered still further.

Viruses Studied

Key to victory over many viruses that now cripple and kill domestic animals may soon be found with the aid of the electron microscope. Viruses, which are disease-producing agents too small to be seen under most laboratory instruments, can now be studied under electron microscopes that magnify objects 60,000 to 70,000 or more times. According to veterinary medical reports, the viruses of equine infectious anemia, Newcastle disease of poultry, and foot-and-mouth disease recently have been photographed through these powerful magnifiers. Information gleaned from a study of the photographs is expected to guide future animal disease research.

To Extend Life of Glazing

fore any glazing is started, on wood or steel sash, a good ng paint should be applied. e use of shellac and varnish as primers should be avoided because glazing will not stick to them. A metal primer that will both retard corrosion and provide a rough surface should be applied to all steel sash before glazing materials to insure a long-lasting bond between metal and glazing material. The priming coat should be allowed to dry thoroughly before glazing material is applied. The glazed sash should be painted very soon afterward to extend the life of the glazing job.

Priming for Metals

Exterior metal surfaces which are unfinished—or metal surfaces which have been sanded bare to remove rust—need careful priming. The types of primers that are satisfactory for the purpose include red lead, blue lead, zinc yellow, oxide of iron or zinc dust-zinc oxide. After the metal priming is dry, you can apply finishing coats of regular oil house paint by the same methods you use when applying it to exterior woodwork. Exterior en- is preferable for metal furni-

Inventions Speed Labor In Today's Modern Offices

Today's business employee lives in a mechanized mecca.

An automatic letter-opener opens the morning mail. The employer calls his secretary on the interoffice communications system. She takes dictation on her stenotype machine, transcribes it on her typewriter, and a special machine automatically seals and stamps the envelope. When she catches up with her work, she reaches for the voice recorder for assignments dictated some hours earlier by her employer.

When she is out to lunch, an electric secretary answers the phone, reels off a recorded message and gives the caller 30 seconds to leave his own recorded message, then tells him to call again if he needs more recording time.

The accounting office zips up a neat and accurate column of figures on the automatic computing machines and makes entries with the speedy accounting machines—more than 100 entries per minute. By a new electronic computer, complex mathematical problems are worked out 5,000 times faster than the human mind could solve them.

Laborious filing methods are replaced by a microfilm system, punch-card files, or the revolving wheel file. Unnamed devices speed work in every conceivable phase of business.

How did it all start?

They wouldn't believe it 75 years ago. No machine invented could think—much less add! But a young bank clerk in Auburn, N. Y., dreamed of the machine that would free him of his high stool and relieve his aching eyes and fingers of endless hours of copying and computing figures.

2,4-D Weed-Killer Causing Damage by Drift to Cotton

Researchers have found that a single ounce of 2,4-D weed killer is enough to possibly cause serious damage to as many as 35 acres of cotton.

The national cotton council is issuing this warning after receiving a number of complaints of cotton being damaged by 2,4-D drifting on to cotton during its application to other crops.

Application of insecticides and other chemicals with equipment that has been used to apply 2,4-D also has been responsible for damage to cotton. The council's production and marketing division warns that even a small amount of 2,4-D remaining in a sprayer or container is enough to seriously injure susceptible crops.

If it is necessary to use the same equipment on susceptible crops that has been used previously to apply 2,4-D, machines should be cleaned thoroughly with a solution of household ammonia or a mixture of activated charcoal.

Rinse the sprayer thoroughly with water. Prepare a one per cent solution of household ammonia, using two teaspoons of ammonia to each quart of water. Fill the sprayer and leave the solution in the tank, booms and hoses from 12 to 24 hours. Drain and rinse thoroughly with water. Cleaning with commercial mixtures of activated charcoal is much quicker but more expensive.

Food Requirements Vary

According to a Twentieth Century Fund report those engaged in very active physical work require much more energy-producing food such as potatoes, flour, legumes, meat, fats and sugars than do sedentary or moderately active workers. They, however, require larger quantities of the leafy, green and yellow vegetables and the same amount of protective foods such as milk, eggs, and citrus fruits. Both the active workers, who become physically tired, and the sedentary workers, who become fatigued by the mental strain and emotional tension of their work, are alike in their need of plenty of restful sleep to restore spent energy and make them fit for the next day.

Weight of Gold

The troy ounce is the unit in weighing gold. An ounce of fine gold means an ounce of pure gold. In 1934 the President proclaimed the United States gold dollar to be 15 5/21 grains of gold, nine-tenths fine, which is equivalent to $35 per fine troy ounce. The former value of gold was $20.67 per fine ounce based on the dollar of 25.8 grains of gold nine-tenths fine. Weighings are made in troy ounces and decimals thereof. Jewelers use the penny-weight and grain. The troy pound never is used.

Telling Age By Teeth

An individual's age can be tol within three to four years by exami nation of a single tooth, according to a newly-devised system. For the first time, a mathematical formula to detect the age of a person by his teeth has been worked out by Dr. Gosta Gustafson, of the state dental department of Malmo, Sweden, who reported results of a hitherto unknown accuracy. Under Dr. Gustafson's formula, age can be determined within 3.6 years, as contrasted with errors up to 32 years in methods in longtime use.

HEAVY LOSS FORM CORN ROOT WORMS

Cut Yields And Cause Much Corn To Go Down

Evidence of corn root worm damage is showing up in cornfields over most of the state, reports Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Farmers going into fields now are reporting corn blown over, some lying down and curving back up, stalks pulling out of the ground easily and severed roots. If they look close, Gunderson says that they can spot greenish, yellow-to-tan looking beetles feeding on silks and kernels. These ¼-inch beetles are the adults of the northern corn root worm laying eggs for next year's crop.

While damage is being reported from all sections of the state, northeast Iowa has been hit severely. Some fields are so flat that farmers report to Gunderson that they won't even attempt harvesting them by machine.

10 Percent Hit

Over the state as a whole, Gunderson estimates that 10 percent of Iowa's cornfields are showing the effects of root worm attack. Losses in some fields will run as high as one-third of the total yield. Losses come in the form of corn left in the field during harvest and in the form of small, undeveloped ears caused by an inadequate supply of plant food getting through the damaged roots.

Two kinds of root warm have hit Iowa this year, according to Gunderson. They are the northern corn root worm and the southern corn root worm.

The northern root worm comes from eggs laid in cornfields by beetles the fall before. It can be controlled fairly well by not planting corn on the same ground more than 2 years in succession.

Rotation Helps

Southern corn root worm comes from eggs laid by beetles that come in from states farther south in the spring after corn is up. While a lot of the damage this year was from the southern type, Gunderson says that it is unlikely it will be bad next year because it never has been serious 2 years in a row. Rotation is no guard against southern corn root worm.

It is difficult to distinguish between damage caused by the southern and northern corn root worms. But, Gunderson says that a farmer who sees damage in first-year corn can be fairly sure that it is from southern root worm. If damage is on ground that has been in corn for three years or more, it is most likely to be caused by northern corn root worm. Damage to second-year corn could be caused by either.

A crab's teeth are in its stomach.

FARM PRODUCTS PRICES NOT APT TO RISE SOON

With most of the important farm products nearing a "harvest time," farm commodities are unlikely to rise much in the near future, observes Francis Kutish, Iowa State College extension farm economist.

Prices are now higher than they were last year for nearly all farm products, and they are expected to stay higher through the fall months.

Kutish thinks demand for farm products should continue to expand during 1951. The over-all effects of wage hikes will be enough to offset most of the higher income tax rates, with the government probably running an unbalanced budget in 1951. Tax increase aren't likely to cover all the boost in defense spending.

A 5 percent increase is expected in next year's spring pig crop, Kutish says. However, experience in previous defense programs shows that during a short run rise in demand for meat, expansion in meat supplies is necessary to prevent strong upward pressure on prices. The economist explains that if demand does expand in the future, a moderately larger meat supply can be consumed without much change in prices.

SEASON FAVORABLE FOR FARM DRAINAGE WORK

The long, open fall is favoring the alert farmer who is using the good weather to get tiling and drainage work done, observes Dale Rull,, Iowa State agricultural engineer.

Spots in fields that are ordinarily wet are reasonably dry this fall, and drainage work done now will permit farming of these wet spots next spring. What's more, this is the time of year vegetative growth is sparse and can be easily knocked down to make way for engineers and equipment.

Hull reminds Iowa farmers that drainage contractors often work up until Christmas time, and any work they may be able to get done this fall will put more farm land in production at an earlier date next year.

U. of I. Chemists Wrestle With Many Atomic Problems

When cyclotrons, betatrons, and atomic piles bombard atom and change one element to another, they open a swarm of problems for chemists The chemists' predictions of what should result don't pan out.

Peter E. Yankwich, 26-year-old assistant professor at the University of Illinois, is one of the few men in a half-dozen laboratorfes of the nation attempting to find out why.

He is trying to bring some order out of the chemical problems let loose by the creation of new atoms with energies equivalent to those produced by temperatures such as exist only in the sun and other stars. No one can foretell what may come from such fundamental information.

The problem is to find out why results do not come out according to chemical predictions; what is the nature of new substances resulting from atomic bombardment; why they appear in the amounts they do; why some expected compounds do not appear at all.

The Argonne national laboratory, with which the university is associated, bombards substances for Professor Yankwich in its atomic piles. Then he analyzes the material.

The bombardment produces energetic new atoms, which fly around inside the substance, breaking up molecules, ionizing other atoms, and doing general damage until their energy is used up and they can settle down to form new compounds.

Chemists, knowing what atoms were in the original target material, can draw up a list of the new compounds to be expected. In simple cases they may roughly estimate how much of each new compound should appear. But the actual results never are exactly as predicted.

That's the problem.

Charleston Gives Hotfoot To Dancers with Flat Feet

The Charleston is one of the best exercises devised for flat feet. Of the 25,000 students who have taken Charleston lessons at the Arthur Murray N.Y.C. studios alone (within a two-month period) 35 per cent of them were recommended by podiatrists and chiropodists.

A list has been compiled of the advantages of dancing to health and foot care. Besides the Charleston, whose toe-in, toe-out movement embodies a prescribed exercise that greatly strengthens the arches, other forms of dancing, such as fox trot, rumba, samba and waltz bring into action the muscles of the feet and legs, and stimulates circulation there which is so essential in the development of good posture and good health.

Foot care is also essential to those who would enjoy dancing to the utmost. Corns, calluses and other foot troubles should be treated by a podiatrist or chiropodist, and the feet kept supple by wearing shoes that properly fit at all times.

Dog-Day Dog Tip

A seasonal bulletin from veterinary medical authorities offers dog owners these suggestions on the summer care of pets: Let dogs stay in the shade during the hot-sunshine hours and do not give them strenuous exercise. Feed an adequate and nutritious ration, but cut down a little on starchy items. Replace water in the drinking pan several times a day so that cool water will be available at all times. If the dog goes with the family on summer trips, don't lock it in the car with the windows closed—particularly on hot, sunny days—as this may cause heat stroke.

Virus Disease Check

A new type of weapon for combating the virus diseases, including polio, mumps, and the common cold, may result from research described to 500 chemists as the American Chemical society's second national medicinal chemistry symposium opened at the University of Notre Dame recently. The research, still in the exploratory stage, is an outgrowth of the successful synthesis of the drug chloromycetin, Dr. Harry M. Crooks, Jr., of Parke, Davis & Company, Detroit, Mich., told the symposium, which is sponsored by the society's medicinal division. Dr. Crooks was one of the chemists who synthesized chloromycetin—the first antibiotic to be made artificially.

Garden Insect Control

If you planted a vegetable garden, chances are you have run headlong against some insect enemies, says Gordon T. Mickle, entomologist for the Colorado A and M extension service. Early planted vegetables are usually attacked by flea beetles as soon as they push through the ground. A five per cent DDT dust, or two tablespoons of 50 per cent wettable DDT per gallon of water, can be used to control these tiny beetles. That is, provided the tops are not for human food, he cautions. On such vegetables as spinach, lettuce, beet tops, etc., a 75 per cent rotenone dust should be used since it is relatively

LABOR RETURNS GO UP FAST WITH GOOD COWS

It doesn't cost much more to feed and care for a high producing dairy cow than it does a low producing one—although returns are considerably higher, according to the 1950 annual summary of Iowa's dairy herd improvement associations.

Don Voelker, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, reports that greater income and profits come when cows are at high levels of production.

Cows producing 250 pounds of butterfat in the DHIA tests returned $215 to their owners from dairy products sold. Of that amiunt, $108 went for feed while other expenses took a good share of the rest. That left the owners very little profit for their work.

It was a different story for cows that produced 350 pounds of butterfat. The feed cost went up to $125 but the value of products sold hit $298. They returned a profit of $48 above costs.

With 500-pond cows, the advantage was even greater. They required $140 worth of feed, but they turned out products worth $422 and a profit of $142 per head.

Looking at it from the labor standpoint, Voelker reports that the 250-pound producers returned their owners 32 cents an hour for labor; the 350 "pounders," 89 cents an hour; and the 500-pound cows, $2.06 an hour.

These increased profits come from increased production. The feed and labor costs don't rise in relation to the value of the product that is produced.

Voelker listed several practices that high producing herd owners followed to maintain top production. These included feeding balanced rations, feeding grain while the cows are on pasture, and feeding grain according to production.

The high producing herds also had less bluegrass for pasture and were on more legumes and mixed grasses. A high percentage were fed corn silage and legume hay.

THE HIGHWAY STORY
By Burr Combs

Two things have happened in the home county so far this month that people talk about and shake their heads about and say "Wonder how it'll all end?"

The first thing is that seven of the finest young men in the county were called by "the draft" and left for Des Moines.

The other is that three young men were killed in auto accidents.

That's ten young men from our county. Ten young men from a twenty-mile square of about the finest land God ever gave mankind.

The one lad, killed early in the month, was on a bicycle, hurrying to his job just after school let out. He swung into the entrance of a downtown alley just as a truck came from the other way. He didn't have a chance.

The other two, only a little older than the high school youth, were killed instantly when their car hit a soft shoulder at high speed and rolled over and over into a brown, autumnal field of Iowa corn. They didn't have a chance, either.

No one got to say goodbye to those three lads. One minute they were happy, zestful and alive in the fullest sense of the word; then, suddenly, oblivion.

The other seven were given good advice, and shaken by the hand, and a good many people came down to the depot to see them off. They have a good chance - to come back, to grow up to be men, useful citizens in or out of uniform.

So that's what happened in the home county so far this last month. Ten of our young men gone.

We won't lose any more by the draft in the home county this month. But how about those others?

Hunting Trip Ended In Tragic

A hunting trip to Canada has ended rather tragically for Warren Vanden Brink of Sheldon. While going by boat into the Lac Soul area, the boat tipped as he was setting his deer-rifle down alongside a single-barrel shotgun. The bolt of the rifle released the safety catch and snapped the trigger, discharging the load into his arm. Amputation below the shoulder was necessary.

'Tired Feeling' Affects One Out of Two, Says M.D.

Call it "that tired feeling," if you wish, but doctors have a lot of complicated names—chronic nervous exhaustion, psychoneurosis, benign nervousness, functional disorder, anxiety state, neurasthenia, constitutional inadequacy and others.

It is a major American disease which affects perhaps one out of every two persons seen by doctors, according to a Stanford university physician.

"It is generally believed that one third to two thirds of all patients who seek medical help have as the most significant cause of ill health an emotional or neurotic disturbance," Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur of Stanford university school of medicine, San Francisco, writes.

"This disturbance may manifest itself in a large variety of ways, but nervousness and fatigue are among the commonest symptoms."

Other symptoms are insomnia, irritability, inability to relax, fatigue in the morning, mental conflicts, difficulty in making decisions, and all sorts of aches and pains, particularly disorders of the heart and digestive system, he says.

The usual causes include an emotional problem or some situation in the victim's life, overwork with inadequate rest and relaxation, and inadequate recovery emotionally from an infection, according to Dr. Wilbur.

"There is not just a single level, but a wide range to the limits in structure and function of the normal person," he explains. "Acute fatigue or nervousness can be induced in any normal person by lack of sleep and sufficient threat to security; recovery generally is rapid with sleep or removal of the threat. When these symptoms are chronic the period of recovery will be longer, even after the cause is removed."

Gardeners Warned to Use Lime with Great Caution

Home gardeners are warned by the national safety council to be careful of the lime they use on their lawns. Spreading of the wrong kind of lime can cause serious burns if the feet are moist. Even perspiration can be dangerous.

Lime is a loosely used term, the Council says. The pure oxides of calcium or magnesium, known as burned lime, never should be used on lawns and are dangerous to have around the house.

Slaked lime or builders' lime is slightly caustic and is not recommended for lawns. Impurities usually remain in commercial hydrated lime which can cause painful burns when uniting with moisture on the skin.

Carbonated lime or ground raw limestone are recommended for lawns because they are not caustic, and they act more slowly in neutralizing the acid soil condition, which brings about the change at a rate more beneficial to grasses.

Flower Containers

Many homemakers may feel that they do not have the right container to use for flower arrangements. Here are a few suggestions that you may not have thought of, for the containers that really interest the flower lover, are very often those not originally intended for that purpose: tea pots, cream pitchers, vegetable dishes, gravy boats, many types of antique spoon holders, large cups and saucers are unique containers. Should your home be early American old pewter pie plates and candle molds would be ideal These suggestions will fit modern homes, too.

When Dog Is Poisoned

Due to their eating and licking habits, dogs are often poisoned accidentally All cases of suspected or known poisoning warrant a veterinarian's attention, because death usually can be averted by quick use of specific antidotes and hypodermic injections. If a veterinarian cannot be reached, warm salt water or mustard water can be given by mouth to stimulate vomiting of the poison. Enemas and stimulants also are helpful. A small amount of very strong coffee, warm but not hot, is a good stimulant.

Champion Steers

Although many race horses are noted for their unusual names, the grand champion steers of the International Live Stock exposition at the Chicago yards have a similar claim to fame. Since 1900, winners' names have included Clear Lake Jute 2nd, Peerless Wilton 39th's Defender, Fyvie Knight, Broadus White Socks, Mah Jongg, Braircliff Thickset, Judge Roy Bean and Loyal Alumnus IV.

Profit from Pigs

According to some authorities twice as much profit is made from saving eight pigs per litter as with six pigs per litter. One rather new method of saving more pigs per litter is the use of electric brooders in each hog pen. The electric brooder is simple and inexpensive to construct. At one experiment station only about one-half as many pigs were lost where were used.

Evergreen Planted This Fall Need Water

Those ever greens that are planted this year will stand better chance of making through the winter if they are given a good soaking before the ground freezes.

Newly planted evergreens are especially vulnerable to winter killing unless they have plenty of water, says A. E. Cott, Iowa State College extension horticulturist. Wet soil, he says, is warmer than dry ground during the winter.

Cott recommends watering these young evergreens every 2 weeks until the ground freezes. Watering at this time is good for all shrubbery if the ground is dry, he adds.

Whistler, the painter, used a butterfly as his signature.

Starving Babies Given Living Chance by Surgery

In the last ten years, modern surgery has learned techniques that give a chance for life to at least half the babies born without a tube between throat and stomach, all of whom die before that time.

In most of the little patients, the stomach was connected to the trachea or windpipe, which normally leads to the lungs instead of the esophagus. The lower part of the esophagus leading to the stomach was missing.

Ten years ago, all these cases were considered inoperable and all died. Today, with present surgical techinques, more than half are operable and the mortality is being steadily reduced. Of this series 50 per cent of the operable cases survived and, while we are not content with the mortality by any means, we take some pride in the steadily dropping mortality.

The important element in saving the baby's life is speedy recognition of the condition. With access to the stomach impossible, the baby cannot be fed and will quickly starve unless proper intravenous feeding measures are started immediately. The physician who first sees the baby must diagnose the condition in a few hours. Moreover, the throat of the baby is likely to fill up because they cannot swallow anything and they may choke to death. Also, he added, many are premature, in fact, all the patients under five pounds at birth died. They are especially vulnerable to infection.

Steel Technicians Using Marvelous New Instruments

An instrument that can determine the hardness of a single crystal of steel is one of numerous new devices being used by steel company technicians in their widely varied activities.

Known as the "microhardness tester," the instrument is capable of taking hardness readings at three spots within the width of a human hair.

The technicians in steel are also now using autoradiograms, which are patterns produced on photographic plates by the action of radioactive elements, to supplement microscopic studies. The Geiger counter, famed for its ability to detect uranium and other radioactive substances, has been adapted to a quick, accurate way of analyzing steel.

Another new instrument is the "recording torque magnetometer." It measures the ability of steel to stretch uniformly under the action of dies.

High speed color photography has been employed to study the physical reactions inside the hearth of a blast furnace. The pictures, taken at a speed of 3,000 frames a second, show the travel of incandescent particles of raw materials which are estimated to be moving at a speed of 135 miles an hour.

Cattle Disease Test

Accuracy of 90 percent has been reported for a test that singles out cattle which are carriers of anaplasmosis. It is called a complement-fixation test and is regarded as a valuable means of preventing the spread of this malaria-like disease. Cattle which recover from anaplasmosis remain carriers and serve as a springboard or reservoir from which the disease may spread to healthy animals. Helping in its spread are biting insects of several kinds. Although heaviest anaplasmosis losses have occurred in the South and Southwest, cases may appear anywhere, particularly if cattle are shipped in from infected areas. This was demonstrated recently in a Michigan dairy herd. The disease was diagnosed for the first time in native cattle of that state and linked with animals brought in from the Southwest.

Pinkeye in Cattle

Farmers and veterinarians often have battled outbreaks of pinkeye in cattle herds with apparent success, only to have the disease bob up again at a later date. A possible explanation for this is that a germ commonly involved in this infection will persist in the eyes of cattle even after they recover from an attack. The recovered animals thereby become carriers, spreading the germs when conditions become favorable for another outbreak. This also may explain how newly purchased animals which seem to be perfectly healthy can introduce pinkeye into a herd previously free of the disease.

Reducing Diet of Dogs

Science is putting overweight dogs on a reducing diet. The purpose is not stylish canine figures, but health. The American Veterinary Medical association explains that excess poundage may be just as dangerous to a dog as it is to a human being. But finding a formula which would reduce weight yet give the dog adequate nutrition was long sought by research veterinarians, the A.V.M.A. says. Now, not only has a satisfactory reducing diet been worked out, but so have special prescription diets for dogs suffering from kidney and intestinal diseases. One even has been devised for expectant canine mothers

1950 Windmills Go Modern As New Service Field Opens

Don Quixote would get a shock if he tried tilting with 1950 windmills.

The graceful, circling arms of that would-be knight's adversary bear little resemblance to the flashing, steel blades of the modern windmill — designed along Eiffel Tower lines for use in man's newest effort to generate electricity by wind power.

The 20th century version of the windmill will get its latest test on Costa Head, in the stormy Orkney Islands. Wind data already studied indicate a potential energy supply there that may match the area's hydoelectric resources.

If the steel windmill under construction in the Orkneys proves successful, engineers see in the future a new source of power only half as costly as that generated by coal-consuming plants.

It will mean, too, a fresh career for the ancient windmill that began its service to man sometime before the 12th century and has worked faithfully through the years grinding his corn, irrigating his fields, pumping his water, and on occasion, even "speaking" for him.

History neglected to record the invention of windmills, but they first became common in Germany and Holland. By the 15th century the "pumping mills"—used for draining land—were a Dutch necessity. Despite the unpredictability of the wind, windmills proved an enormously effective power machine for those days, since a well placed mill generally ran eight out of 24 hours.

Insect Control Urged To Curb Livestock Loss

An insect-control program will do much to cut down livestock losses this summer.

Flies, ticks, and mosquitoes play a part in spreading many infectious diseases of animals, including the malaria-like cattle disease known as anaplasmosis, the so-called sleeping sickness of horses, swamp fever, and bovine mastitis. In addition, insects such as screwworm flies and heel flies are directly responsible for costly parasitic diseases.

Besides all that, insects cause discomfort that may be reflected in decreased gains and milk production.

A general clean-up of barns and premises, including draining or fencing of swampy places where mosquitoes and certain other parasites breed, is recommended as the first step.

Use of good insecticides of known safety for spraying barns and for spraying or dipping the animals is the next step suggested. In this connection, stock owners are urged to "keep informed of latest developments in the use of insecticides."

Research is constantly turning up new facts about the value and safety of insect-killing chemicals and it is essential that farmers know the right kind of product to use for each species of stock.

Banish Washday Blues

Snow white laundry, without the use of soap, was forecast by C. A. Stokes, of Godfrey L. Cabot, Inc., and Professor J. E. Vivian, of M I. T., as they opened the discussion of ultrasonics at the Boston regional meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. Soiled cloth becomes magically clean in pure soap-free water when showered with these intense high-pitched sound waves. Frayed collars and cuffs will be a nuisance of the past when the new process is applied. As a dramatic demonstration, an ultrasonic gun can even be used as a giant under-water pen to write names in sparkling white on soiled cloth, the engineers said. The dirt particles literally leave the shirt behind as they are given a push of 12,000 miles per second by the intense sound vibrations.

Double Duty Beds

At the turn of the century the only type of double-duty bedding available consisted mainly of an upholstered folding cot built with wood slats. A wool mattress and pillow were combined in one piece and the whole covered with striped ticking. It wasn't attractive either in appearance or for sleeping comfort. Today's double duty bedding is quite a contrast. Smartly designed davenport beds and studio couches are upholstered in eye-appealing fabrics which blend with the other furnishings of the room. Many modern double-duty beds are indistinguishable from standard type davenports—until they open up to provide comfortable sleeping for the night.

Milk Experiment

During the past several years considerable experimental work has been done on "prepartum milking" or milking a cow before she comes fresh. It was thought that this practice might make it possible to eliminate many of the cases of congested udders at calving time, and also to prevent many cases of milk fever. Experiments at Kansas State college and elsewhere have shown that there is no advantage to prepartum milking. It does not help congested udders, nor prevent milk fever. In addition it removes the colostrum which is necessary for the

PREPARE NOW TO HANDLE SOFT CORN

The plans that will work best for handling soft corn this fall will probably be the ones that are worked out well ahead of corn picking, observes I. W. Arthur, extension economist at Iowa State College.

Besides harvesting and storing, the livestock farmer must fit the soft corn into his feeding program. Landlords and tenants with crop-share leases also may need to adjust their contract to take care of storing and marketing soft corn.

Fair agreements on storage can be worked out, Arthur believes. He suggests reserving the best crib space for the corn that will be keep and putting the soft corn in outside cribs or where it will be handy to feed this fall and winter.

While the landlord will be expected to take his share of the soft corn, he may be able to sell it to the tenant for early feeding, or to someone in the neighborhood if the tenant can't use it, the economist said.

To arrive at a fair price for soft corn, Arthur suggests that it be tested for moisture content and the price adjusted according to the percentage of dry matter present. Acceptable moisture standards set up for sale and storage of mature corn can be used as a basis for price adjustments.

An additional factor that may require adjustments this fall is down corn. Reports of this trouble are already coming in from northeast Iowa.

Other possibilities that call for early planning where soft corn is to be handled are types of livestock to feed, narrower temporary cribs, mechanical drying, vetilators in cribs and corn silage. Arthor recommends that farmers facing soft corn problems this fall see their county extension directors for latest information and literature on storing and feeding this type of grain.

RHIZOMA ALFALFA NOT RECOMMENDED FOR IOWA

Iowa State College agronomists are cautioning against use of the new Rhizoma alfalfa on Iowa farms in its present form.

The new variety was developed in British Columbia and Canada, and is supposed to spread by creeping underground stems—like quackgrass.

It is not wilt resistant, however, and is not living up to original expectations in this country or in Canada, says Iowa State College agronomist C. P. Wilsie. Dominion of Canada agricultural officials are not recommending Rhizoma alfalfa in Canada because of damage done by wilt.

The variety is not as tall as Ladak and Ranger, and 1950 Iowa tests yields were only 75 to 80 percent of yields of varieties commonly grown in the Midwest.

Although these unfavorable factors might be corrected by further breeding work, Wilsie says there is no advantage in growing Rhizoma alfalfa, even though the variety has received considerable publicity because of its spreading characteristics.

LARGE RED CLOVER SEED CROP IN '50

Iowa's Crop More Than Doubled That Of 1949

The clover seed shortage that has plagued Iowa farmers in recent years will be less acute for the 1951 seedings, according to 1950 production figures.

While only 120,000 bushels of clover seed were thresned out in the state in 1949, production has jumped to an estimated 260,000 bushels in 1950, reports Ed Dyas, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

Iowa Ranked Third

Another indication of how much brighter the situation is for the clover seed buyer is the state's drop in rank as a clover seed producer. Despite the big increase in production, Iowa slipped from third place as a clover seed producing state over a period of 10 years to fourth place in 1950.

Ohio, Illinois and Indiana all produced more red clover seed than Iowa this year. The top 1950 producer, Ohio, has been fourth during the 10-year period from 1939 to 1948, and was 8th in 1949.

Acreage Up

Dyas says that the high prices received by seed producers during the last 3 years is probably one of the most important factors contributing to the expected record crop of red clover seed this year. Larger acreages of forage crops per animal unit this year also left more acres of red clover to be used for seed production. Effective insect control and more "know how" in growing and harvesting methods are other factors that helped Iowans produce a near record crop of red clover seed in 1950, Dyas says.

Dates on which harvesting began in Iowa averaged about Sept. 24—9 days later than last year and 5 days later than the 10-year average.

Special Election

Carpenter school district in Worth county is going to have another special school election. Bond attorneys ruled that a former election was invalid because funds were raised to "remodel" the school building. The term, "reconstruct" should have been used, the lawyers said, Webster's dictionary differs slightly; claims that to "re-model" is to "reconstruct."

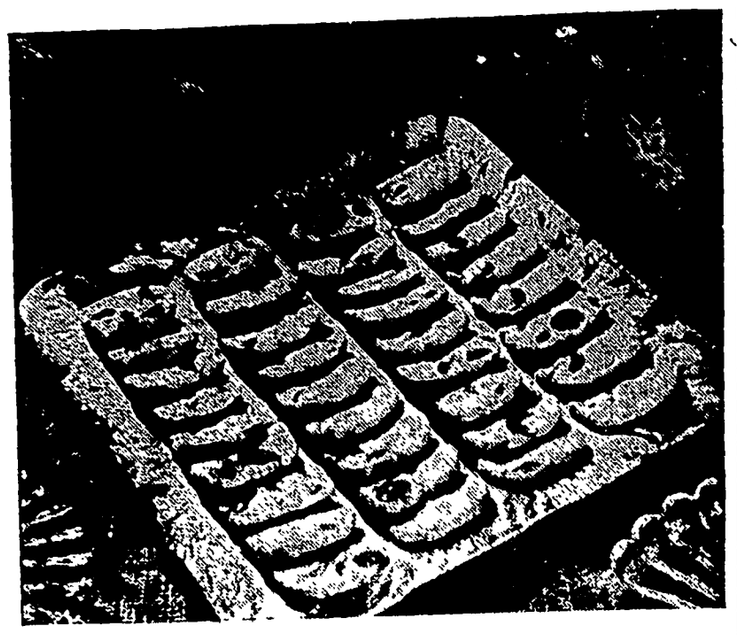
Holiday Time Ahead—Keep The COOKIE JAR FULL



Keeping count of all the cookies the family can eat is usually a hopeless task. But, fortunately, cookies are easy to make—even the festive kind such as these tutti-frutti refrigerator delicacies.

There's always room for another cookie recipe. No matter how many varieties of cookies have won fame and popularity in your home, there's always reason for a new version.

And believe it or not, some kinds of cookies actually do more than just satisfy the family "sweet tooth" or add extra calories of energy — they help put in good nutrition.

Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College, explains it this way. One of the basic seven groups of food needed for good health is the group made up of meat, poultry, fish, eggs, peanuts, dried peas and beans. Some cookies, peanut butter for example, come in this class. Another basic food group is the cereal group—and thus the cookies made with cereals, such as oatmeal, are really providing needed minerals and vitamins. Still another food group is the one containing butter and fortified margarine—and so "butter" cookies and that class add to good health.

Molasses Coconut Chews

Line two 8-inch square pans with waxed paper, grease well. Set oven at 350 degrees F. (moderate). Combine and cream together 1 cup sugar, 1 cup mild molases, one-third cup butter or fat, ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Into this creamed mixture mix ½ cup of unbeaten egg whites. Sift together 2 cups sifted flour, ¼ teaspoon soda and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add these dry ingredients to the creamed mixture. Then stir in 1½ cups of shredded coconut. Pour batter into pans. Bake for 35 minutes at 350 degrees F. When done, turn immediately on wire rack to cool. Remove paper. Cool about 5 minutes, turn right side up when cold, and cut each cake into 24 squares.

Honey Peanut Butter

Both honey and peanut butter are more than plentiful this year. This recipe combines both into a tempting cookie. Cream together ½ cup of shorting, ½ cup honey, 1 egg and ½ teaspoon of salt until the mixture is light and fluffy. Blend ½ cup of peanut butter into the creamed mixture. Then stir in 1½ cups of enriched all-purpose flour sifted with ½ teaspoon soda. Form the dough into small balls. Place each on an oiled sheet. Flatten with a fork one stroke each way on the cookies. Bake at 350 degrees (moderate oven) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Tutti-Frutti Cookies

Sift together 2 cups of enriched flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon of salt. Cream together ½ cup of shortening and 1 cup of sugar until light and fluffy. Add 1 egg, beaten, 1½ teaspoons of grated lemon rind, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, ½ cup of sliced candied cherries and ½ cup of shredded coconut. Now add the flour mixture and mix well. Form the dough into rolls and wrap in waxed paper. Chill overnight in the refrigerator. Slice about ¼ inch thick. Bake on a greased cookie sheet in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes.

Molasses Crispy Wafers

Cream together 1 cup of butter or fat, ½ cup sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla until light and fluffy. Add 1½ cups of mild molasses. Sift together 5 cups of enriched all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 2 teaspoons of baking powder and three-quarters teaspoon of soda, and add these dry ingredients to the creamed mixture. Roll the dough to about one-eighth inch thick, cut and bake on a lightly greased baking sheet at 400 degrees F. about 10 minutes.

Klemme Folks Enjoyed Trip To Mississippi River Sunday

The following Klemme people made up an auto carivan for a trip to Guttenberg Sunday:

Mrs. A. G. Koerner and Kermit; George and Leona Lau; Mrs. Levi Ridder and son, Dennis. In another car were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Arnold, Roy Arnold and family and Mrs. Martha Bredbenner. At Fayette Miss Evelyn Arnold joined the group.

At Guttenberg all were treated to a picnic dinner by the Herb and Floyd Lau families.

The Klemme group also enjoyed a scenic ride along the Mississippi river. Eastern Iowa is very beautiful in the fall and many people make the trip this time of the year.

The Arnold families also visited with Mrs. E. Stanley Jones, wife of the noted Evangelist at Clayton. Mrs. Jones had many interesting relics from India that the visitors enjoyed seeing.

Ellington Experts Met At The Home Of Sharon and Laurel Helvick

The annual meeting of the Ellington Experts 4-H club was brought to order by the president Janice Olson at the home of Sharon and Laurel Helvick, October 21.

Present for the meeting in addition to 15 charter members were Evelyn Boman, Mrs. Arlo Johnson, and Mrs. Earl Anderson, leaders, 5 mothers, and also three new members, Patricia Teddar, Esther Mathews, and Sharon Jefson.

Roll call was given by the secretary with each girl answering with "My Favorite Fun Game At Home." The following officers were elected: President, Mary Lee Fosse; Vice-president, Janice Swanson; Secretary, Francis Anderson; Treasurer, Sharon Helvick; Historian, Marian Abbott, and reporter, Yvonne Olson. An illustrated talk was given by Francine Ericson, "Is This a Closed or Open Grain Wood?" A demonstration was given by Gloria Swanson, "Arranging a Bright Colored and a Neutral Colored Object On a Chest of Drawers." Another demonstration "How To Wax Furniture," was given by Francis Anderson.

Lunch was served by the hostesses and their mothers. Next meeting, Nov. 25, will be held at Francine Ericson's.

OUTLOOK MEETING IS SCHEDULED NOV. 20TH

Latest information on the 1951 farm outlook picture will be presented to Hancock County rural leaders when they meet in Forest City, November 20th.

Occassion for the meeting will be a special outlook training school conducted by specialists in agricultural and home economics at Iowa State College, County Extension Director, Paul Henderson announced today.

The specialists, Wallace E. Ogg, farm economist and Elsie K. Williams, home economist, will present information released at the twenty-sixth annual Outlook Conference in Washington, D. C. Oct. 30 to Nov. 3. The National Conference, which was attended by Iowa State College economists, provided interpretation and details on the international and national outlook for the coming year. Prospects for inflation and the use of controls, government demands on production, defense needs and timing and the present status of consumer goods supplies were included in the Washington conference information that will be passed along to rural leaders at the Nov. 20 meeting.

The economists will also explain how these trends are expected to affect Hancock County farmers and their families, and the influence these factors will have on farm commodity production in 1951.

Material presented to rural leaders at the meeting will be featured at local discussions that will be held later this fall and winter.

When severe winter weather causes egg production to drop, both the hens and the flock owner are unhappy, observes County Extension Director, Paul Henderson.

Chickens are especially susceptible to variable temperatures and when they stand quietly for hours without eating or drinking on cold winter days there will be a corresponding drop in egg production, Henderson says.

While 1 day of extremely bad weather won't affect egg production seriously, 3 or 4 days of severe winter weather may cause the birds to lose body weight and to go into a general molt that may last for 6 weeks.

Because of these factors, insulation more than pays for itself in poultry houses, according to W. R. Whitfield, Iowa State College extension poultryman. He says profits actually are increased by insulation that protects hens from the shock of winter temperatures.

By using deep litter, sanitary watering systems and ample feed space along with insulation in the laying house, Hancock County flock owners are assured of more eggs and cleaner eggs, Henderson says. The farmer who provides comfortable winter quarters for the poultry flock also can expect more returns from the feed he puts out and flock mortiality will be lower, the county extension director concludes.

SOIL TESTING RECORDS SHOW FERTILIZER NEEDS

Records kept at the Iowa State College Soil Testing Laboratory provide a good indication if the fertility problems in every county in the state.

J. W. Fitts, head of the laboratory, says a record is kept of the fertility needs of every soil sample that is sent in. This is recorded along with the county that the sample came from.

These records are summarized periodically on maps and charts. Fitts says it's surprising how nearly the results coinside with the soil association maps of the state and the corresponding needs of the different types of soils.

With 40,000 samples coming in each year, the head of the laboratory reports that a fairly accurate picture of the needs of the entire state can be obtained.

The records are used in various ways. Research men use them in deciding where to locate fertility plots where they'll do the most good. They can tell which sections of the state have the most difficult fertility problems and locate their plots there.

Fertilizer companies use them to help in deciding what type of fertilizers to send to the different areas. For example, they can use the charts to avoid sending a lot of potassium fertilizer into a territory that isn't deficient in potassium.

Election Forecast

THIS REPORTER has just returned to Washington after a three-week trip through the middle and central west and a shoulder-to-shoulder talk with farmers, filling station operators, proprietors of tourist camps and others in North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

As a result of this survey which we have given partially in previous reports to the people, the pre-election poll indicates the following results in the election of November 7:

Indiana—Sen. Homer Capehart, Republican, will be defeated.

Illinois—Sen. Scott Lucas, Democrat, will be reelected.

Iowa—Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper, Republican, will be reelected.

Missouri—Sen. Forrest Donnell, Republican, will be defeated.

Ohio Sen. Robert A. Taft, Republican, will be reelected but by such a small majority, it will remove the senator from national consideration.

Wisconsin—Sen. Alexander Wiley, Republican, may be defeated.

Oklahoma — Congressman Mike Monroney, Democrat, will win the U. S. senatorship.

Maryland—Sen. Millard Tydings, Democrat, will be reelected.

Pennsylvania — Sen. Francis J. Myers, Democrat, may be defeated.

South Dakota—Congressman Francis Case, Republican, who defeated Sen. Chan Gurney in the primary, likely will win the senatorial race.

Kentucky—Gov. Earle C. Clements, Democrat, will be elected senator over Charles I. Dawson, the Republican nominee, to fill the seat now held by Sen. Garrett Withers.

Communism Big Question

Principle subjects which the people asked questions about in the middle west included: "What about the Communist mess in Washington?" It was hard to make them believe that there were probably less Communists in Washington than in any other American city of like size. Another question: "Is the administration going to let prices get out of sight before they do anything about it?" Of course this remains to be seen, but indications are that the President has already set up the machinery under the new law to put a clamp on price increases to halt inflation.

Another question: Why do we have to pay increased taxes when they failed to do anything about increased taxes on business?" The answer is that the new tax bill did put an increase on corporation taxes, approximately 15 per cent, and the congress agreed to meet on November 27 to enact an excess profits tax which would be retroactive, probably to June 25. At least the congress plans to enact an excess profits tax the first thing in the next session meeting in January.

* * *

Harriman's Statement

If you will remember, Senator Taft of Ohio declared that President Truman's decision to send American troops into Korea was illegal . . . that he had no power to do so without consulting the congress. Now there is widespread debate over the statement of W. Averell Harriman as an affront to Taft. Harriman, former roving ambassador to Mr. Truman in Europe, speaking to the AFL convention in Houston, Texas, said: "When you look at (Taft's) record, you cannot escape the conclusion that if congress had adopted his positions, Communist objectives would thereby have been furthered." In turn Taft attacked the Marshall plan, where he voted to cut appropriations, as wasteful and he criticized Mr. Harriman's job as RCA roving ambassador in Europe.

Debate Costs $7,216

How much is it worth to you to hear a debate over the question of whether or not the Communists have infiltrated into the National Farmers Union? As a matter of fact such a debate costs the taxpayers $7,216. Sen. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) started the thing when he charged that Communists or Communist "coddlers" occupy influential positions in the farmers union and said that the farm group espouses causes and parrots red propaganda. The farmers union is particularly strong in the plains states and on the west coast. Then Sen. William Langer, (R., N. D.) "threw the book" at Senator Bridges and his supporters in a three-hour senate speech. He had assists.

Chapman Cleared

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman apparently won a clean bill of health from a senatorial investigating committee when Sen. Andrew F. Schoeppel, Republican, Kansas, who brought the original charges, suggested in a letter that the hearings be held secretly until after the election. Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney spurned the suggestion. That about ended the hearing and the charge against Chapman.

AMAZING SPECTACLE

Two tramps sat beneath a water tank in the damp shade. The old hobo asked, "Going east, son?"

"Yes," replied the younger.

"Don't do it," the old one cautioned.

"Why not?"

"Twon't do any good for me to tell you why not. Just take the advice of an older man and don't do it. You wouldn't believe me if I told you. Even when you see it you won't believe it."

"Won't believe what?" asked the mystified young tramp.

"You'll see folks running — to work."

Mule Trouble

Virgil Smith was a famous Oklahoma mule tender. Mule-tending is dangerous, but Virgil never got hurt. One morning, though, he appeared on a pair of crutches.

"Good gracious, Virgil!" his boss said. "I thought you were one of the best mule tenders in the business."

"So I am, boss," said Virgil, "but we got a mule in last evenin' wot didn't know my reputation."

Command Performance

Walter was going to have a party, and his mother insisted on his inviting, among others, a neighbor's boy with whom he had had an argument. He finally promised he would do so, but on the day of the party the neighbor's boy failed to turn up.

Walter's mother became suspicious. "Didn't you invite Charlie?" she asked.

"Of course I did, mother. I not only invited him to come, I dared him to."

Headliners

President Truman who is becoming famous as a letter writer, wrote to his old friend Colorado State Senator Neal Bishop, "I wouldn't appoint John L. Lewis dogcatcher."

"The President could ill afford to have more brains in the dog department than in the department of state," replied the UMW boss with his usual bark and bite.

"We want nothing from Korea. We want no bases there. We do not want to and will not threaten any other country through the temporary presence of American troops in Korea on a U.N. mission," Warren R. Austin, American delegate to the United Nations told the general assembly.

KOREA:

A Future Hope

The United Nations gave Gen. Douglas MacArthur the signal to cross the 38th parallel in the final campaign to crush the Communists and the future hope of a unified Korea.

But the delay in giving that approval may cost the U.N. forces in manpower and material. It gave the Communists time to collect their shattered forces and prepare for another stand, whereas a continued attack by U.N. troops when the Reds were in full flight could have ended the war quickly.

It was the old story of immature thinking and lack of plans on the part of the western nations. Had the situation been reversed, is there anyone who thinks the Reds would have stopped long enough to let U.N. forces regroup? They would have continued to attack and secure any necessary approval later.

But be that as it may, the general assembly finally got around to voting on the invasion of North Korea, approving it 47 to 5.

The assembly authorized:

1. That "all appropriate steps be taken to insure conditions of stability throughout Korea."
2. "That U.N. forces should not remain in any part of Korea otherwise so far as necessary to achieve some other aims of the plan."

Defense Line

Defense department officials and civil defense planners, met with heads of more than 53 women's groups at a meeting in the national security resources board headquarters in Washington.

er said the agricul- ture extension service was supplying U.N. flag-pattern kits to 4-H and women's farm clubs and urging members to become "modern Betsy Rosses" by making such flags at home.

Said an agriculture department spokesman, "The proposal is to display U.N. flags parallel to the American flag, just as it is done by General MacArthur."

UNITED NATIONS:

New Twist for Soviet

While men died on the battlefields of Korea, power politics continued to rage in the United Nations, but with a new twist from the Soviet Union.

The new twist developed when the United States urged the U. N. to adopt a plan by which national troops would form a U.N. force to keep world peace by the veto-free general assembly.

Instead of ripping the plan apart, Soviet foreign minister Andrei Vishinsky said he saw some good point in it, but suggested each point of the proposal be discussed separately.

At first the western diplomats were shaken by Vishinsky's conciliatory tone and stared at each other in disbelief. But then it dawned upon them that by discussing the points separately, Russia almost certainly meant to oppose the key provision that would allow the general assembly to meet in 24 hours and act against aggression if a veto paralyzed the security council.

It was the old, old story of politics between world powers.

CHICAGO:

A Case of Jitters

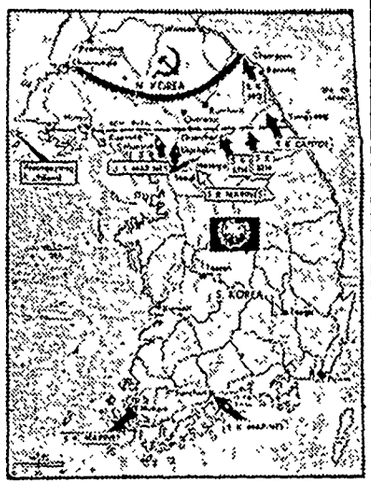
Senator Kefauver of Tennessee and his crime investigating committee arrived in Chicago, held a series of hearings, and departed leaving a case of jitters behind them that reached into high circles.

Said the senator as he departed: "We think we have found strong evidence that the Capone syndicate is still operating . . . . . There is evidence of gangsters muscling into legitimate businesses, and of political ties between gangsters and politicians of both parties."

Kefauver's committee planned hearings in New York, Philadelphia and then a jump back to Chicago. A recent hearing in Miami revealed connections between gamblers and city officials in that winter resort.

After the Chicago hearings, Kefauver said he is convinced that a Mafia is in operation in Chicago at present. The Mafia is an Italo-Sicilian-born secret society of loose organization that specializes in extortion, and deals out its own punishment.

Civil Defense



The jagged line was the approximate defense line of North Korean forces battling against United Nations forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur at the time the general demanded the surrender of the Communists.

SECURITY LAW:

Matter of Discretion

The nation's new Internal Security act has already been under fire in enforcement. The law had threatened for a time to bar the return to this country of Arturo Toscanini, the world's most renowned conductor.

The immigration department quickly issued a statement saying the musician would be allowed to re-enter this country, thereby avoiding a storm of protests.

At the same time Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said he was using his "discretionary" power in permitting Friedrich Gulda, 20, Austrian pianist, to enter this country for his American debut at Carnegie Hall.

Gulda joined the Nazi youth movement at the age of 10 because the law forced him to. The new law bars admission to the country of anyone who ever has been a member of, or "affiliated" with, a Communist, Nazi, or Fascist party.

CASUALTIES:

Heaviest Report

As United Nations forces crossed the 38th parallel and advanced into Communist territory, the department of defense released the heaviest casualty list of the Korean campaign.

It contained names of 1,211 members of the U.S. armed services. The deaths numbered 225; those wounded in action, 822; missing in action, 73, and injured 48.

CRIME:

Up in Rural Areas

Its hard to believe, but the facts are there just the same. The country crossroads continue to hold the crime spotlight during the first half of 1950.

The F.B.I. reported an increase of 7.4 per cent in rural crime compared with the same period in 1949. In the first half of last year, rural crime jumped 7.6 per cent.

Rural murders increased 1.6 per cent; rape, 4.8; robbery, 3.4.

Your Worst and Best

Lesson for November 5, 1950

"Within my earthly temple there's a crowd:
There's one of us that's humble, one that's proud;
There's one that's broken-hearted for his sins,
And one that, unrepentant, sits and grins.
From much perplexing doubt I could be free,
If I could once be certain which is me."

FROM some anonymous rhymester comes this complaint, which any of us might have truthfully written if we had thought about it. Which is me, anyway? I seem to have three selves. One is a good deal better than my everyday or ordinary self. On rare occasions he will do something or other so good it surprises even my best friends — it "isn't like me." On the other side is another self, much worse than my everyday personality. He too surprises me by acts or thoughts so dreadful I am afraid of him and ashamed too. Yet both these "other selves" are "me" too.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

Life is a Fight

THE TRUTH of the business is that life, when a man takes it seriously, is a fight. It is a war between your best and your worst self. Your two other-selves are there every moment, like ghosts, or rather like a bright angel and a dark one.

It is always possible to become a better man than you are; also, alas, it is possible to become far worse than you are. No man stays the same through life. He is continually pressing upward, or plunging downward, or varying between the two. There has been only one person, Christians believe, who actually fulfilled all the good that was possible for him. The possibilities for evil in his life remained only possibilities—he never let them come to pass.

The possibilities for good, on the other hand, became real. His dark angel remained only a ghost; his good angel was simply his real self. At no point in his life was he forced to say to himself, "I wish I had . . . I wish I had not." And yet, even for him life was a struggle. We do not believe he sinned. We do believe he was tempted; and if the temptation was real, then he could have sinned. No man can be really tempted to do what he cannot do. Yes, the Master had his fight. But the point is: he won.

* * *

The Way to Win

CHRISTIANS are not exempt in this war of good against evil. We are not "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease" any more than Jesus was. We do not drift into the Promised Land. We have to fight our way uphill.

Yet Christians are expected to win. That is, God stands beside each Christian in his fight, and God's power is for the Christian's use. As Saint Paul says, with each temptation God provides a "way of escape." Our prayer "Lead us not into temptation" can always be answered. Sometimes it can be answered by ourselves. That is, we cannot leave the fight to God.

But we can win as Jesus won: sometimes by standing and doing battle where we are, sometimes simply by leaving temptation behind. For often the best thing to be done is to retreat. Get as far as you can from whatever tempts your worse self. Don't stand debating between right and wrong when you know which is which. Turn your back on the wrong . . . run, don't walk, to the nearest exit!

* * *

Is Alcoholism a Disease?

ONE OF the common temptations of millions at all times is alcoholism. It is popular to speak of this as a "disease;" and yet it is the only disease of which victims have actually cured themselves.

Dr. Brady, whose medical column is well known, reminds us that nobody ever got over migraine headaches, or heart disease, simply by deciding to be well. But men and women have got over alcoholism, essentially by deciding to be well, and sticking to that decision.

Alcoholics Anonymous, that well-known group of former victims, who have been very successful in helping slaves of this habit to become their best selves, use much the same methods we find in the New Testament: (1) staying out of temptation's way, (2) overcoming evil with good; and (3) laying hold of the "Power, not ourselves, that makes for righteousness."

Klemme May Get Gas Lines Next Year

Klemme has a special interest in the completion of the new gas line in this community. The new line can serve many more communities not now receiving natural gas service.

The company some time ago indicated that they expected to run the lines into Klemme, as well as several other towns, in 1951. Klemme is one of the first towns on the list of new hook-ups to receive service.

HANCOCK FARMERS URGED TO TAKE SOIL SAMPLES NOW BEFORE GROUND FREEZES

Hancock County farmers who want to use soil test information in planning next year's crops will be wise to take soil samples right away, according to County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

He points out that the time for cold weather is rapidly approaching and it's difficult to collect an accurate soil sample once the ground freezes. The number of borings and the depth required make soil sampling hard to do in frozen ground.

Henderson reports that the Iowa State Collepe Soil testing Laboratories have stayed on schedule this year and are now returning test results to county extension directors within three weeks after they are received. New testing machines and production line methods have accounted for the increased efficiency in the testing operation.

The earlier samples are sent in, the sooner test results along with recommendations can be returned to farmers. Early test results will allow early ordering and delivery of fertilizer needs for next year, Henderson explains.

Detailed instructions on taking soil samples may be obtained along with mailing cartons from Henderson or from Production and Marketing Administration Committeemen.

DON SCHAEFER WON $10.00 AWARD FOR BEING ALERT

Don Schaefer, proprietor of Don's D-X Super Service Station on U. S. 69 west of Klemme, is $10 richer just for tending to business.

Don received the award from the Anderson Co. of Gary, Indiana, who are sponsoring a safety campaign by having the servicemen check windshield wipers. Don received his award when he installed a pair of windshield wiper arms and blades on a car licensed 99-167 Iowa 1950.

After installing the wipers Don filled out a form for the Anderson Co. and sent it in. The Company holds a drawing every week and Don's filled in form came up, thus the extra $10 pocket money.

COURT HOUSE WILL BE CLOSED ARMISTICE DAY

The Court House offices will all be closed on Saturday, Nov. 11, which is Armistice Day, a legal holiday. If you have business at the Court House be sure to call there before Saturday.

Pour Concrete On Farm To Market Garner Road

The Carlson Construction Co. of Decorah began pouring concrete on the new paved farm to market road at the south edge of Garner, which will be paved from U. S. 69 east to the cemetery.

The company has set up its mixing machinery just west of Garner along the Milwaukee tracks.

23 RULES FOR SAFE HUNTING

The theme of Gun Safety Week, November 6 to November 12 is that firearms, when handled properly, provide safe recreation. Pheasant season opens Nov. 11 and the 23 rules listed below provide good reminders for safe hunting.

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule if gun safety.
2. Carry only empty guns, taken down or encased, into your automobile, camp and home.
3. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.
4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble.
5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.
8. Never climb a tree or a fence with a loaded gun.
9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.
10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.
11. Make a practice if leaving the action of your gun open when it is not loaded.
12. Think before you shoot. It is better to miss your target than hit your companion.
13. Remember—an average of 37 persons have been killed annually in Iowa from gunshot wounds.
14. Nineteen out of every 20 hunting accidents could have been avoided with proper gun handling.
15. Never rely on the safety of your gun. It may not work.
16. Beware of putting a 20 guage shell in a 12 guage gun.
17. It is very dangerous to hunt pheasants with a 22 rifle.
18. Remember a 22 long rifle is dangerous up to one mile.
19. It is unlawful to shoot a rifle on or over any public waters or public highways of the state, or any railroad right of way.
20. Do not shoot migratory waterfowl with a rifle. It is very dangerous as well as unlawful.
21. Avoid hunting close to buildings or other groups of hunters.
22. When handling your gun to your hunting partner, be sure it is unloaded and that the muzzle of the gun is pointed skyward.
23. Never place your finger on the trigger until you are ready to fire.

TWIN LAKE GO-GETTERS ELECT OFFICERS

The Twin Lake Go-Getters 4-H club met at the home of Faye Jansen, October 28. Eight members were present. Elsie Mae VanWert, County Extension Home Economist and three visitors were present. Election of officers was held. The following were elected: President, Faye Janssen, Vive President, Shirley Nelson, Secretary-treasurer, Loretta Foss, Reporter, Darlene Roul and Historian, Mercella Neuhring.

The meeting was adjourned to meet November 11th at the home of Marcella Neuhring at 2:00 P. M. A lunch was served by the hostess and her mother. Anyone interested in 4-H is welcome to come to the November meeting.

METHODIST BAZAAR THURS. OF NEXT WEEK

The annual Methodist church Bazaar will be held at the Klemme Methodist Church on Thursday, November 16th with selling beginning at 2:00 p. m.

The ladies have many items that will be suitable for Christmas gifts.

Lunches will be served all afternoon and the men of the town are invited to come to the church for coffee, hot meat sandwiches, pie and doughnuts.

There will be a store, a candy booth and a fish pond for the children. Everyone invited.

KLEMME IS FIRST TO PASS QUOTO IN SCOUT CAMPAIGN

The town of Klemme has the honor of being the first in Hancock County to complete the Friends of Scouting Campaign 100 per cent, in fact Klemme went over the top in this campaign.

Dr. A. H. Dulmes was campaign chairman and reports a total of $264.50 in the Klemme community. This exceeds the quota set up for Klemme.

A number of other Hancock County communities have completed the canvass up to 80 per cent and all are expected to complete their campaign this week.

FIFTEEN ATTENDED CIRCLE MEETING

The Martha Cirlce met at the home of Mrs. Roy Arnold Oct. 24th with 15 members and four children present.

Those taking part in the devotional and program period were: Mrs. Harry Gibbs; Mrs. Lloyd Lau; Mrs. Geo. Schoenwetter; Mrs. Benn Coobs; Mrs. Roy Arnold and Mrs. Kate Sandrey.

Bazaar plans were announced and committees appointed for their booth. Mrs. Gibbs explained the Supply Booth, which will also be on display on Nov. 16th.

Mrs. Edwin Josten planned the entertainment. Lunch was served by Mrs. Roy Arnold at the close of the social hour.

HANCOCK FARM BUREAU MEMBERS WILL SEE DALLAS

Hancock County Farm Bureau members were urged this week to contact the county Farm Bureau office at once if they are interested in making the trip to Dallas, Texas, December 4 on the Farm Bureau's special train.

Hancock County Farm Bureau president, Gilbert Guenther, announced that the train will leave Des Moines December 4 and return December 15. The train's destination will be the American Farm Bureau Convention in Dallas, but interesting stops are slated enroute at Mammoth Cave in Kentucky; Nashville, Tennessee; the TVA fertilizer plant and demonstration farms near Decatur, Alabama; and New Orleans.

Mr. Guen there reports that all Farm Bureau members in the county are eligible to make the trip and that complete details regarding the cost of reservations on the special train are available at the Farm Bureau Office.

Mr. Guentheralso pointed out to Farm Bureau members that the trip will be more interesting due to the fact that all the passengers on the special train will be Iowa Farm Bureau members, with essentially the same interests as far as the special stops are concerned.

The tours in Nashville and New Orleans will be optional, but the entire group will make the tours at Mammoth Cave, the TVA fertilizer plant, and Montgomery.

The train ticket, including a lower berth and all five of the tours as well as 13 meals will be provided at a cost of approximately $152, Mr. Guenther announced. The pullman berths will be used for 7 night so the only hotel expense incurred on the trip will be for 4 nights in Dallas.

Mr. Guenther pointed out that December is an ideal time to take such a trip, especially in view of the fact that most of the worries usually connected with such a vacation trip will have been taken care of before the trip starts.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

By Burr Combs

The two men were friends. Just that phase tells a story.

They had found something in each other to respect, and more, something to be a base for that strong human sentiment -friendship. They lunched together sometimes, hunted and fished as a team when the seasons were open. Because of their friendship, their wives and children were drawn together.

"Uncle Joe" and "Uncle Fred" were their names to the children; each little brood giving that title of love and trust to Daddy's friend.

There were family picnics as the years went by; suppers at home in the wintertime, too. Grace and Lou, the wives, shared shopping trips and wept together at movie matinees.

When Fred's son made the "A" team, Joe was as tickled as when his own boy won the freshman debate.

They could look at each other and instantly feel warm and good. They could merely shake hands and get more said than ten thousands words could say.

One day, at dusk, they were driving back from a neighboring town's artificial lake. As they sped along the highway in the growing darkness, Joe and Fred laughed over the day's events; laughed so hard that Joe, who was driving, had tears come to his eyes.

That did it. A gale of manly glee, tears in the eyes from laughter, enveloping darkness, high sped and a slow-moving wagon not marked with a lighted red tail lamp.

Joe lived, but his friend Fred went partway through the windshield. And Joe never even got out of the hospital until months after his friend was buried. Joe's boy had taken his place, though. He was pall-bearer for "Uncle Fred."

PREDICT RECORD NUMBER OF PHEASANT HUNTERS

Twelve o'clock noon, November 11, will hear the opening guns of a record number of pheasant hunters. Conservation officials expect more than 100,000 hunters will be out for ringnecks. Census returns indicate a better population of pheasants than in '49, when hunters were agreeably surprised at the number of birds in the field. Surveys indicate the heaviest densities of ringnecks are in the northern three tiers of counties in the western two-thirds of the state, although pockets of heavy densities are found outside this area.

Hungarian partridges, extremely scarce for the past several seasons, are making a spectacular comeback. The season on Hungarians, however, is closed this year.

In a last minute plea to sportsmen, the Conservation Commission asked all hunters to observe the "Kill No Hens" regulation and pointed out that a part of the success of this year's pheasant season is due to the fact that hunters refrained from shooting hen birds last year. The Commission also reminded hunters to secure permission of the landowners before hunting on private property and to follow the simple safety rules of firearms handling.

The pheasant season opens at noon November 11 and closes at 4:30 p. m. November 20 in the short season zone. In the long season zone shooting hours are the same, but the season is open through December 5. Bag and possession limit is three cock birds.

TEEN-AGE SHORTAGES

Are the teen-agers in your family going shy of the vegetables and fruits they need for nutrition and health?

A survey of college freshmen women and high school students, made recently by Ruth Tucker of the Rhode Island Experiment Station, showed that many of these young people were not getting enough iron, vitamins A and C, and some of the B vitamins, generally because they were scanting vegetables and fruit.

Each student was given a nutritional physical examination and all food eaten for a week by each one was recorded.

The blood tests showed that three-fourths the high school boys and half the high school and college women were low in carotene (for vitamin A), indicating too few green and yellow vegetables.

Food records showed about a third of the students to be low in one or more dietary essentials. Though no out-and-out deficiencies diseases were found in the physical examinations, many had such telling early symtomsas roughness or inflammation of skin or abnormalities in the Mucous membranes of eyes, mouth and lips.

TURKEY DRESSING RECIPE

By Fred Ausborn

Our friend "Shorty" Ausborn is a real good cook and turns out some very tasty dishes. We prevailed on Fred to give us one of his favorite recipes and here's one that is really timely on a delicious turkey dressing:

One or two loaves of one or two-day bread, trim off outside crust, then grate this and add one small onion, mixing together with a little salt and just a little powdered sage. Melt one pound of butter and pour the melted butter over the mixture. Stuff into the bird by standing it on it's neck, after stuffing sew up the bird.

And that's all there is to it and you will like the dressing.

COUNTY AND STATE GOES REPUBLICAN

Republicans Win Two To One In Most Offices

Tuesday's General Election was definitely a Republican vicory in Iowa from the county through the state in all offices.

Hancock County turned out over 6,000 voters, nearly double the number who voted in the spring primary. The county went Republican all the way through.

For U. S. Senator Hickenlooper beat Loveland in the county 2864 to 2309; Beardsley won the governorship over Gillette 3375 to 1887 and for Lieut. Gov. Nicholas had 3553 votes and Christofferson 1445. All other State offices were easy victories.

For Congressman, Republican James Dolliver got 3299 votes and O'Reilly 1430.

For State Representative incumbent Penn Eckles of Britt defeated Lester Stille of Klemme 2722 to 2211.

County Returns

Returns for the county are as follows, with the Republicans on the left hand side, Democrats on the right:

County Auditor

How They Voted In Ell

Ell went Republican with the exception of 2 offices: Lester Stille for Representative received 221 votes and Penn Eckles 153. Ben Greiman received 207 votes and Clint Daniels 185. Another local candidate, Ed. Green received 129 votes and Frank Schoun had 237.

NO SPECIAL OBSERVANCE HERE ON ARMISTICE DAY, NOV. 11TH

As Armistice Day falls on Saturday this year, the grocery stores in Klemme have decided to keep open.

A number of other business places in Klemme will be closed on this legal holiday. Those who have indicated they will be closed for the day include the Klemme Hardware Co., Northern Lumber Co., Klemme Coop. Grain Co., Klemme Coop. Creamery Co., First National Bank, U. S. Post Office, The Klemme Times. There may be other business places which will close but had not called The Times as we go to press.

420 VOTES CAST IN ELL TOWNSHIP

The turn-out of voters in Ell township was the best in a number of years, 420, but is still far short of being 100 per cent.

Of the 420 votes cast 89 were straight Reupblican, 31 straight Democrat, 292 mixed and 8 spoiled.

Choirs Enjoy Social Hour

The Methodist and Reformed Choirs met for rehearsal Thursday evening in preparing an Anthem for the Sunday Services. After the singing, all choir members, along with Rev. and Mrs. Jaberg and Rev. and Mrs. Egeland enjoyed a social hour, and ice cream, cakes and coffee were served.

Dangerous Investigation

SENATOR Kefauver's determination to investigate the Mafia requires a lot more courage than appears on the surface. Not only is it dangerous from the point of view of personal safety, but it is dangerous politically. For the Mafia has friends and protectors in very high places.

President Truman had no idea what was happening, and probably his naive military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, did not suspect it, but the Mafia was making a play for White House pull through the late William Helis, close friend and partner of Frankie Costello. The senate expenditures committee was in the throes of unearthing real dynamite in regard to this during the Maragon-Vaughan investigation, when Senator Hoey considerately hushed the hearings up.

How the Mafia pulls wires in high places is illustrated by Sylvestro Carolla, New Orleans hatchet man for Louisiana's Mafia chief, Marcello, who helps operate Costello's gambling joints in and around New Orleans. Carolla's son, Anthony, is married to Marcello's niece, Maria Zaniatta, who came to the United States from Italy on a visitor's permit in 1947, but strangely has been allowed to remain here ever since. Obviously she could not have done so without political pull.

Carolla was convicted in 1921 for bootlegging, and spent a year and a day in Atlanta; was sentenced again in 1931 to 24 months for violating tthe narcotics laws; and in 1933 was sentenced to 8 to 15 years at hard labor for attempted murder. However, the Mafia has pull. And, one year after the attempted murder, Carolla was given a full pardon by the governor of Louisiana.

Two years later, in January, 1936, Carolla was slapped into Atlanta on a five-year sentence for a narcotics violation, and this time the federal government finally decided that he was not a useful citizen and ordered him deported. Whereupon Congressman James Morrison of Louisiana came to his rescue, introducing a series of private bills to keep him in this country. However, Carolla's record was too black even for political pull, and on April 30, 1947, he was deported from Boston by plane.

Two years later, he turned up in Mexico, operating out of Acapulco, having been ordered there by Lucky Luciano personally. And on July 4, 1950, Carolla was picked up in New Orleans, right back in his old stamping ground.

Secret Mafia Roll Call

Here is the hitherto unpublished roll call on more of the Mafia leaders, the most powerful rulers of crime in the United States:

FRANK CAPPOLA, alias "Three-Fingered Frank"—Cappola was prominent in the New Orleans Mafia, then showed up in Kansas City, where he was linked with the late Charlie Binaggio. In fact, Binaggio aided Cappola to resist deportation in 1930 but failed. Cappola was deported but came back again, in May, 1949, with Binaggio on his $2,000 deportation bond.

Cappola set up headquarters in Tijuana, Mexico, and in 1949 Binaggio made an interesting trip to Mexico, stopping off to visit Cappola in Tijuana and Carolla in Acapulco. Once the Tijuana chief of police, Francisco Kraus, raided Cappola's headquarters in a Tijuana motel, and found with him Frank Bompenserio, a San Diego tavern owner and business associate of Jack Dragna, boss of the California Mafia.

Texas Gambling Lords

JOE DI GIOVANNI, alias Joe fore 1920, Maceo was a humble Galveston barber. But he broke into the bootlegging racket, graduated to dope smuggling, then muscled into the gambling rackets, and now owns Galveston night clubs, bars and two hotels. Maceo is also a power in Texas politics. Born in Italy in 1894, his criminal record shows no convictions, only an acquittal on a New York narcotics rap Oct. 24, 1942.

BIAGGLIO ANGELICA of Houston—Is Maceo's surbordinate in the Mafia, has been linked with Maceo in narcotics smuggling, was sentenced to 10 years and fined $2,000 on a narcotics rap at Houston, Oct. 20, 1938; was sentenced to another eight years' imprisonment at Galveston Jan. 10, 1940, and still another two years at New York city Oct. 10, 1942, both on narcotics violations.

Missouri Mobsters

JOE DI GIOVANNI, allias Joe Church, Kansas City—is Mafia chief in the Kansas City area, coming there from Brooklyn. Di Giovanni has been the big boss over such better-known bosses as Joe De Luca and the late Charles Binaggio. Di Giovanni's front is the Di Giovanni wholesale liquor company, which incidentally has employed Paul Cantanzaro, a murder suspect, as night watchman. Di Giovanni's criminal history goes back to 1915.

JUST KIDDING

His Mistake

Mrs. Brown was displaying a large lampshade she had just bought.

"Isn't that perfectly lovely, my dear? And it cost only two dollars!"

Her husband looked anything but pleased.

"If you wear that to church tomorrow you'll go alone," he said. "There's a limit to everything, including hats!"

Night and Day

Two men, Smith and Jones, were discussing the merits and otherwise of their respective wives.

"You know, said Smith, "my wife tells me that almost every night she dreams that she is married to a millionaire."

"You're darn lucky," replied Jones. "Mine thinks that in the daytime."

Working Girls' Job Market On Wage Upswing, Report

NEW YORK—A New York employment agency reports happy job hunting days are here again. Big companies are hunting for $15,000 a year executives and girls right out of a typing course say, "I want a job for $50 a week."

Suzanne Mathias, partner in the agency, says, "It's almost impossible to find a girl who'll take a job at $40 a week now. Six months ago, although they weren't exactly crying for them, the girls would take the job at that figure."

She hastened to add that things are not yet as tough for employers as they were during World War II.

"Companies are still being choosy about the men they hire for those executive jobs. And a girl still has to prove she has something to offer before an employer will hire her at $50 or more a week."

The labor scarce war years, when companies had to hire inexperienced and often unqualified people, are too fresh in most memories.

"Those days when an employer would say, 'just send me anybody, so long as she breathes and is warm,' aren't back with us. But if job applicants keep holding out for higher salaries and our old clients keep calling up to fill jobs they haven't filled for years, then something's got to give."

Nobody Produces Any Toys, Plaint of Soviet Mothers

WASHINGTON – Government officials report that mothers in the Baku area of the Soviet Union are complaining that government cooperatives have "completely forgotten about the manufacture of toys for children."

One co-op tried to manufacture dolls but mothers rejected them as "monstrosities." The complaints were published in a Soviet publication, The Baku Worker

Aid to Explorers

Rescue work is a helicopter job. Notable was the one in 1945 when U. S. coast guard helicopter, assembled at Goose bay, Labrador, rescued 11 Canadian airmen, one at a time, from a bleak Labrador hillside after conventional planes had repeatedly failed. Helicopters have become standard equipment for fleets operating in ice-filled waters.

Venezuelan Oil

Venezuelan oil is playing an important part in the U.S. plans for national defense, as created by the Korean situation and other threats to international peace and security. Petroleum writers are citing the vast potential of Venezuela as well as current production rate of over 1,500,000 barrels a day as a huge reservoir for greatly increased petroleum needs.

DURING WORLD WAR II women, like the one above using a turning tool, proved highly efficient workmen in plants where women had never before been employed.

WOMANPOWER

Womanpower Is Great Unused U. S. Resource in Event of War

Former women defense workers of World War II, stirred by news headlines of bigger armament appropriations, are beginning to apply to their old employers for factory jobs, but the jobs generally won't be available for many months yet, reports the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

From industrial plants in such former war industry centers as Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, and Minneapolis, personnel departments report scattering "early bird" calls from women who dropped out of war production work after V-J day. It will be well into 1951, however, before current armament legislation in congress can turn into any sizeable number of factory jobs.

But when the need comes, we will have an estimated reserve pool of 1¾ million women, some already trained but most yet to be trained. Normal population growth is increasing this pool at the rate of 200,000 per year, the bureau reports.

Fine World War II Record

Women have proven their value to defense, and therein lies a story in which America overcame prejudice and tradition.

At the beginning of World War II industry found it necessary to recruit women, but they were met with apathy or outright resistance. Many employers and men workers believed that women had no mechanical aptitude, were not accustomed to regular working hours and close supervision and would not work side by side with men without disrupting plant morale.

But as the number of women on production lines continued to increase in World War II, employers and foremen were effusive in their praise of the quality and quantity of the work done by women under their supervision, and were even willing to admit its equality to that of men.

In 1900, one American woman out of five was gainfully employed. In 1940, one out of every four women held a paying job. From the Pearl Harbor attack in December, 1941, to the peak of 1944, 6½ million women joined the working force, bringing the total number of employed women to approximately 20 million.

Many in Heavy Industry

There were 478,000 women in the aircraft industry; they made up 36.5 per cent of the production force, as against a mere fraction of 1 per cent in 1940. In the making of electrical machinery and equipment, a light industry which had employed women on almost a third of its production jobs before the war, the number of women rose to 370,000 or 48 per cent.

The shipbuilding industry, in which a number of jobs are physically difficult, disagreeable, or dangerous, was understandably slow to admit women, yet in October, 1943, there were 164,700 women (9.6 per cent) in the shipyards. Many of them worked outdoors in all kinds of weather or tackled jobs such as cleaning bilges and sandblasting. In other heavy industries, such as steel, reluctant to employ women, the number in the plants continued to increase until 381,600 women were employed by autumn of 1944.

In the event of war and total mobilization, women would play an ever greater part in armed forces than during World War II. During the last conflict 275,000 women were members of the armed forces, about one-third the number that the army estimated it could have used. A new emergency would undoubtedly require a greater number of women in the services.

Draft a Possibility

If there was a new emergency the United States would probably try first to recruit women on a voluntary basis. If that failed to produce the numbers needed, the only recourse open would be some form of compulsory service, perhaps similar to that used by Great Britain during World War II.

After V-J day, less than two million women dropped from the employment rolls, so that of the total female population aged 14 or over, one out of every three, or over 18 million, are still gainfully employed. Due to the high marriage rate of recent years, the number of single women in the population is almost 3 million less than in 1940, and of our nearly 33 million housewives, a larger proportion have small children. Therefore, our reserves of potential women workers, like our reserves of male workers, are far smaller than before World War II.

Nevertheless, a reserve pool of from 1¾ million to two million additional women workers can make a huge difference in the power of a new defense effort. Women workers had a proud record in World War II. They quickly learned the necessary skills. Their absenteeism was lower. They gave high quality performance on the job. Women not only filled defense plant jobs, but equally important, they filled vacancies in civilian occupations left by men entering military service, and thereby kept the home front economy from being disrupted.

The need for women in industry will increase during the next year as the armed forces are expanded to 3,000,000 men. At present there are about 1,500,000 men in the armed services.

Farm Role Important

Women during World War II increased their activities on the farms of the nations and at the end of the conflict were working in the fields beside men in jobs they had never done before. That they were successful is evident by the fact that agricultural production reached an all-time high during the conflict.

Employment in United States industry, trade, and other nonfarm lines has reached an all-time high of 45,500,000, the bureau of labor statistics reported recently.

The bureau reported this rise in employment reflected expansion of industrial activity to meet the national mobilization drive. To maintain this drive, more and more women will be called to replace men inducted into the armed services.

The total number of employed persons, including those on farms and in military services, is now more than 61,000,000.

In the event of war, women, and particularly housewives, would play an important role in the warden service organized under local civil defense authorities. Experience has proved that women are particularly qualified for this type of responsibility and are generally present in residential neighborhoods at all hours.

Women Can Carry Their Share in War

Another war would be a bitter struggle for survival and the great untouched strength of the United States is its womanpower. In such a struggle we must put aside the thinking: man-woman, single-married, Christian-Jew, black-white, and labor-management. None of these must be allowed to interfere with an all-out effort for victory. Women have proven they are capable of carrying their share of the burden and any other thinking would lead to defeat.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

PAVING A YARD

Question: We have a small space in our yard that is unpaved. We want to cement it. What sort of solution could we pour into this earth to deaden the roots of the wild greens that grow up there? We fear they might come up through the cement after it is laid.

Answer: If the cement is properly laid with several inches of thickness over well-tamped earth, I do not see how ordinary weeds, etc. could break through the cement. Lacking air and sunlight there will be no growth. I do not see that you have any reason to worry if the cement is thick enough and properly laid. However, if you wish to kill the growth before-hand, pour on a strong solution of rock salt or calcium chloride. There are also weed-killing preparations on sale at garden supply stores.

TRAPPING SEASON OPENS ON SOME FUR ANIMALS

A 60-day open season on raccon, skunk, badger, oppossum and spotted skunk begins at noon November 10 and is continuous through January 10. There is a continuous open season on weasel, red fox, gray fox, ground hog, and wolf-coyote, and a continuous closed season on otter.

The season on muskrat, beaver and mink opens November 25 for 15 days. A special 30-day season on muskrat and mink opens November 25 and closes December 24 on the Mississippi River north of the north Muscatine city limits to the Minnesota line, east of the Milwaukee railroad tracks. There are special regulations for trapping the muskrat and mink on Big Wall Lake in Wright County, with the season opening noon, November 25, and closing at midnight, December 1st.

Fur censuses indicate good populations of all fur bearers except muskrat and mink, which are considered fair by Commission biologists. Pre-season auction sales indicate better fur prices than in 1949.

GOODELL CAFE DAMAGED BY FIRE MONDAY MORNING

Fire of unknown origin broke out in the Wm. Dempsey Cafe at Goodell Monday morning at about 4:30 o'clock.

The Goodell Fire Department did a good job of confining the flames to the interior of the building, which is a wood structure. The interior was damaged by flames and water, but Mr. Dempsey expected to get the damage repaired and be ready for business again by the last of the week.

GARNER GIRL BRIDE OF MARTIN BACHMAN

Miss Vera Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Simmons of Garner, became the bride of Martin Bachman, son of Mrs. Tillie Bachman of Klemme, in the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church, with the Rev. Vernon Jaberg officiating in a double ring ceremony October 22nd.

Mrs. Wesley Patterson sang, with Mrs. Ernie Gerardi at the organ. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Bridesmaid was Miss Darlene Roul and the bestman, Eugene Bachman.

A reception was held in the church parlors following the wedding. The couple left on a wedding trip and will be at home after November 4th on the farm of the bridegroom's mother.

The bride is a graduate of Garner high school and the bridegroom was graduated from the Klemme high school and since has been engaged in farming with his mother.

A reception and dance was held at the Surf ballroom for Mr. and Mrs. Bachman Tuesday evening with a large crowd present.

FACTS SHOW FARM ACCIDENT AVOIDABLE

A comparison of corn harvest accidents the past 2 years disproves the belief of many farm people that accidents are inevitable and a certain number will always happen during any harvesting season.

Norval Wardle, extension safety specialist at Iowa State College, points out that records indicate there were 434 corn harvest accidents in 1948. This number was reduced by 40 percent in 1949 to 260 accidents. Wardle believes that this figure can be reduced even more this year.

The reason for the reduction in corn harvest accidents evidently was brought about by people observing safety rules while operating corn harvesting machinery, Wardle says. However, some folks believe that the 1949 crop was easier to harvest than the 1948 crop and feel that this tended to reduce the number of accidents. On the other hand, many others think the '49 crop was the tougher one to harvest because the picker clogged more often when it had to work in down corn which followed the most corn borer damage on record and the windstorm.

Some good rules to follow during the corn picking season that will reduce this year's accidents are: Stop the picker completely when cleaning it out or oiling and adjusting any part. The power takeoff shield should always be in place, and new operators should be taught the proper operation of the machines. It's a good idea to wear snug fitting clothing and to keep alert at all times.

WINTER GRAIN RATION FOR DAIRY COWS DEPENDS ON ROUGHAGE

The right grain ration for high winter milk production depends on the quality and kind of roughage to be fed, County Extension Director Paul Henderson reminds Hancock County Dairymen. Economical and efficent feeding of grain also means higher returns on each gallon of milk produced.

With a high-protein roughage such as alfalfa, soybean or clover hay, a mixture of 500 pounds of corn and cob meal, 400 lbs. of ground oats and 100 pounds of high protein fed will make a good combination.

If dairymen have only low-protein roughage, it will take 400 pounds of corn and cob meal, 300 pounds of ground oats, and 300 pounds of high-protein feed, Henderson says.

Where silage is fed, 3 pounds of it will replace 1 pound of hay. Then some additional protein will be needed in the grain mixture.

A bulletin entitled "Feeding Dairy Cows," Bulletin P89-Reprint, gives more details on what the dairy cow needs to produce the maximum amount of milk. This bulletin is available at Henderson's office or through the Iowa State College Bulletin Office.

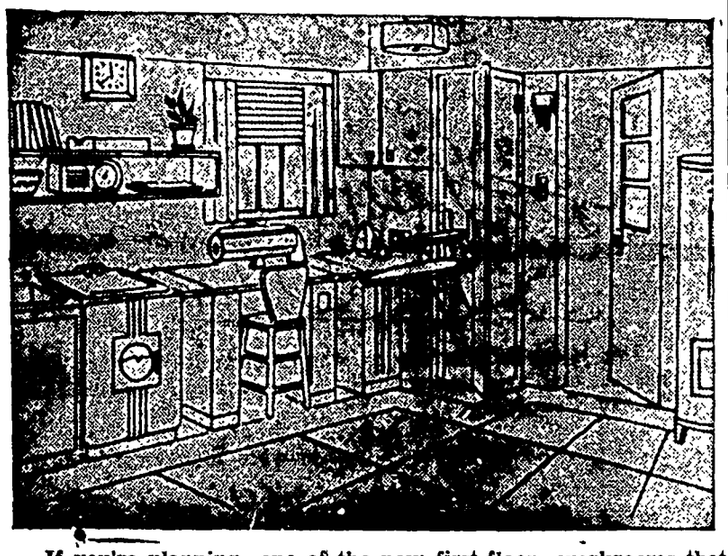
Consider Wiring Plan For—

YOUR WORKROOM



If you're planning one of the new first-floor workrooms that are becoming so popular in Iowa homes, here's a convenient within-your-budget plan that can be either followed or varied, with special emphasis on the wiring system.

Take a look at this modern, completely equipped workroom . . . to see how you can save time, motion and energy. It can be done, starting with the equipment you have now, then adding another piece each year as your budget can take it. As each unit is added, it should be arranged in its correct order of use.

Wiring is the big thing. Maybe you've never thought much about it before, but a planned wiring system team at the outset can save you from $10 to $100 in rewiring and redecorating costs later on when you add a new unit. Naomi Shank, home management specialist at Iowa State College, has here some ideas for you to talk over with your electrician.

First-Floor Laundry

Perhaps right now you're about to convert a porch, pantry or old kitchen into a first-floor laundry room. You already have your iron with board and washer, maybe even an automatic washer. And now you have bright hopes of someday adding an electric dryer, ironer and sewing machine. With these in mind, it is good planning to include special circuits and outlets in the original remodeling and wiring. This way, when you have new equipment delivered you'll be ready to have it plugged in and go to work for you.

Study the accompanying diagram with your own workroom in mind. This model all-electric laundry can be adapted in various ways to fit your own needs and available space.

It features a handy switch near the entrance for the ceiling; a special outlet for the iron which is equipped with a red light for warning when the appliance is left on by mistake; a sunken wall outlet for the hanger-type clock; a special outlet for the ventillating fan; heavy-duty circuits and outlets for the automatic washer, dryer and water heater; and convenience oulets on two 20-ampere circuits for the ironer, radio, hot plate, freezer, pasteurizer and cream separator.

Work Sequence

One of these 20-ampere circuits, Miss Shank says, may also serve appliance outlets in the kitchen. Note that the wiring is planned for the installation of appliances in the proper work sequence—first the sorting and washing areas, then the drying and ironing centers.

You may want to incorporate into your workroom a canning center for cleaning and preparing quantities of foods and storage of containers. Additional space, well lighted, may be needed for storage of chore clothes, cleaning equipment and supplies.

With the season opening on the Armistice Day weekend, there'll be a heavy concentration of shooting for the first couple of days. This means everyone should be on guard for possible accidents.

It is against the law to carry in a car a loaded gun or one that is assembled and is not in a case. Complying with these two laws will assure considerable safety going to and from the hunting area.

Moorman also advised asking permission to hunt on a farmer's place. It's the courteous thing to do, and the farmer can often help hunters by directing them to spots where the pheasants are heeavily concentrated.

Another advantage of asking permission is that the farmer will be able to tell how heavily his place is being hunted, and he can regulate hunting activity. Then all of the birds in his vicinity won't be killed, and there'll be stock left to produce pheasants for huntng in future years.

There is also a law regarding hunters who trespass on private property without the permission of the owner. The practice is illegal and violators can be fined.

KEEP CORN PICKER GREASED AT ALL TIMES

It's easy to neglect greasing the corn picker, especially on cold mornings when grease is stiff and fingers are numb. But bearings still need grease, even in cold weather.

Grease sometimes gets so stiff it doesn't come through the grease gun. Since this trouble is most noticeable in the morning, Iowa State College extension agricultural engineer Dale Hull suggests greasing the picker after work in the evening. Then grease in the gun will have time to warm up before a second greasing is required the next day.

He says farmers who carry their grease on the tractor during the cold part of corn picking season will have grease that works through the gun better. Tractor heat will do this. But don't get the grease too hot, Hull warns.

Extension agricultural engineers at Iowa State College stress the need not only for grease, but for the proper kind of grease. No other machine uses more grease than a corn picker, Hull says. The best kind of lubricant for this implement seems to be a viscous-type grease. It has either a calcium soap or an aluminum soap base. Both bases are moisture resistant and that's important for corn pickers, particularly on frosty, wet mornings.

Viscous greases are sticky and stingy, which gives the lubricant the ability to stick to bearings. The winter grades work well in a gun even when temperatures are below freezing.

Some pickers have gear cases filled with a fiber-type grease. These cases should be cleaned out each year, Hull says, and refilled with a regular fiber or medium-grade wheel bearing lubricant.

Before corn picking, take off the roller chains and wash them in kerosene. Dry and then dip the chains in SAE 20 or 30 motor oil. These chains should be lubricated with motor oil during the picking season, except under dusty operating conditions. Hull suggests painting oil on with a clean paint brush. But be sure to stop the picker before greasing or doing any maintenance or repair work.

PHEASANTS WILL BE HARD TO GET THIS YEAR

Pheasant hunters are apt to have rough going this year as far as getting up a lot of birds, according to R. B. Moorman, extension wildlife specialists at Iowa State College. Very little of the corn is picked, which means the birds will have a lot of cover.

They'll be able to run down the corn rows ahead of hunters and they won't be hiding in brush piles and fencerows as they usually do when the harvesting season is more advanced.

Moorman says a dog will come in handy and hunters using dogs will get more shots. A dog will scare up birds that hunters walking through a field will not.

More Iowa Jobs

Cousin Ed took a new job last week . . . making tires in one of the new plants eastern industry is putting up here in Iowa.

"I might as well help keep more of that eastern money out here," Ed said.

When you think a minute, it's amazing the number of eastern plants that are locating in Iowa, making everything from tires to fishing tackle.

Time was when easterners didn't think much of our industrial ability. But Iowa workmen have proven just as efficient as those back east, sometimes more so.

I say it's just another proof that set ideas and prejudices have a way of being wrong, once you test them out. No one's ideas are the only RIGHT ideas.

Ed likes to garden; I don't. Ed likes ice tea, while I enjoy a temperate glass of beer. We're both happier neighbors because we have respect for the other fellow's good sense . . . and we realize that his abilities, tastes, and opinions are just as valid as ours.

ATTEST:
MAYNARD SCHONEMAN,
County Auditor

The giant tortoise has been known to live as long as 300 years.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Three hundred seventy Iowans were shot down in cold blood since 1940!

Not by war, not by gangsters, not by criminal killers—but by the sheer carelessness of their friends or families or themselves.

At the rate of 37 a year, Iowans have been getting killed because somebody "didn't know it was loaded" or didn't care.

Think about it. If someone asked you, "Would you shoot your brother, or your best friend, or your dad, or your son?", you would get mad, wouldn't you?

Yet if you put a loaded gun in your car, you are guilty, not only of breaking Iowa law, but of taking the first step toward killing yourself or someone dear to you.

This week, in the midst of the crucial hunting season, is Gun Safety Week. And your Iowa Safety Congress and co-operating organizations solemnly warn you.

There's never any open season on human life. Break your gun and take out the shells or cartridges as soon as you leave the hunting field or duck blind.

Treat every gun as a loaded gun. Guns can be safe, but only when properly used.

IOWA HUNTING CLASSED AS DANGEROUS RECREATION

"Ready--aim--fire" is the orthodox pattern for hunters—but apparently some guns go off without being made ready, or even aimed. As a result, each year between ten and twenty men lose their lives while hunting in Iowa.

This makes it a pretty dangerous recreation. Last year in Iowa 35 persons died because of accidental gunshot wounds. Seven of these deaths are recorded as being due to hunting accidents; fourteen other death certificates do not state definitely "hunting" but could be analyzed as that; fourteen other deaths were not due to hunting, but could have been accidents in the home or on the highway.

The situation is improving though, says Loren E. Chancellor of the division of vital statistics of the Iowa State Department of Health. In 1932 there were 71 deaths due to accidental gunshot wounds; in 1940 there were 42 deaths from the same cause.

Hunters, before you take to the open field, know and practice the rules of safety. Remember that the Iowa law requires that guns shall be unloaded and unassembled when on the highways or in vehicles. Keep the safety device on your gun locked. Handle the stock instead of the barrel of the gun. Keep guns away from youngsters. Watch out for accidents while climbing over fences. Make certain that the prey you shoot is not your hunting companion, hidden from view.

While we're talking about hunting, don't forget other rules of health. For instance, two hunters were frozen to death several years ago in a duck blind. When it's too cold, don't be such "he-men" that rigor mortis sets in.

CONDITION SPRAYERS NOW

Chemical sprayers that are cleaned up and put in good condition this fall will be ready to go next year when it's time to spray weeds and insects.

Recommended fall sprayer maintenance includes cleaning out the screens and nozzles and draining all the fluid out of the pump and sediment bulb. Dale Hull, Iowa State College agricultural engineer, says it's a good idea to disessemble the sprayer when this work is done.

The pump and filter should be drained so no damage will be done by freezing this winter. Hull advises rolling up the hoses and laying them down flat. He cautions against hanging hoses on a hook or nail, because this distorts the rubber and the hoses will crack.

The pump housing in gear-type pumps also can be filled with oil and the gears rotated so a film of oil will be distributed over all moving parts.

Sprayers with auxiliary engines will need some extra care. Hull recommends draining out the gas, removing the plugs and pouring a tablespoon of heavy oil into each piston. Then by turning the engine over a few times a coat of oil is put on the cylinder walls, pistons and valves. In winterizing the engine, Hull also suggests draining out the old oil and putting in a fresh supply. Then the sprayer motor will be ready to go next year.

KILL NO HENS

The pheasant population in Iowa and the Middle West generally has definitely increased over that of last year.

Biologists of the State Conservation Commission are convinced that even with present day hunting pressure, the future of pheasant hunting in this state is not jeopardized as long as cocks only are killed during the hunting season and that the upward trend can continue.

Pheasants are polygamous, 1 cock normally has a harem of two or more hens. Experiments have shown that in the wild a ratio of one cock to as many as 10 hens is sufficient to guarantee egg fertility.

When sex ratios are nearly even, as they are at the present time, an excess of cocks exist and these may and should be harvested.

If hunters do not shoot hens, reproduction nevt year will be the same as if cocks were not harvested. Every Iowa hunter who is interested in the future of the pheasant hunting sport will assist in the perpetuation of pheasant hunting by observing the "KILL NO HENS" law.

RATTLESNAKE STILL SOURCE OF REVENUE

Decorah— Rattesnake hunting is still a source of revenue, but precarious amusement in some parts of Winneshiek county, although the season is a bit late.

Clifford and Ray McCauley, two Bluffton township brothers, recently killed 18 snakes on a farm 3 miles southwest of Burr Oak, one of them with a club and the others with a 22 rifle

Harry Quandahl later bagged 4 more on the same farm with a rifle. One measured 5½ feet and had 9 rattles. The bounty on a rattlesnake is 50 cents.

Easter can occur any time between March 22 and April 25

DON'T BUY HIGH-PRICED SEED OATS

All Good Varieties Now Give Similar Results

Performances of all good oat varities now available are too near alike to justify paying an unusually high price for seed, observes H. C. Murphy, agronomist and plant pathologist in charge of oat breeding work at Iowa State College.

He advises farmers who are thinking of buying seed to check into the background of the variety being offered for sale, especially if it's one that isn't well known or is not one of the varieties recommended by the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station.

Mohawk Like Clinton

For example, he cites the Mohawk variety, now being offered for sale in Iowa. He says this variety is similar to the original Clinton both in appearance and performance. It does not have the desirable qualities of Reselect Clinton, which is more uniform in height and maturity date and which yields 2 to 3 bushels more per acre. Mohawk was developed at the Iowa Station at the same time as Clinton and has the same disease resistance and susceptibility.

Although there is no advantage and sometimes a big disadvantage in Canadian oats, Murphy thinks the Iowa farmers who wants to grow them should use either the Ajax or Beaver varieties, with Ajax being slightly favored.

Some Canadians Poor

The Canadian varieties Larain and Exeter have no rust or smut resistance, and yields in Iowa tests at Ames this year were 20 bushels per acre less than those of recommended varieties. The yields for Ajax and Beaver in the same tests averaged about the same as those of recommended varieties.

Another Canadian variety-Fortune—has the same stem rust resistance as Ajax and Marion but is susceptible to race 45 and other races of crown rust. Its yield in tests at Iowa State College Agronomy Farm near Ames was 75 bushels per acre as compared with 86 bushels for Shelby. Tests weight of Fortune oats was only 30 pounds per bushel as compared with 35 pounds for Shelby.

These results indicate that Iowa farmers have little reason to pay extra high prices for seed oats from Canada or any other section of the country for growing in 1951, Murphy concludes.

NEW SOYBEAN VARIETY TO BE GROWN IN HANCOCK

The new Blackhawk soybean is being made available to growers in Hancock County who can qualify forseed allotments to increase the new variety next year.

The high yielding Blackhawk will be distributed in 16, 20, 2b or 28-bushel lots to individual farmers for approximately $6.00 a bushel, F.O.B. Ames or Marshalltown.

Growers who wish to make application for seed may do so at County Extension Director Paul Henderson's office. He emphasized that the Blackhawk seed for 1951 is being distributed through the Hancock County Seed Distribution Committee and all Hancock County requests must be made through the local county extension office.

The county committee will review applications and recommend growers, although final approval of applications for seed in 1951 will be made by the Iowa Committee for Agricultural Development.

Land free from noxious weeds, cleaning and storing facilities and experience in seed production are among qualifications suggested for growers who wish to receive Blackhawk seed in 1951. Previous experience in producing certified seed will be an important factor in selecting growers, Henderson said.

The new improved variety yields better and has higher oil content than any of the other early maturing varieties. It stands up better than Habaro and Earlyana and averages six inches taller than Habaro although it matures only 1 day later. It is adapted to the northern two tiers of Iowa counties and comparable areas across the Soybean-Corn Belt.

The North West Quarter (NW¼) of Section Twenty (20), Township Ninety-five (95) North, Range Twenty-five (25), West of the Fifth P. M., excepting therefrom the North 93 Feet being the Right of Way conveyed.

The above property is to be sold as a tract and not by the acre.

SALE WILL BE HELD ON THE FARM ON Thursday, November 16

At 2:00 P. M.

DESCRIPTION OF FARM

Webster and Clarion soil. Buildings in fair condition. Fence in fair condition. Situated in Main 2 of Drainage District No. 8, ditch running directly North and South through East side of farm.

The following personal property belongs to the tenant and will be reserved by him, to-wit:

2 red portable hog houses on skids; 1 outside toilet; the yard fence around the dwelling house; a clothesline; 3 wooden gates around barn yard; about 30 rods of fence around hog lot; about 60 steel and wooden posts along west side of corn field; about 20 rods of woven fence along south side of west hog lot south of driveway; 5 rolls of cribbing material; 1 water tank; 6 rolls of 20 rods of woven wire fence; 27 steel posts.

LOCATION OF FARM

On gravel road 3½ miles south, 1½ miles West of Britt, Iowa. 7 miles North, 2 miles West of Kanawha, Iowa. 6 miles East and 3 miles North of Corwith, Iowa.

TERMS OF SALE

Purchaser must pay 15 per cent of sale price on date of sale, the balance being due and payable on March 1, 1951. Purchaser must execute contract, which contract will provide that the purchaser will have possession March 1, 1951, an abstract showing good merchantable title will be furnished, the taxes including the taxes for the year 1950, payable in 1951 will be paid, and that all special assessments, if any, due and payable January 1, 1951 will be paid, and that a Referees' Deed approved by the Court will be furnished to the purchaser.

This farm has been held in the past for investment purposes and is being sold for the reason that some of the parties desire to sell their interest in the farm. If held for investment purposes in the past, this should be an equally good investment in the future.

MINUTE MEN

CAP Rapidly Expands Services Since Outbreak of Korean War

Since the outbreak of the war in Korea, enrollments have rocketed to a new all-time peak in the Civil Air Patrol, the volunteer civilian pilots' organization which helped fight German submarines off our coasts with frail "puddle-jumper" landplanes in the early years of World War II, and also gave basic school training to many thousand highschoolers who later became military pilots.

Today the flying "minute men" of the CAP are giving basic training directly to over 22,000 cadet members, aged 15 to 18; besides this their ground school program is installed as an accredited course in hundreds of public high schools; they are in training themselves and are training new members for civilian defense problems, participation in air-search rescue work and anti-sabotage patrol. Their "service pay" consists of the privilege of buying their own uniforms and of contributing dues to cover their regular operating expenses.

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP of CAP has topped the 175,000 mark and is still climbing. There is a rapid shift of inactive senior members to active status again.

The CAP radio communications network, available for either civilian or military emergencies, has expanded from 538 stations thinly covering some two-thirds of the area of continental United States in 1948, to approximately 6,500 stations blanketing the United States and extending to Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. The network is equipped with government surplus radio telephone material, serviced and operated by CAP instructors and their cadet radio communications students.

SOME 6,000 CAP cadets attended summer encampments at 32 air force bases for intensive study of jet engine operation and maintenance, radar detection work, and other ground school training subjects. The cadets were ferried in air force transport planes from their home states to their encampment location, and back again.

In the so-called peacetime years since VJ day, CAP volunteer pilots have done a large share of the air-search rescue flying, to locate lost planes and crash victims; they have logged hundreds of hours of forest fire patrol; have participated in "haylift" operations after western blizzards; have flown medicines into flooded areas. In a number of such emergencies the CAP radio communications network has been the only means of outside contact with flooded or stormswept areas.

In 1948 congress gave CAP permanent status as an auxiliary of the air force, which provides an AF-CAP liaison headquarters with a compact air force staff in each state to coordinate activities of the civilian volunteer organization with those of the military men.

Humphrey Bogart refused to play a scene in a sound stage subway for "The Enforcer", pursuaded Director Windust to rewrite the scene with a bus background. His shamefaced explanation—that riding subways makes him sick!

Gary Cooper plans on making one more picture after "Dallas" and then going to Africa again for some big game hunting. This time he will also take a camera, hoping to get enough good shots for a short subject at least.

TRICKY DARLINGS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

JOHN Carlton would never go so far as to say his daughter, Jane, was stubborn. He chose to call it an independent spirit, a desire to lead her own life, make her own way in the world.

Actually Jane was a duplicate of old John in character and disposition. Old John recognized the resemblance.

Knowing Jane as he did, and loving her as he did, gave Old John a decided advantage. He knew what methods to employ when he wanted her to do something.

Jane was beautiful. She attracted men, lots of them.

Old John frowned on Jane's reckless regard for love. He frowned on the young men who paid her court. All but one, it seemed to him, were worthless.

The one, Phil Scot by name, a son of Old John's closest friend, appeared to possess the requisites of a good husband. In the first place he had a job. Secondly, he worked hard and had ambition to do big things. Thirdly, his attentions toward Jane were honorable and sincere.

Old John was too wise to suggest to Jane that she consider Phil Scot as a possible husband. Despite the fact that he knew that Jane did not regard Phil with disfavor, he knew, also, that the moment she became aware of her father's prejudice poor Phil wouldn't stand a chance.

"Look here, Jane," he said one day, "I notice you've been seeing that young Scot fellow a good deal lately. I absolutely wouldn't stand for his type as a son-in-law."

Jane was beautiful. She attracted men, lots of them. She was, in fact, a bit reckless about it all, and refused flatly to take the matter seriously.

Jane's surprise gave way to anger. "Phil Scot," she said defiantly, "is a darling. Of all the boys I know Phil stands head and shoulders above the rest. And," she added, "you'd better like it because he's the man I'm going to marry."

Old John scowled. "He'll never be a son-in-law of mine. So you'd better begin forgetting him now."

AN hour later Albert J. Scot, young Phil's father, completed a telephone conversation with his oldest and closest friend, John Carlton, and summoned his son.

"Phil," he began, frowning deeply, "it seems to me you've been paying a good deal of attention to that Carlton girl lately. I want it stopped! Understand! She's nothing but a flirt and a social butterfly."

Phil was aghast. "But, Dad, she's the daughter of your oldest friend! I thought... that is .. well, you see I like Jane a lot. I was in hopes..."

"Well, cease hoping," Scot senior cut in.

A WEEK LATER Old John and Albert Scot were sipping drinks and exchanging congenialities on the veranda of the former's home. A car stopped out front and two young people came up the walk. The two young people stopped and smiled pleasantly.

Jane Carlton said: "I'm sorry to disappoint you, father, but John and I are married. We love each other, and, despite the fact that neither you nor Mr. Scot approves of the match, we're going to live our lives as we see fit."

"And," said Phil Scot defiantly, "if you don't like it, you can lump it."

Old John and Albert T. Scot exchanged glances. They laughed They slapped each other on the back and roared with delight.

Jane and Phil looked on in bewilderment. After awhile Old John wiped his eyes and explained the conspiracy the pair had concocted.

Jane looked at Phil and Phil looked at Jane and Jane said:

"How clever. You won't mind, then, when we tell you we've been married for two months! We've kept it secret till Phil got a raise in pay. He got it today and tomorrow we're leaving on our honeymoon. You two can sit here and think up ways and means of running our lives when we get back."

Cuban Solomon Solves Lovers' Problem With Justice

By BILLY ROSE

Last night at Lindy's a bunch of us were making small talk between big mouthfuls, and as per usual the conversation ran the full gamut—from girls to girls.

A little before closing time we got around to a well-known Power's model who had been going steady with a press agent pal of ours, and who was recently lured away from him by the financial blandishments of a well-heeled heel.

"All lady-stealers ought to be buried up to their necks in sand and the ants turned loose," said Mark Barron who covers the theatre for A.P.

"In Cuba," said Charlie Moses, the film distributor, "they have even more interesting punishments than that for dame-nappers. As a matter of fact, there's one particular story they've been telling for years down there which illustrates how they let the punishment fit the clime."

Billy Rose

"Spare us the puns," I said, "and let's have the story in a few easy paragraphs. . . ."

According to Charlie, it all happened a hundred and something years ago when Cuba was under Spanish rule.

• • •

ONE DAY AT A fiesta, a scrumptious senorita named Josefina was having herself a time with her boy friend; a prepossessing but peso-less caballero named Roberto, when she caught the lecherous eye of Jose de Cordoba, an old bum of a count who had a large estate outside Havana. The titled bum found out where she lived and made the usual underhanded overtures, but when the senorita informed him that his presence and presents were equally obnoxious, he had her kidnapped and taken to his hacienda.

Roberto had a pretty good idea who was responsible for the snatch but he needed proof, so he disguised himself as a mendicant friar and fast-talked his way into the Count's house. There he struck up an acquaintance with the cook, and when he found that his lady friend was being held under lock and key in a second floor room, he hotfooted it back to Havana.

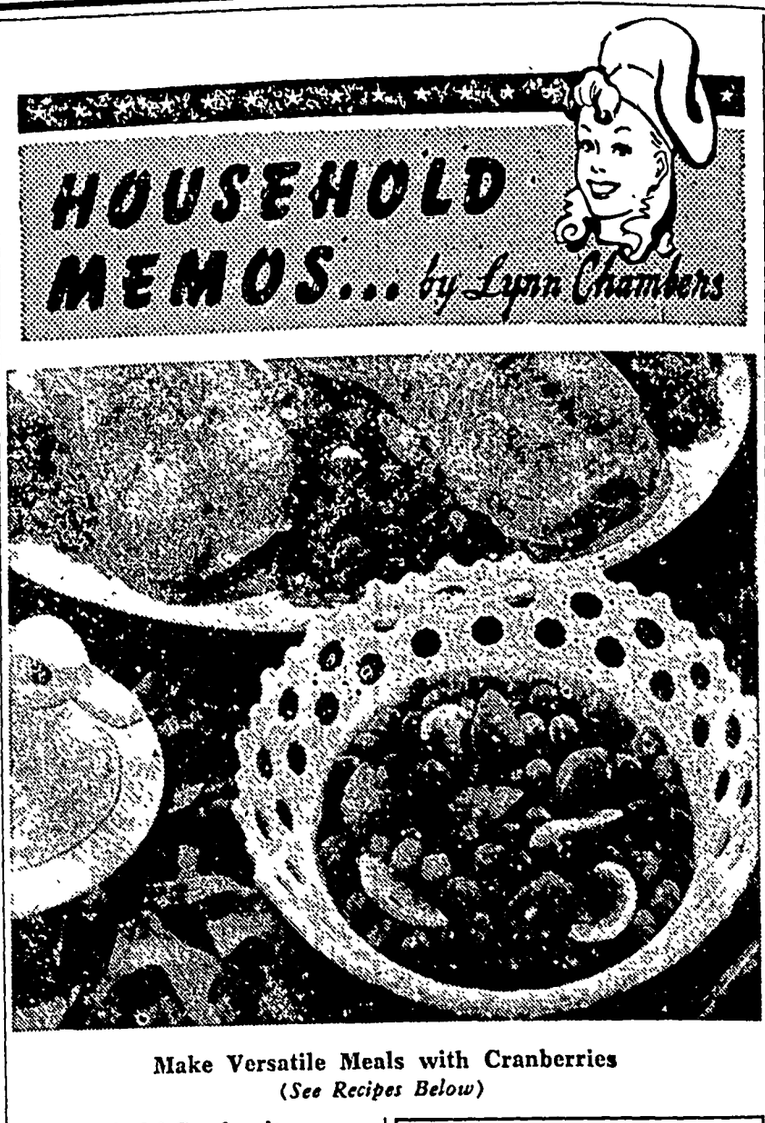
The Spanish governor-general at the time was one Miguel Tacon, a tough-minded hombre who believed in an eye for an eye and a whole upper plate for a tooth. And when Roberto told him what had happened he ordered his soldiers to arrest the Count and bring him and Josefina to the governmental palace.

• • •

AN HOUR LATER, the pretty one and her abductor were brought before him, and after bawling the bejabbers out of the Count he decreed the punishment: The pair were to be married immediately and he, himself, would perform the ceremony. Which he did, while poor Roberto looked on—plenty bothered and bewildered. Getting hitched to Josefina was not his idea of punishment.

After the nuptials, the Governor-General told the Count he was free to take his bride back to his hacienda. A few minutes out of town, however, a detachment of soldiers, acting on Tacon's orders, ambushed the newlyweds, shot the bridegroom in hot blood and escorted Josefina back to the palace.

"You were legally married to the Count," the Governor told her in his best Solomon manner, "and are therefore his legitimate widow. As such, you are heir to all his worldly goods and possessions, which I understand are considerable. You are also free to marry anyone you wish, and if Roberto still appeals to you I'd be delighted to do the honors."



Make Versatile Meals with Cranberries
(See Recipes Below)

Colorful Cranberries

WHEN YOU WANT to add color to fall and winter meals, try cranberries. They can be used in many versatile ways, with vegetables, as a sauce or relish, with meats and fowl and as desserts.

You'll enjoy the tartness which cranberries give to many foods, especially the bland and mild-flavored ones like fowl, ham and sweet potatoes. Their bright red color is a delight in other foods such as muffins or French dressing.

• • •

Cranberry Ham Slices
(Serves 6)

3 cups cranberries
1½ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
½ cup water or apple juice
2 slices ham (¾ to 1" thick)
2 tablespoons whole cloves

Mix cranberries, sugar and water (or juice). Cut edges of fat on ham in gashes. Place one slice of ham in baking dish and cover with cranberry-sugar mixture. Top with second ham slice and cover with remaining cranberry mixture. Stick whole cloves around edges of ham slices. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven until tender, about 1½ hours, basting occasionally with liquid in dish.

• • •

WHEN YOU'RE looking for an elegant way to show off sweet potatoes or yams, you'll like them combined with cranberries, pineapple, peanuts and interesting seasonings.

Cranberry Yam Puffs
(Serves 4-6)

4 medium-sized yams or sweet potatoes
1 cup cranberries, chopped
½ cup drained, crushed pineapple
¼ cup chopped, salted peanuts
4 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper, nutmeg to taste

Boil yams until tender; peel and mash with a fork Add chopped cranberries, drained pineapple, nuts and butter; mix thoroughly and season to taste. If mixture seems too dry, beat in 1 egg or ¼ cup cream or evaporated milk. Divide mixture into 4 to 6 well greased custard cups and dot top with butter. Bake in a moderately hot (400°) oven for 45 minutes or until set. Loosen with spatula and turn out around roast.

• • •

BOTH BROWN and white sugar go into this old-fashioned version of cranberry sauce. Thinly sliced lemon rinds among the plump red cranberries give you a flavorful accompaniment to roast turkey or chicken on your festive board.

Cranberry Sauce
(Makes 1 quart)

1½ cups water
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup brown sugar
4 cups cranberries
Half lemon, thinly sliced

HERE'S A delectable salad dressing that goes well with fruit salads to add pep to winter meals:

Cranberry French Dressing
(Makes 1 cup)

½ cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup chopped cranberries
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Grated rind of ½ orange
Grated rind of ½ lemon

Combine ingredients in covered jar. Shake well before using.

TO GET THE family up readily for breakfast, or to add color and appeal to a meal made primarily of leftovers, there's nothing like a good hot bread:

Cranberry Muffins
(Makes 9-12)

2 cups bran cereal
⅔ cup dark molasses
½ cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup chopped cranberries

Combine bran, molasses and milk, let stand 20 minutes. Stir in beaten egg. Sift together dry ingredients and sift into bran mixture. Fold in cranberries. Fill greased muffin tins about ⅔ full and bake in a moderately hot (400°) oven for 20 minutes or until done.

FRESH FRUIT and raisins are combined with berries to make this pie which is so good for cold months when other fruits are scarce. To make a picture-pretty pie and let the colorful filling peek through, make the top crust in criss-cross fashion, or use cookie cutters like stars, trees, leaves on pastry for a decorative effect.

Cranberry Pie
(Makes 1 10" pie)

4 cups cranberries
1 orange, quartered and seeded
1 apple, peeled, cored, quartered
½ cup seedless raisins
2 cups sugar
⅔ cup water
4 tablespoons tapioca
Pastry

Put cranberries, orange, apple and raisins through food chopper. Combine with remaining ingredients and let stand while making pastry. Roll out pastry to fit pie plate. Pour in filling. Arrange top crust. Bake in a hot oven (450°) for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350°) and continue baking for 30 minutes or until filling is set and crust nicely browned.

LYNN SAYS:
Make These Dishes For Hearty Satisfaction

Save that leftover waffle batter for good supper dishes. Add bits of fried bacon to the batter. Serve the waffles with green peas in cream sauce.

Make your leftover ham into a meat loaf mixture and bake in a square pan for a change. Top the loaf with peaches which have been brushed with melted fat and sprinkled with brown sugar. Serve in squares.

Add some berries to your canned apple sauce for a colorful touch and serve as a relish or dessert with cookies.

A fluffy nest of mashed potatoes is nice to serve with creamed salmon or dried beef to which a few leftover green peas have been added for color.

Corn pudding and scalloped potatoes make an excellent supper dish if you add bits of leftover ham, smoked butt or Canadian bacon to the vegetable in the casserole before baking.

Interflowing Life

Lesson for November 12, 1950

AN AUSTRALIAN minister once remarked: "If ever a church could be found whose members treated one another better than people treat one another on the outside, the world would flock to its doors." In that exaggerated remark there is a pointed truth. As a matter of fact, that was the case in the early church and the world did flock to its doors. From six score people that church grew to 5,000 in no time, and in less than three centuries it was the religion of a world empire.

Dr. Foreman

• • •

This Scrambling World

ON THE "outside" what is the rule? David Harum put it in a nutshell: "Do unto your neighbor what he would like to do to you." "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." "Every man has his price." "Look out for Number 1." "Blessed is he that tooteth his own horn, for he that tooteth not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted."

People get tired of living in a world like that. Something tells them that the everlasting scramble is not the way to live, there must be a better way. Suppose they could look down the street and see that better way actually being put into practice by a little community of people?

They ought to be able to see it wherever there is a Christian church. But—is the average church that kind of community? Do the members treat one another (on Mondays, that is) with more understanding, consideration and affection than the local atheists or Nothingarians show toward one another? Indeed, is there anything whatever that seems to link these First Whatsis Church people together with a common bond?

Making Fellowship Real

IN A large city there will be a page or more of Smiths in the telephone directory. These all have the same name, but most of them don't know one another and don't care. Too often it is this way with Christians even in the same congregation. They all bear the same name, but that is about all.

What they ought to have is fellowship. This is not a mere word. It can be a real thing. It is like a two-way blood transfusion, in the realm of personality. It is interflow of life. It can be the source of the Christian's finest growth and service. Musicians develop musically through sharing with other musicians. Every "Future Farmer of America" is going to be a better and more enthusiastic farmer through his associations with the F.F.A.

So our Christian faith and life are kept glowing and growing through the fellowship of like-minded persons. One thing your Sunday school class, and indeed the whole congregation, may well consider seriously, even adopting it as your Project for the Year is this: What can we do to make fellowship more real in our church?

Wider Horizons

CHRISTIAN fellowship needs not only to be enriched; it needs to be enlarged. In a town or section where denominational lines run sharply across the population, there is too much cross-fire. Such a community has a hard time being a community. Many a denomination has been afflicted with the disease of pride. Loyalty to one's own denomination too easily replaces loyalty to the kingdom of God.

Whatever be your own church connection, there are unnumbered true Christians outside the bounds of your church. Do you know them? Do you worship with them from time to time? Do you encourage visitors from other churches? Not only in other denominations but across lines of race and color you can find a thrill in coming close to Christians who may even be much better Christians than yourself.

Young people in your church may be interested in a new organization which is interested in bringing together the thinking of young people in every land. Young Christians can bring to such a project the insight and the spirit of Christian Faith, and learn to know young Christians in other lands than ours. "Youth of All Nations" at 16 St. Luke's Place, New York 14, N. Y. serves as a clearing-house for the exchange of letters and will be glad to hear from you.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Tarnishing of gold and silver slippers can be forestalled if you keep them well wrapped in old stockings when the shoes aren't in use.

A blanket that's too short for the bed, or the occupant therein, can be made usable. Sew a fifteen-inch piece of flannel or flannelette to the bottom of the blanket. No one will notice it if you tuck under that part. The rest of the blanket will then be long enough.

To clean patent-leather shoes (or belts), mix up a solution of two-thirds vinegar and one-third water. Apply it to the leather with a soft cloth and polish it with a dry cloth. Petroleum jelly, applied with the same procedure, will do the job, too.

If someone has an allergy to wool blankets, you can often eliminate the sneezing by taking an extra sheet and tucking it both over and under the upper end of the blanket. This can be done even with a small sheet or half a sheet, as long as it extends three feet down from the upper end of the blanket both underneath and on top of it.

One of the handiest ways to clean white satin shoes is to rub them with a soft art-gum eraser. If they're too soiled to respond to that, try rubbing them with a soft cloth dipped in vinegar and then with a cloth dipped in cleaning fluid. Or, put a few drops of lemon juice in some uncolored alcohol and apply that with a cloth

When Lack of Vitamins B¹, B², Iron and Niacin Cause Stomach Disturbances, Gas, Heartburn, Indigestion, Nagging Aches and Pains and Certain Nervous Disorders

Just A Few Of Thousands Of Records Of Folks With Such Deficiencies Who Have Been Helped

Mr. Link Robinson (steel worker), 519 Lindsey, Newport, Kentucky: "When your stomach is in bad shape as mine was, couldn't eat, gas pains, stomach bloating and nervousness, then your body doesn't get the proper foods it needs. My boss told me about HADACOL and I started taking it immediately. After the second bottle I could tell a definite improvement. Now I can eat anything. Best of all, I haven't those gas pains and bloating."

Mrs. Mabel Kitchen, 1650 Amsterdam, Cincinnati, Ohio: "Before I started HADACOL, I had aches and pains in my shoulders, back and arms. I could hardly move without having those pains. Then I heard about HADACOL. After the second bottle the aches and pains were about gone. I'm just starting the fourth bottle and am on top of the world. My aches and pains are completely gone. I recommend HADACOL to all my friends."

Mrs. J. Scieszinski, 514 Kruger, Ottumwa, Iowa: "My daughter, Marilyn Sue, is five years old and for some time lacked pep, had a poor appetite, was generally rundown. Since giving her HADACOL, we've noticed wonderful results. She has a much better appetite and doesn't seem tired like she used to be."

Harry Springer, 5608 Greer Street, St. Louis, Missouri: "I suffered from aches and pains for quite some time and continued to suffer. Then I read about HADACOL and bought my first bottle. With in a week I felt better. After the third bottle I had no aches at all. I was tired and listless but after a few bottles of HADACOL I felt like getting out and doing things."

The Man Who Gave The World HADACOL!

Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc

Thanks to the tireless efforts in scientific research of Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc—eminent statesman of Louisiana and creator of this great new HADACOL you don't have to be satisfied with symptomatic relief—because it's possible to relieve the real cause of such ailments as stomach distress, gas pains, heartburn, indigestion, aches and pains, certain nervous disorders and a general rundown condition, due to lack of Vitamins B¹, B², Iron and Niacin.

HADACOL not only supplies deficient systems with more than your daily needs of Vitamins B¹, B², Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of precious Calcium, and Phosphorus—elements so vital to help maintain good health and guard against such deficiency ailments. A big improvement is often noticed in the way you feel within a few days. And LISTEN TO THIS! Continued use of this great HADACOL helps keep such distress from coming back.

Don't delay. Don't continue to suffer. Remember HADACOL relieves the cause of such ailments above. You owe it to yourself—to your family to start taking HADACOL at once.

FARM SALE NEXT TUESDAY

CLARENCE NANNENGA WILL HOLD FIRST SALE OF THE SEASON

Lists 339 Head Of Livestock And Full Line Of Machinery

The first farm sale of the season in this community, and which will perhaps be one of the largest this winter, is that advertised by Clarence Nannenga who will dispose of all of his livestock and machinery at his father's farm 1 mile south and 3 miles east of Klemme on Tuesday of next week, November 21st. The sale will start immediately at 12:30 o'clock. There will be a lunch wagon on the grounds.

Lists 339 Head Of Stock

Clarence has been called into the Service and so is quiting his farming operations. He will sell 63 head of Holstein cattle of which 21 are milch cows. Clarence has an exceptionally fine herd of cattle and anyone needing good dairy stock should drive out and look them over before sale day.

Farmers who are looking for good feeding shoats will find plenty of them to choose from at Nannenga's sale. He has 270 head of shoats, and that is a lot of potential pork in the making.

Big List Of Machinery

Everything in the way of tractors and power equipment will be on the selling list. Turn to the large display adv in this issue for a complete list of machinery. Much of the machinery is like new and all is in good shape.

B. A. Reemtsma, one of the best auctioneers in North Iowa, will be on hand ti sell the entire sale. Ben is noted for his high-speed work and keeps the bidders on their toes. The First Lar session on Tuesday evening, do the clerking for this sale. Plan to attend this first big sale of the year.

CIVIC CLUB WILL MEET TONIGHT

WILL PLAN CHRISTMAS DECORATION AND SANTA CLAUS DAY

All Businessmen Should Come To Civic Club Meeting Tonight, Wednesday

There will be a special meeting of the Civic Club at the grade school building (Old Community Hall) tonight, Wednesday when Christmas decorating of the Main street and having a Santa Claus day will be discussed.

It is important that All business men of Klemme be present at this meeting; beginning at 8:00 o'clock.

For several years Klemme has had a Santa Claus day and gave treats to the children of the community. It is also nearing the time when our street decorations should be put up.

STEAK AT $2.50 ON THE HOOF

MRS. A. R. ARNOLD'S BROTHER HAS WON CALIFORNIA RIBBONS

Champion Steer Sold For $2.50 Pound To Clift Hotel

Irvine & Timm of Dysart, Ia., recently showed both the grand champion and reserve champion steers in the Grand National Livestock Expositon held in the Cow Palace in San Francisco.

The grand champon was the Angus raised by Earl Keith Nau, 12-year old 4-H boy of Columbus Junction, Iowa which was selected as the grand champion of the 1950 Iowa State Fair. The reserve champion was from the herd of Irvine & Timm.

Irvine & Timm acquired the Nau boy's steer after the fair from the Rath Packing Co. who had paid $1.86 a pound for it. The steer was then shown at the Kansas City American Royal and won the reserve championship and was kept for the San Francisco show where he won the grand championship.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvine were presened with a special $1,000 award by Frank Richards of the American Aberdeen-Angus association. The steer was purchased by the Clift Hotel for $2.50 per pound and brought $2,562.50.

In the championship judging Irvine & Timm entries competed against the champion Hereford shown by H. A. Fitzhugh, San Antonio, Texas, and champion Shorthorn shown by Phillip Haas and Ed Vanoni of San Luis Obispo, California.

Mr. Irvine is a brother of Mrs. A. R. Arnold of Klemme.

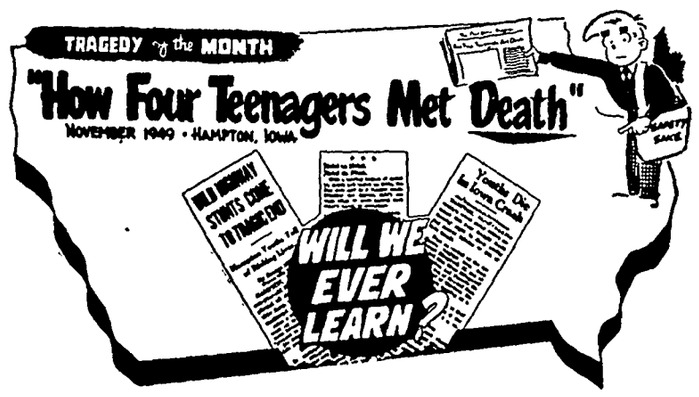
Don't forget the date: Thursday evening, Nov. 23.

Miss Novella Bredbenner Again Honored By I.S.E.A.

At the recent convention of the Iowa State Educational Association in Des Miones, Miss Novella Bredbenner was re-elected as Chairman of the Elementary Science Section of the I.S.E.A.

She was also elected Vice-President of the Iowa Association of Science Teachers.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Remember what happened on that dark highway near Hampton on the night of November 8, 1949?

Two cars smashed head-on in a gruesome tangle of metal and flesh. Of the eight young people riding in the cars, two were killed instantly. Another died a few hours later; another a few days later. Only four lived. Friends said the two young drivers were probably playing "chicken," a death-defying game of nerve and reckless speed.

In the days and weeks that followed, the story was told in all its terrifying details. All Iowa was shocked and saddened. National magazines told the sobering story to readers all over the country. Surely the lesson was clear

Yet the Iowa teen-age driver toll is still going up -- and up. In the first nine months of 1950, eighty teen-age drivers were involved in fatal accidents -- an increase of nearly 40 percent over the same months of 1949. "Will we ever learn?"

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY AT WORK

NEIGHBORS PICKED CORN CROP FOR MRS. VRBA

Thursday morning neighbors came to the farm home of Mrs. James Vrba with corn pickers and wagons and harvested her crop of 28 acres and put it in the crib. While the men worked in the fields and in the yard, the neighborhood women worked in the kitchen to prepare a dinner for the corn pickers.

The men who came to work on the corn were Fred Pringnitz, Elmer Beier, Bobby Beier, Laurice Lemke, Charles Christie, Forest Langlitz, Charles Velau, Vern Velau, Francis Buseman and Avron Kreitlow. Mrs. Vrba's brother, Frank Wellik and her nephew, Joseph Wellik of Britt also came to help.

The ladies who came to help Mrs. Vrba were Mrs. Fred Pringnitz, Mrs. Elmer Beier, Mrs. Laurice Lemke and daughter; Mrs. Vrba's daughter, Mrs. Paul Thul of Clarion.

Everyone had a fine time doing a neighborly deed and the men all enjoyed the fine dinner the ladies cooked.

Mrs. Vrba stated, "It sure means a lot to have such a good neighborhood."

THE HIGHWAY STORY

By Burr Combs

"There's nothing to do in this town!"

Don't believe that, no matter how often you hear it. There is always plenty to do if youll keep your eyes open and look around.

Take Mrs Brown, for instance. She's a lady in our county-seat town who has always found plenty to do, raising a family of six, with four married and two at home in summertime. Everybody knows the Browns, likes them, and wishes Mr. Brown success in his new business, which he recently started after working all his life for others.

Mrs. Brown always found a lot to do, besides her family's needs to care for. She was active in the church, not only on the religious side, but also at bake sales, suppers and other fund-raising activities. She did a lot of "visiting", too, which often was only a name of charity done in private.

A few mornings ago Mrs. Brown was hurrying along uptown. It was windy and she held her hat with one hand and her coat with the other. She barely glanced around when she started crossing the street.

A car came around the corner and struck Mrs. Brown.

Luckily she isn't dead. We're all grateful for that, because there's still a lot of things that need to be done. But it looks like Mr. Brown will have to start all over again, the medical bills for his wife were so heavy.

Yes, there's lots to do, remember If you'll keep your eyes and ears open and look around!

BOB GISEL, VENTURA HARDWARE MAN AND WIFE FEITED

Have Helped Community With New Store And New Home

About 75 friends and relatives from Ventura, Clear Lake, Klemme, Andrew and Maquoketa gathered at the All Veterans Center at Clear Lake on Friday evening, November 10th for a 6:30 dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Gisel's Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Bouquets of lavender 'mums and silver leaves formed the background for the honored guests' table. A large 3-tier wedding cake, topped with ornamental silver slippers served as the center-piece. Lighted bouquets of yellow and white 'mums served as center piece for two other long tables. Vases of lavender 'mums and lighted white candles completed the table decorations.

Between courses Douglas Tienan of Ventura sang several numbers impersonating Al Jolson. Mrs. Ed. Wistey of Clear Lake then gave the life history of the honored couple.

Leo Esbeck of Ventura was master of ceremonies. Short talks were given by Lawrence Bliss, Eber Flint and Rev. Wolfram. Phyllis Tienan sang several numbers and was accompanied by Mrs. Wolfram. Community singing was then enjoyed with Mrs. Wolfram leading, accompanied by Mrs. George Lawhorn at the piano.

Mrs. Ed. Jacobs of Klemme presented Mr. and Mrs. Gisel with a silver service for 8 in the new Daffodil pattern, from the group. She also presented a gift from the committee in charge: Mr. and Mrs. Glen Terhufen, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Jacobs and Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje of Klemme, and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Esbeck of Ventura.

The balance of the evening was spent in playing Court Whist and high prizes were won by Mrs. Geo. Lawhorn and Eber Flint, and second high by Mrs. Ed. Thieman and Marvin Barz.

Mr. and Mrs. Gisel are the parents of one son, Williard, who is now teaching at Randall, Ia. They came to Ventura from Andrew, Iowa in 1934 and went into the hardware business. They have since helped to build up their community by building a new hardware store and a new home. They have built up a nice business and have gained many friends in the community.

BLACK PANTHER STORY GROWS

FAMOUS ANIMAL NOW ROAMS IN THIS AREA

The black panther that has been head-lining the news the past few weeks and was seen around northern Missouri, then Des Moines and later near Hampton and Alexander, is now in the vicinity of Klemme.

Last week the animal was reported seen along the wooded area along the river south of Goodell. The other day pheasant hunters saw a glimpse of the panther southeast of Klemme but had only shot guns and the panther was out of range.

This writer thinks the whole thing is a lot of bologna, but it makes a good story. We will believe it when we see the dead panther brought in.

Taxes Pay for Honeymoon

THE TAXPAYERS don't know it, but they are paying for the honeymoon of a congressman's daughter. She is Mrs. Jules de Porre, daughter of Democrat congressman Louis Rabaut of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich.

Carolyn was the last in a line of daughters who worked as Congressman Rabaut's secretary. But she quit to get married shortly after Easter, and became Mrs. Jules de Porre on July 8. Despite this, she has continued to draw $643.33 a month.

While the congressman's daughter draws her salary, her job is taken by Marion B. Lacey, who is paid $331.71 per month by the house appropriations committee. Very conveniently, the committee "loaned" her to Rabaut to handle "committee business." She is not on his regular pay roll.

When queried by this column, Rabaut explained that his daughter never quit working for him, but just shifted to his Detroit office. Actually, this explanation doesn't hold up. For the congressman didn't open an office in Detroit until congress recessed the last week of September. Furthermore, when the congressman takes a trip to Detroit, his office help in Washington complain that he scribbles letters in longhand and sends them back to Washington to be typed, thus making a mystery as to what his newly married daughter is supposed to be doing for him in his Detroit office. A further check by this column in Detroit indicates that Mrs. de Porre hasn't been working for her father as his congressional secretary at all.

Mrs. de Porre also told this column that she returned to work here between Easter and her July 8 wedding day, but a check at the house office building revealed this was not true.

The real truth is that Congressman Rabaut gave his daughter a $643 33-per-month wedding gift—at the taxpayers' expense.

John L. Lewis's Friend

It's no secret that New Hampshire's Sen Styles Bridges, the No. 2 Republican of the senate, was paid $35,000 a year as trustee for John L. Lewis' miners' welfare fund. In addition, it also looks as if the shaggy-browed Lewis has been giving cues to Bridges regarding foreign policy.

For several months, Bridges has been working closely with the state department and moving into Senator Vandenberg's shoes as the GOP spokesman on foreign affairs—second only to Senator Taft in Republican influence. But, suddenly, Bridges lashed out with a vitriolic attack against the state department.

This attack, it now develops, was not prepared in Bridges' office at all, but by John L. Lewis' "public relations" form, the Allied Syndicate.

Tip-off came when the Bridges statements were delivered by mistake to the wrong part of the Capitol. A press attendant called Bridges' office to straighten out the error, but no one in the senator's office seemed to know about it. They didn't even know that he was making a statement on foreign policy.

Later, Arthur Reilly, a former John L. Lewis press-relations man, straightened out the matter of the misplaced Bridges press releases.

Reilly, after serving in United Mine Workers headquarters, transferred to the Washington office of the Allied Syndicate, which works for Lewis. The Bridges statement, incidentally, was prepared while the senator was out of the city.

So it looks as if the $35,000 salary paid by John L. was producing more from Senator Bridges than his services as trustee on the miners' pension fund.

Admirals' Propaganda

The Admirals' propaganda outfit, "Operation 23," was supposed to have been abolished after the B-36 feud of last fall. It was the cause of a bitter battle between the air force and the navy, with the result that forthright Secretary of the Navy Matthews dispersed the naval officers in charge.

However, it now develops that the ghost of "Operation 23" is still haunting the air force. The same old anti-air force stories are being leaked to the press. In fact, navy propagandists, believe it or not, are spreading the same identical stories as the Communists about the air force; namely, that U.S. airplanes have been killing North Korean women and children.

Actually, B-29 raids in Korea have been so accurate that they demolished the Woosang armament plants without even touching the rows of workers' houses alongside.

Some admirals are also coming out into the open with the same views that got them into trouble over unification. Rear Adm. Stuart Ingersoll, for instance, harangued a recent conference of American mayors on the navy's success in Korea, as if the air force did not exist.

AROUND THE HOUSE

If the tray under your freezing compartment is not wide enough to catch the chunks of frost when they fall, spread newspaper across it so that the paper extends a couple of inches beyond each edge of the tray. Or, remove the regular tray and put a slightly larger kitchen tray in its place during defrosting.

To speed up the defrosting process in your refrigerator, remove the ice from the trays, fill them with boiling water and put them back in the freezing compartment.

When the rubber-covered drainer or skeleton tray inside your sink gets old and soft, apply shellac, varnish or other paint. Let it dry thoroughly before you do the job (and then to eliminate the sticking and prolong the life of the tray.

When the stove begins to look dull, but still doesn't quite need new polish, you can brighten it by rubbing it occasionally with waxed paper.

Headliners

Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of President Truman's council of economic advisers, speaking on the country economic problems, said: "We do not need as many or as tough controls as in 1944 because the transition of military activity is not nearly so rapid or so great."

Stuart Symington, economic-mobilization coordinator, also had something to say on the same question: "It begins to look as if everybody wants controls so long as the controls don't affect them."

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, speaking on the Founder's Day program at Carnegie Institute said: "Possibly my hatred of war blinds me so that I cannot comprehend the arguments they advance. But in my opinion there is no such thing as a preventive war."

PRAGUE:
Scene of New Plot

The foreign minister of Russia and the representatives of seven satellite states met in Prague to plot the next Communist move since the gamble in Korea must be written off as a complete loss.

From that meeting came four demands to the western powers, but the free nations were more interested in what the Communists did not say than in the new demands.

This is what the Communist asked:

(1) That the governments of the United States, Britain, France and Russia should publish a declaration saying they will not allow the remilitarization of Germany, they will not allow Germany to become "involved in any plans of aggression," and will try to carry out the Potsdam agreement to "build a democratic, peace-loving Germany."

(2) That all restrictions hindering the development of Germany's "peace economy" be removed while a revival of German war potential should not be allowed.

(3) That there should be concluded "without delay" a treaty of peace with Germany which would renew the unity of the German state in harmony with the Potsdam agreement; that all occupation forces of the great powers be withdrawn from Germany within one year after a peace treaty is concluded.

(4) That on a basis of parity, representatives from east and west Germany should form a "Constituent Council" for all of Germany to prepare "the formation of a democratic sovereign government" for all Germany.

The West was not naive enough to believe that any agreement could be reached on Germany. Plans for rebuilding a strong western Germany and an European army continued in full force.

Western diplomats were asking themselves what new acts of aggression did Russia and her satellites cook up?

STASSEN:
Pravda Calls Him Silly

Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, created a lot of interest with his letter to Joseph Stalin asking for a face to face meeting of Americans and Russians in an effort to "stop the drift toward war."

Stassen did not receive a reply from Stalin, but the official voice of Communist propaganda, Pravda, published an article calling him silly, crude, and ridiculous, among other things.

The article was, in fact, a flat rejection of the Stassen proposal. The writer made it plain that the Soviet government does not consider Stassen's letter worth a formal answer.

The article said in part: "Stassen demands no more, no less than a change by the Soviet Union of its policy. It is not difficult to see that Stassen is not only crude but also ridiculous in advancing this wild demand which excludes all possibility of a serious view of any degree of 'document' worked out by the president of Pennsylvania university in cooperation with veteran warmongers Eisenhower and Dulles."

The former aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination had little to say about the article. He indicated he would wait for a direct reply from Stalin.

KOREA:
Now Rehabilitation

Except for isolated guerrilla action, the war in Korea was over. The end was hastened by spectacular parachute drops of U. S. troops between Pyongyang and the Manchurian border to block escape of North Korea troops.

As the end came, however, the world was horrified by reports of new atrocities against U. N. troops in Communist hands. Red leaders had long since escaped into Manchuria, most of them fleeing when U. N. troops crossed the 38th parallel.

Now the United Nations is faced with the rehabilitation of Korea, estimated by a U. S. survey at $200,000,000. The figure was described as a rough estimate and many observers believed comparable sums would have to be furnished annually for at least two or three years to put Korea back on its feet.

The rehabilitation of Korea was one of the big issues discussed by President Truman and General MacArthur during their recent meeting at Wake island.

An indication of the job ahead was given when Reginald H. R. Parminter, special adviser to the U. N. on Korean affairs, told the assembly committee working on rehabilitation that over $36 million in relief supplies already had been received.

Members of the U. N. have offered supplies and cash totaling from $12,000,000 to $13,000,000. Another $5,000,000 was expected.

U.S. EMPLOYEES
Total at New High

Salaries of government employees will cost the average U. S. family about $402 for the year 1950, compared to $155 in 1929, the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life reports.

Because the grand total of federal, state and local government civilian employees has approximately doubled in the 21 years since 1929, while the U. S. population has increased by only about a fourth, each average American family must now pay one government worker's salary for eight weeks out of each year, compared with five and a half weeks' salary borne by each family in 1929.

Salaries of federal, state and local civilian employees totalled $4,650,000,000 for 1929, were approximately $16,000,000,000 for 1949, and are estimated at about $16,500,000,000 for 1950.

The number of persons on public payrolls fluctuates from month to month, but the roster of civilian government workers will average in the neighborhood of 6,050,000 for the 12 months of 1950.

RUSSIA:
Internal Troubles?

Perhaps it is wishful thinking upon the part of the western powers, but rumors persist that Russia and certain of her satellite states are having renewed trouble with discontented elements of their own subjects.

Nothing in the nature of mass uprisings had been reported. Rumored incidents in the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia and Romania appeared to be on an isolated scale. Nevertheless, the reported incidents, if true, indicate increasing bold resistance to Communist domination behind the iron curtain.

One report told of widespread riots and sabotage in Slovakia where the Communists have experienced trouble since they seized control of Czechoslovakia in the spring of 1948.

Other reports told of renewed resistance to the Communist regime in the Ukraine. Some 2,000 persons were reported arrested in the Kiev area.

Reports persist that the overwhelming majority of the people in the satellite states remain opposed to Soviet domination. This certainly would seem wishful thinking upon the part of western diplomats.

U.S. DEBT:
$218,600 Million

The commerce department reported that the federal government went deeper in debt this year than all the private firms and individuals put together. The total net debt was put at $218,600 million.

The total owed by private firms and individuals was reported at $205,500 million. State and local governments owed another $18,100 million. The government's debt increased $2,100 million in 1949.

Christian Worship

Lesson for November 19, 1950

SOME one has said that if the Christian church did nothing else but offer a regular opportunity for public worship of God, she would have justified her place in the sun. This is a rather misleading truth, for if a church did nothing but worship it would not be doing its whole duty, indeed it would not be a true church. As our Scripture plainly shows, worship disconnected from life is not only good, it is sinful.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

Why Worship?

WHAT is worship, and why do we worship at all? We might define it as a meeting with God, both conscious and desired. "He shines in all that's fair," and in truth we are in his presence all the time. But we are not conscious of him all the time. When we are conscious of him, then one of two things happen. Either we hastily shut our minds and run away from him in fear, which is sin. Or we linger, feeling it is good for us to be here.

And then it is worship. Or again, we might call worship conversation between man and God. Every part of it is either our listening to God speak to us, or our speaking to God in some way.

Why worship? We worship because we love God. Otherwise it would be a bore, at best, or a kind of self-torture at worst. We worship because we need God. If Jesus needed both public worship and private prayer, so do we far more. We worship because we need to know God's will.

* * *

Why Worship Together?

PUBLIC and private worship cannot be substituted for each other. Readers of the Bible know how they were intertwined in the experiences of God's people, and how our Lord himself, who used to attend the synagogue services regularly, also sought God on the hills alone. A man who never meets with God alone in prayer will not know how to come to public worship in the true spirit; and a man who habitually stays away from church for no good reason is not a person whose private prayer-life is likely to be a healthy one.

We need to worship together with other Christians. We need this experience to strengthen our own prayer-life. We need it to keep us from selfishness in our prayers. Intense, earnest prayer, and full of faith too, may be seriously wrong if it is essentially selfish.

In corporate, public worship we are reminded that none of us stands alone; that God has many children. We need to worship together because it is one of the very few things, perhaps the only one, that all human beings can do as one. No two of us are alike, yet we are alike in this one thing: We are all human beings in need of God. To worship together is to be reminded of this.

* * *

Why Worship As We Do?

IT OUGHT not to be surprising that men worship God in so many ways, for there are all sorts and conditions of men. But within the Protestant churches, our differences are not important. Essentially we have much the same "pattern" of worship. It will be helpful to you, the next time you are in church, to ask, at each part of the service: Why do we do this? What good does it do? Could it be left out without being missed?

As you visit other churches from time to time, take note of any differences, not in a spirit of criticism but considering whether you might learn from them. What do you and they have in common.

You will agree that there are hardly any parts of a typical Christian worship service which we could do without. We need the prayers, for in them we all pour out our hearts together before God. We need the hymns and psalms, because they express the beauty and the joy of our faith; most of them are prayers set to music. We need the Scripture reading, because in it we hear the Word of God. We need the sermon, because it applies the Word of God to our own lives and problems. We need the offering too . . . . why? But the offering is true worship only on one condition. Do you know what it is? After all, the real test of every part and variety of true worship is: Has this experience brought man and God closer together in spirit and in truth?

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as MILLIONS do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon...right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy...you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

AILING HOUSE

Question: I have aluminum siding on my house and I would like to paint it white. I understand some sort of "treat coat" should be applied first, so that the paint will adhere properly. Could you give me any information on this?

Answer: There is a special metal priming coat intended for this purpose. I cannot mention trade names in the column, but you may obtain information from the Architects Samples Exhibit, 101 Park Ave., New York 17.

Vanity

During the Twelfth dynasty vanity was sometimes a very expensive trait. Egyptian rulers of the time often admired their reflections in real silver mirrors that had handles of black obsidian adorned with solid gold.

Taxes Pay for Honeymoon

THE TAXPAYERS don't know it, but they are paying for the honeymoon of a congressman's daughter. She is Mrs. Jules de Porre, daughter of Democrat congressman Louis Rabaut of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich.

Carolyn was the last in a line of daughters who worked as Congressman Rabaut's secretary. But she quit to get married shortly after Easter, and became Mrs. Jules de Porre on July 8. Despite this, she has continued to draw $643.33 a month.

While the congressman's daughter draws her salary, her job is taken by Marion B. Lacey, who is paid $331.71 per month by the house appropriations committee. Very conveniently, the committee "loaned" her to Rabaut to handle "committee business." She is not on his regular pay roll.

When queried by this column, Rabaut explained that his daughter never quit working for him, but just shifted to his Detroit office. Actually, this explanation doesn't hold up. For the congressman didn't open an office in Detroit until congress recessed the last week of September. Furthermore, when the congressman takes a trip to Detroit, his office help in Washington complain that he scribbles letters in longhand and sends them back to Washington to be typed, thus making a mystery as to what his newly married daughter is supposed to be doing for him in his Detroit office. A further check by this column in Detroit indicates that Mrs. de Porre hasn't been working for her father as his congressional secretary at all.

Mrs. de Porre also told this column that she returned to work here between Easter and her July 8 wedding day, but a check at the house office building revealed this was not true.

The real truth is that Congressman Rabaut gave his daughter a $643.33-per-month wedding gift—at the taxpayers' expense.

John L. Lewis's Friend

It's no secret that New Hampshire's Sen. Styles Bridges, the No. 2 Republican of the senate, was paid $35,000 a year as trustee for John L. Lewis' miners' welfare fund. In addition, it also looks as if the shaggy-browed Lewis has been giving cues to Bridges regarding foreign policy.

For several months, Bridges has been working closely with the state department and moving into Senator Vandenberg's shoes as the GOP spokesman on foreign affairs—second only to Senator Taft in Republican influence. But, suddenly, Bridges lashed out with a vitriolic attack against the state department.

This attack, it now develops, was not prepared in Bridges' office at all, but by John L. Lewis' "public relations" form, the Allied Syndicate.

Tip-off came when the Bridges statements were delivered by mistake to the wrong part of the Capitol. A press attendant called Bridges' office to straighten out the error, but no one in the senator's office seemed to know about it. They didn't even know that he was making a statement on foreign policy.

Later, Arthur Reilly, a former John L. Lewis press-relations man, straightened out the matter of the misplaced Bridges press releases. Reilly, after serving in United Mine Workers headquarters, transferred to the Washington office of the Allied Syndicate, which works for Lewis. The Bridges statement, incidentally, was prepared while the senator was out of the city.

So it looks as if the $35,000 salary paid by John L. was producing more from Senator Bridges than his services as trustee on the miners' pension fund.

Admirals' Propaganda

The Admirals' propaganda outfit, "Operation 23," was supposed to have been abolished after the B-36 feud of last fall. It was the cause of a bitter battle between the air force and the navy, with the result that forthright Secretary of the Navy Matthews dispersed the naval officers in charge.

However, it now develops that the ghost of "Operation 23" is still haunting the air force. The same old anti-air force stories are being leaked to the press. In fact, navy propagandists, believe it or not, are spreading the same identical stories as the Communists about the air force; namely, that U.S. airplanes have been killing North Korean women and children.

Actually, B-29 raids in Korea have been so accurate that they demolished the Woosang armament plants without even touching the rows of workers' houses alongside.

Some admirals are also coming out into the open with the same views that got them into trouble over unification. Rear Adm. Stuart Ingersoll, for instance, harangued a recent conference of American mayors on the navy's success in Korea, as if the air force did not exist.

AROUND THE HOUSE

PRAGUE:
Scene of New Plot

The foreign minister of Russia and the representatives of seven satellite states met in Prague to plot the next Communist move since the gamble in Korea must be written off as a complete loss.

From that meeting came four demands to the western powers, but the free nations were more interested in what the Communists did not say than in the new demands.

This is what the Communist asked:

(1) That the governments of the United States, Britain, France and Russia should publish a declaration saying they will not allow the remilitarization of Germany, they will not allow Germany to become "involved in any plans of aggression," and will try to carry out the Potsdam agreement to "build a democratic, peace-loving Germany."

(2) That all restrictions hindering the development of Germany's "peace economy" be removed while a revival of German war potential should not be allowed.

(3) That there should be concluded "without delay" a treaty of peace with Germany which would renew the unity of the German state in harmony with the Potsdam agreement; that all occupation forces of the great powers be withdrawn from Germany within one year after a peace treaty is concluded.

(4) That on a basis of parity, representatives from east and west Germany should form a "Constituent Council" for all of Germany to prepare "the formation of a democratic sovereign government" for all Germany.

The West was not naive enough to believe that any agreement could be reached on Germany. Plans for rebuilding a strong western Germany and an European army continued in full force.

Western diplomats were asking themselves what new acts of aggression did Russia and her satellites cook up?

STASSEN:
Pravda Calls Him Silly

Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, created a lot of interest with his letter to Joseph Stalin asking for a face to face meeting of Americans and Russians in an effort to "stop the drift toward war."

Stassen did not receive a reply from Stalin, but the official voice of Communist propaganda, Pravda, published an article calling him silly, crude, and ridiculous, among other things.

The article was, in fact, a flat rejection of the Stassen proposal. The writer made it plain that the Soviet government does not consider Stassen's letter worth a formal answer.

The article said in part: "Stassen demands no more, no less than a change by the Soviet Union of its policy. It is not difficult to see that Stassen is not only crude but also ridiculous in advancing this wild demand which excludes all possibility of a serious view of any degree of 'document' worked out by the president of Pennsylvania university in cooperation with veteran warmongers Eisenhower and Dulles."

The former aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination had little to say about the article. He indicated he would wait for a direct reply from Stalin.

KOREA:
Now Rehabilitation

Except for isolated guerrilla action, the war in Korea was over. The end was hastened by spectacular parachute drops of U. S. troops between Pyongyang and the Manchurian border to block escape of North Korea troops.

As the end came, however, the world was horrified by reports of new atrocities against U. N. troops in Communist hands. Red leaders had long since escaped into Manchuria, most of them fleeing when U. N. troops crossed the 38th parallel.

Now the United Nations is faced with the rehabilitation of Korea, estimated by a U. S. survey at $200,000,000. The figure was described as a rough estimate and many observers believed comparable sums would have to be furnished annually for at least two or three years to put Korea back on its feet.

The rehabilitation of Korea was one of the big issues discussed by President Truman and General MacArthur during their recent meeting at Wake island.

An indication of the job ahead was given when Reginald H. R. Parminter, special adviser to the U. N. on Korean affairs, told the assembly committee working on rehabilitation that over $36 million in relief supplies already had been received.

Members of the U. N. have offered supplies and cash totaling from $12,000,000 to $13,000,000. Another $5,000,000 was expected.

U.S. EMPLOYEES
Total at New High

Salaries of government employees will cost the average U. S. family about $402 for the year 1950, compared to $155 in 1929, the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life reports.

Because the grand total of federal, state and local government civilian employees has approximately doubled in the 21 years since 1929, while the U. S. population has increased by only about a fourth, each average American family must now pay one government worker's salary for eight weeks out of each year, compared with five and a half weeks' salary borne by each family in 1929.

Salaries of federal, state and local civilian employees totalled $4,650,000,000 for 1929, were approximately $16,000,000,000 for 1949, and are estimated at about $16,500,000,000 for 1950.

The number of persons on public payrolls fluctuates from month to month, but the roster of civilian government workers will average in the neighborhood of 6,050,000 for the 12 months of 1950.

RUSSIA:
Internal Troubles?

Perhaps it is wishful thinking upon the part of the western powers, but rumors persist that Russia and certain of her satellite states are having renewed trouble with discontented elements of their own subjects.

Nothing in the nature of mass uprisings had been reported. Rumored incidents in the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia and Romania appeared to be on an isolated scale. Nevertheless, the reported incidents, if true, indicate increasing bold resistance to Communist domination behind the iron curtain.

One report told of widespread riots and sabotage in Slovakia where the Communists have experienced trouble since they seized control of Czechoslovakia in the spring of 1948.

Other reports told of renewed resistance to the Communist regime in the Ukraine. Some 2,000 persons were reported arrested in the Kiev area.

Reports persist that the overwhelming majority of the people in the satellite states remain opposed to Soviet domination. This certainly would seem wishful thinking upon the part of western diplomats.

U.S. DEBT:
$218,600 Million

The commerce department reported that the federal government went deeper in debt this year than all the private firms and individuals put together. The total net debt was put at $218,600 million.

The total owed by private firms and individuals was reported at $205,500 million. State and local governments owed another $18,100 million. The government's debt increased $2,100 million in 1949.

Christian Worship

Lesson for November 19, 1950

SOME one has said that if the Christian church did nothing else but offer a regular opportunity for public worship of God, she would have justified her place in the sun. This is a rather misleading truth, for if a church did nothing but worship it would not be doing its whole duty, indeed it would not be a true church. As our Scripture plainly shows, worship disconnected from life is not only good, it is sinful.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

Why Worship?

WHAT is worship, and why do we worship at all? We might define it as a meeting with God, both conscious and desired. "He shines in all that's fair," and in truth we are in his presence all the time. But we are not conscious of him all the time. When we are conscious of him, then one of two things happen. Either we hastily shut our minds and run away from him in fear, which is sin. Or we linger, feeling it is good for us to be here.

And then it is worship. Or again, we might call worship conversation between man and God. Every part of it is either our listening to God speak to us, or our speaking to God in some way.

Why worship? We worship because we love God. Otherwise it would be a bore, at best, or a kind of self-torture at worst. We worship because we need God. If Jesus needed both public worship and private prayer, so do we far more. We worship because we need to know God's will.

* * *

Why Worship Together?

PUBLIC and private worship cannot be substituted for each other. Readers of the Bible know how they were intertwined in the experiences of God's people, and how our Lord himself, who used to attend the synagogue services regularly, also sought God on the hills alone. A man who never meets with God alone in prayer will not know how to come to public worship in the true spirit; and a man who habitually stays away from church for no good reason is not a person whose private prayer-life is likely to be a healthy one.

We need to worship together with other Christians. We need this experience to strengthen our own prayer-life. We need it to keep us from selfishness in our prayers. Intense, earnest prayer, and full of faith too, may be seriously wrong if it is essentially selfish.

In corporate, public worship we are reminded that none of us stands alone; that God has many children. We need to worship together because it is one of the very few things, perhaps the only one, that all human beings can do as one. No two of us are alike, yet we are alike in this one thing: We are all human beings in need of God. To worship together is to be reminded of this.

* * *

Why Worship As We Do?

IT OUGHT not to be surprising that men worship God in so many ways, for there are all sorts and conditions of men. But within the Protestant churches, our differences are not important. Essentially we have much the same "pattern" of worship. It will be helpful to you, the next time you are in church, to ask, at each part of the service: Why do we do this? What good does it do? Could it be left out without being missed?

As you visit other churches from time to time, take note of any differences, not in a spirit of criticism but considering whether you might learn from them. What do you and they have in common.

You will agree that there are hardly any parts of a typical Christian worship service which we could do without. We need the prayers, for in them we all pour out our hearts together before God. We need the hymns and psalms, because they express the beauty and the joy of our faith; most of them are prayers set to music. We need the Scripture reading, because in it we hear the Word of God. We need the sermon, because it applies the Word of God to our own lives and problems. We need the offering too . . . . why? But the offering is true worship only on one condition. Do you know what it is? After all, the real test of every part and variety of true worship is: Has this experience brought man and God closer together in spirit and in truth?

FIRE DEPARTMENT MADE RUN TO PATTERSON HOME MONDAY EVENING

Curtain Caught Fire From Small Candle Lamp

The Klemme Fire Department was called to the Wesley Patterson home early Monday evening where lace curtain in the children's bedroom had caught fire.

Cause of the fire was a small, glass enclosed candle on a small table near the window. The Patterson children had gone to bed and little Paige was watching the flickering light when suddenly the curtain caught afire. She led her small brother from the room, went to the telephone and called central before her mother knew what was going on.

The blaze was put out quickly and the only damage done was to the table top, the loss of the curtain and shade.

Third Grade News

The third grade children have just completed a Pilgrim Scene, in which each one had a part in making. It consists of log cabins, trees and pilgrim men and women.

They also have made turkeys which are now bordering the chalk board.

In Georgrahpy they have almost finished their maps of the United States.

Fourth Grade News

Friday, October 27th our class entertained our mothers at a Hallowe'en costume party. A short program was presented and the costumes were judged by the mothers. There were 2 winners for the best costumes. They were Cozette Lau and Roger Meints.

On Thursday, November 2nd, all the fourth grade had their eyes checked. Twelve out of the class enrollment of seventeen had perfect vision.

Dental cards returned recently are those of Gary Kothenbeutel, Craig Larsen, Virginia Kudje and Dorothy Roul.

Those to get four badges in a row for our Cleanliness Inspection are Jerry Lee LaFavre, Cozette Lau, Virginia Kudje, Mardell and Marlin Standtlander. To be awarded a badge each week we must fulfill the following five points:

1. Face, neck and ears must be clean.
2. Hands and nails clean.
3. Hair must be combed.
4. Teeth must be brushed.
5. Clothes put on straight, buttons and fasteners fastened, shoes laced and tied, shirts tucked in.

In art period we have made a border of turkeys and Indians for our room. We also each made a turkey that can stand by itself. As an additional project we tore figures representing Thanksgiving from white paper and pasted the mon blue background.

In arithmatic we are practicing on multiplication and suppose to know them through the 6's.

This week in language we learned three new words—parenthesis, context, and italics. We know what each means but not all of us can pronounce them.

Those who got 100 per cent in Spelling this week are Harlan Baack, Cozette Lau, Roger Meints, Mardell Stadtlander and Virginia Kudje.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS TO AVOID SHIPPING FEVER

As feeder cattle start rolling into Iowa feedlots, cattlemen are warned of a disease that often follows such shipments, hemorrhagic septicemia.

A terrific financial loss is caused each year by the disease, often called "shipping fever." Diseased animals lose weight and sometimes die, says Dr. John Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Shipping cattle long distances puts them in a run-down condition and makes them easy prey to the destructive disease. Poor management and feeding, severe weather changes or any other weakening condition lowers the animal's resistance and can set the stage for a hemorrhagic attack.

Once the disease is carried into a herd, it can attack healthy and vigorous animals too, so Herrick suggests several precautions for feeders to take if they want to play safe.

Cattle should be vaccinated 10 days to 2 weeks before shipping. This raises the animals resistance to the disease. Ship the cattle direct to the feedlot to avoid places which might be harboring hemorrhage septicemia.

Herrick also warns shipper to avoid drastic changes in feed, water and housing and to provide plenty of rest for cattle during shipping. As an added precaution, he suggests quarantining recently shipped animals until the danger from an outbreak of the disease has passed.

That period will be about four weeks.

Loss of appetite and fever followed by discharges from the eyes and nose and a persistant cough are danger signals. Vaccinating sick animals with bacteria doesn't help, but the use of a specific anti-serum has given beneficial results. Sulfa administered intravenously and accompanied by penicillin injections also is helpful, according to Herrick.

Sick cattle are benefited by good care just as people are, he points out. Put stricken animals in a draft-free shelter and give them a dry, clean bed. They'll need clean water and a limited amount of feed.

NEED TO FARROW LARGER LITTERS

Necessary If Farmers Are To Wean More Pigs

How to get more pigs farrowed per average litter is one of the big problems facing today's hog raisers. E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College, says this is necessary if more pigs per litter are to be raised.

Last year the sows in Iowa farrowed between 8 and 9 pigs per litter of which only 6.56 were weaned. Quaife says an extra pig farrowed per litter would be the answer to boosting the number weaned up to 7 where it should be.

There are several things hogmen can do to reach this goal. Their important one is to select gilts that will produce large, healthy litters.

Pick Right Gilts

The swine specialists recommends picking gilts for breeding from large litters that are uniform and have been well-nourished. The gilts should be well-developed for their age and weigh at least 200 pounds at breeding time.

Gilts showing easy feeding qualities are described. In addition, it is wise to select gilts that have 5 or 6 well-developed teats on each side of the belly It doesn't do a sow any good to have a lot of pigs if she doesn't have teats to nurse them.

Quafe also suggests some management practices which may be helpful. Gilts should be wormed before breeding time It is a good practice even though they were wormed during the summer. They may still have worm eggs which may infest the newborn pigs next spring.

Flush At Breeding

If the gilts aren't on pasture at breeding time, Quaive suggests flushing them by feeding extra grain and protein. This will get them in a gaining condition which makes it easier to get them with pig and makes them more likely to produce large litters. Gilts that are overly fat or out of condition are the ones that produce the small, weak litters.

Another thing to watch for is flu at breeding time. Quaife points out that gilts suffering from this diesase are usually difficult to settle and the litters from them are small and weak. They should be restored to health before being bred.

KEEP DAIRY COWS OUT OF CORNSTALKS

Poor Feed For Them And They May Injure Udders

A cornstalk field is no place for high-producing dairy cows, says Robert Fincham, extension dairyman at the Iowa State College. Good cows pastured on cornstalks will produce less milk and butterfat and there's also danger of injury to the udder.

Dairy cows will eat too much corn if they're allowed to run loose in a cornstalk field. As a result, they won't eat enough high quality roughage when they are fed at the barn. Another reason for keeping cows out of the stalks is the danger of udder injury. Fincham reports that sharp cornstalks left sticking up in the air after the picker are usually about the same height as a cow's udder. There's danger of their hitting and bruising the udder of the cow when she walks over them.

Danger With DDT

If the corn has been sprayed with DDT, cows shouldn't be allowed in the field because the milk may be rejected when it is offered for sale. The federal Pure Food and Drug Administration says that dairy products are easily contaminated from feed treated with DDT.

The dairyman also says that it's often too cold for good dairy cows out in the stalk fields.

He suggests leaving the cornstalks for dry cows, dairy heifers and other types of livestock that will make better use of them.

DON'T HURRY PICKING AT EXPENSE OF SAFETY

With the corn picking season about over, many farmers will probably be hurrying to get their crop out of the way. Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College, says this is a dangerous time from the standpoint of accidents.

It is always irritation to be finishing up any job when most of the neighbors are through. However, there is no reason to risk personal injury by getting careless and neglecting safety practices.

Wardle reports that over 60 per cent of corn harvest accidents during past years have been due to following unsafe practices.

Wardle urges farmers who are harvesting late to continue following all the rules of safety. Avoid cleaning out the husking rolls while the machine is running, leave the power take-off shield on and don't adjust or oil any part of the mechine while it is in motion, he reminds late-season pickers.

Former Klemme Neighbors Stage Surprise Party On Mrs. Marshall

Former Klemme neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Marshall, of Clear Lake, chose the occasion of Mrs. Marshall's birthday for a surprise dinner and housewarming at their new home at 321 North 13th street in Clear Lake.

Guests brought a bounteous chicken dinner with all the trimmings for a noon dy dinner, complete with birthday cakes baked and decorated by Mrs. Verner Nelson and Mrs. John Waddingham.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Verner Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Helps, Lois and Merlyn, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kramer, Pauline, Donald and Duane, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Elder, Mr. and Mrs. John Waddingham, Bruce and Ellen, Mr. and Mrs. John Lass, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wille, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Pearson all of near Klemme, and Miss Betty Ann Kramer of Mason City.

The Marshalls were presented with an electric coffee percolator in remembrance of the occasion.

FALL IS SEASON WHEN RATS AND MICE SEEK BOARD AND ROOM

Cold weather does more than to start ducks and geese on their southward flight. It also starts the trek of rats and mice from fields to farm buildings. These buildings may be in for trouble unless they are rat-proofed, says county extension director Paul Henderson.

Areas in the farm yard which provide comfortable haven for rats and mice are quite sure to be used as headquarters for rodent's winter activities. So Henderson is suggesting that Hancock farmers do away with rat hideouts. The cost of rat proofing the entire farm in many cases would amount to less than the loss from rats and mice for 1 year, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates.

Rodents look for floors built a few inches off the ground; wood, straw and hay piles; manure piles; inside double walls; and concrete floors without rat guards. Rats and mice will be attracted to such places, Henderson says, especially if there is feed nearby.

Rats and mice are especially interested in full corn cribs. Sherwood DeForest, Iowa State College Engineer advises putting hardware cloth extending 2 feet above the floor at the outside of the studdings. Siding boards can be fastened over this cloth. Then fasten a strip of 8-inch tin along the upper, outside edge of the top siding board. This makes a barrier that rats and mice can't crawl over. Slat cribbing can be used for the remainder of the siding.

The main point in making cribs rodent-proof Henderson says, is to keep pests from getting into the crib from the sides. Rats will seldom gnaw holes through the floor from below when the area down there is open and exposed. Rats attack floor boards from above, so floors are safe if rodents are kept from the top.

Rodents slip into houses by way of open doors, defective basement floors and floor drains, openings through which water and sewer pipes extend, and defective foundations and sills. A little patchwork in these places may be all that's needed to make farm houses rodent-free.

CHECK COOLING SYSTEM BEFORE ANTI-FREEZE USE

Give the tractor cooling system a close check before putting in antifreeze, advises Iowa State College agricultural engineer Dale Woolsoncroft. Serious trouble may result from a rotting hose or loose head gasket.

The permanent-type anti-freeze that leaks through to the oil sometimes leaves a gummy deposit that causes oil lines to plug, reports Woolsoncroft. This may gum the valves, rings and bearings. So it's important to check the head gasket and make sure all head bolts are tight. If the solution gets into the crankcase there is usually a creamy oil on the dip stick.

Hoses in the cooling system may look good on the outside, yet be soft and rotted on the inside. These should be checked because bits of rotted rubber that loosen from a hose can plug the radiator, Woolsoncroft, says.

If the cooling system has a thermostat, that should be checked to make sure it's working properly. If it takes the engine longer than usual to warm up, or if the engine runs exceptionally cool, the trouble may be in the thermostat.

When anti-freeze is left in the engine throughout the year, the solution may become acidic. Hot water speeds this reaction. So it's a good idea to take anti-freeze out during the spring and summer. Then if it is used again, a corrosion inhibitor should be added.

Woolsoncroft stresses the need to flush out the radiator before putting in anti-freeze in the fall. Flush with 3 pounds of washing soda (not baking soda) in 7 gallons of water. Run the motor until the solution is hot and then flush with fresh water. A radiator cleaner made by a reputable manufacturer will also do the job, he says.

Found Skull

While Ted Factor and Harold Marsch of Mason City were hunting along the Shell Rock river near Northwood recently, they found a human skull. No other bones were found.

COUNTY EXTENSION DIRECTOR SUMS UP BORER SITUATION

Fewer corn borers are going into hibernation this fall in Hancock County than a year ago, but enough to supply the seed stock for infestation next year if conditions are favorable, according to Paul Henderson, county extension director.

He reports that results of a survey conducted by the Iowa State College Extension Service, Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, Iowa Department of Agriculture, and the U.S.D.A. Corn Borer Research Laboratory at Ankeny, show that there is an average of 133 borers per 100 plants in Hancock County fields this fall. That compares to 1019 borers per 100 stalks last year. It is about the same infestation as in 1947.

This pattern of fewer borers is generally true over the entire state, Henderson said. Highest infestation in the state is in northwest Iowa and the lowest in eastern Iowa. This compares with Wright County with 155, Winnebago with 106, Cerro Gordo with 71 and Kossuth with 132.

Weather unfavorable to the borers was Henderson's explanation for the decrease in number this year. The season started with the largest population of corn borers on record. Following the late spring, borer numbers continually declined. No second brood was developed and it is the second brood which makes the tremendous build-up in the borer population, such as occurred last fall.

The corn borer siuation in general is much like it was in 1947, according to Henderson. That's his reason for advising farmers to feel they can write the insect off the books. It is something to watch and to be prepared for. It was the relatively small number of borers that went into hibernation in the fall of 1947 that produced the 1948 corn borer population, a borer crop that caused $90 million damage.

Meet the Paradise Bird With Twin-Feathered Tail

U. S. ornithologists have the unusual opportunity of studying at home two specimens of the rare ribbon-tailed bird of paradise, a spectacular creature with a trailing twin-feathered tail some three times the length of its body.

The first ribbon-tail ever to reach this country arrived not long ago in the rich haul of the scientific expedition to Australia's primitive Arnhem Land sponsored by the National Geographic society, the Smithsonian institution, and the Australian government.

The ribbon-tail, or Astrapia mayeri, lives only in the high Mt. Hagen district of east-central New Guinea. Black, with iridescent bluish-green cap and throat, and short beak topped by feather pompon, it is a striking sight trailing two feet and more of white feathers through the deep forests.

Before the remote island region of New Guinea became accessible by plane, following establishment of landing fields used in World War II, none of the ribbon-tails had been seen alive outside the homeland.

It was as recently as 1935 that an Australian patrol officer saw flitting about his more than 8,000-foot camp an unfamiliar bird of paradise, wearing a long ivory-colored train. A few years later, the odd tail feathers, minus the bird, were noticed in the headdress of New Guinea natives by a collector working for the London zoo.

The ribbon-tail is still the latest to be added to the 40 or so species of the bird of paradise family. Ornithologists say it probably will be the last. The uplands where the white-tailed birds are found offered about the only uninvestigated territory of the home of paradise birds in New Guinea, its offshore islands, and northeast Australia.

Animal's Diet Important In Disease Resistance

The amount of protein an animal eats has a direct bearing on its resistance to disease. The disease-fighting antibodies found in the blood are made from proteins. And, if an animal's diet does not contain enough proteins, the body is unable to manufacture sufficient antibodies to protect itself against invading disease germs.

Studies of protein-deficient rats show that they cannot withstand infections as well as normal rats. Neither can they be vaccinated satisfactorily against contagious diseases, since vaccination should produce a good supply of antibodies in the blood

Proteins alone, however, are not the whole answer to disease resistance. Unless other nutritional elements are fed to an animal, its body is unable to store up supplies of protein for future use.

In other cases, even though the diet is adequate, various types of illness may prevent protein storage, leaving an animal easy prey to infectious diseases

Protein deficiency does not develop quickly if an animal has been well nourished in the past. Warm-blooded animals hold on to their protein reserves with "tenacity." Only after prolonged malnutrition do animals lose their defenses against infections.

Anglers Like Steel Rods

Steel fishing rods, solid or tubular, are coming into wider use. One concern makes more than 250,000 annually, ranging from fine tackle to low priced rods for chain store retailing. Steel rods may even serve dual purposes For example, the solid stainless steel antenna rods on army field service radio sets are similar to rods now in demand for salt water fishing. Tubular steel for featherweight casting rods may be a chromium - molybedenum alloy. Fifty-one inch lengths of tubing are cold drawn through dies in various diameters so that further working does not spoil the action of the rod. Wall thickness of the tubular tip may be as little as 0.012 inch. The thin tubes are carefully heat treated to preserve the quality of the steel.

Rubber Industry

For hundreds of years the potentials of raw rubber had been appreciated by science and industry. But nobody had been able to correct its tendency to become sticky goo in hot weather and brittle in cold. In 1839 Charles Goodyear, who had spent six years experimenting, accidentally spilled a concoction of rubber, sulphur and white lead on a hot stove. He peeled off the blob and found the answer He patented the vulcanizing process in 1844. Rapid development of the rubber industry followed His invention was the basis of the rubber industry today.

Testing Terry Towel

Holding a terry towel up to the light will give some indication of the strength or weakness of the underweave. Tiny and regular pin points of light will shine through a weave that is uniform and good. But light will show through unevenly in a loose inferior underweave. The better the construction of the towel, the less light that will shine through, though more light will, of course, shine through white towels than colored ones.

Uncle Sam Says

Young America, as represented by some 200,000 newspaperboys, is a firm believer in the principle of independence and of a Free Democracy as exemplified by the U. S. Savings Bonds Drive slogan "Save For YOUR Independence, Buy U. S. Savings Bonds," as well as the Drive symbol, the "Liberty Bell." These newspaperboys will again demonstrate their desire for a strong America by distributing 15,000,000 Savings Bonds folders right to your door, during the Independence Drive May 15-July 4. The folders will show you how to become financially independent through the regular, automatic way of saving by investing a portion of your income in Savings Bonds.

Hail Storm Damage

Research sponsored by capital stock fire insurance companies is helping reduce the economic loss caused to growing crops by hail. Hail damage to growing crops has always been frequent and widespread throughout the Middle West. Losses to farmers and to insurance companies which write a considerable amount of hail coverages have amounted to tens of millions of dollars. Some crops damaged by hail come back and produce from 75 to 90 per cent of their original expected yield. But until recently no one knew how much a crop might be expected to yield, if the hail struck the plants at any given stage of growth.

Function of Stroboscope

A stroboscope is a device which makes a rapidly moving object, for example, a gear wheel in a piece of machinery, seem to move slowly or even to stand still. A bright flash of light, lasting only a small fraction of a second, is repeated at rapid intervals corresponding with the movement. The flash is so brief that the wheel does not have time to move appreciably while the light shines. If the flashes are timed to come at exactly the same position in each revolution the eye does not distinguish the different flashes because of persistence of vision and the wheel looks as if it were stationary

Needs of Flowers

A flower gardener may bring disaster to his young plants by disregarding their special needs as to light, moisture and plant food, when plants are placed outdoors. Not all plants tolerate full sunlight while some require it. Too often they become crowded before they can develop into specimen plants, and much too often they are overfertilized, especially in their early stages of growth. Don't forget the value of hot weather mulch of peat, ground corncobs, or rotten straw and manure, to conserve moisture and reduce the soil temperature for the growing roots

Use of Forgings

Today the use of forgings is increasing steadily and it is conservatively estimated at about twice the tonnage of pre-war years This increase is due to the many advantages of forging technique over other methods. These advantages include increased strength, elimination of porosity such as is characteristic of many sand castings, reduction of machining operations and, perhaps most important, the ability of holding forgings to uniformly precise dimensions and, whenever required, to extremely close tolerances.

Uncle Sam Says

There are tonics for each season of the year, but there is only one which offers a wonderful cure for headaches, worry, or insomnia. Take a good look at the label on the bottle. That is a U. S. Savings Bond, guaranteed to be safe and to pay you back $4 for every $3 you invest, after ten years. And the more of this beneficial medicine you take, the healthier will be your income—your future financial standing. So, invest regularly every pay day—summer, fall, winter and spring—in U. S. Savings Bonds.

RURAL HEALTH

Health Councils Bring Better Medical Care to Rural Areas

One of the brightest indications of progress in securing more doctors and better health facilities for rural areas in this country is the recent announcement by the American Medical Association that community health councils in the nation have increased from 82 to nearly 300 in the last two years.

These figures are based on a survey of the association's council on medical service in which county medical societies were queried, Thomas A. Hendricks of Chicago, secretary of the council, reported.

Local achievements of the community health councils in the last five years include construction of hospitals with the aid of the hospital survey and construction act (Hill-Burton act); increasing available hospital beds; developing clinics; securing more doctors, dentists, nurses and other needed personnel; development of fulltime local public health services; health examination of children of school and pre-school age and correction of their remediable health defects; promotion of voluntary prepayment medical care and hospitalization; provision of medical care for the aged and chronically ill, and meeting costs of medical service to families unable to pay for hospitalization and doctors' bills, according to Hendricks.

In some instances community councils have been extremely helpful in cooperating with the national mental health program. Councils have matched government funds to pay mental health clinic personnel and conducted educational campaigns to acquaint communities with the value and manner of operation of the clinics.

And although health councils have been organized in urban as well as in rural areas, they have been especially important in bringing better medical care to the people in rural communities, Hendricks said.

• • •

THE A.M.A.'s efforts to promote organization of community health councils to improve medical care for long neglected rural communities date back to the organization of the association's committee on rural health five years ago. Since that time it has been actively engaged in coordinating the efforts of farm groups and state and local medical societies in rural health.

The committee is set up so that its representatives can be reached locally in any area. Doctors selected by state medical societies serve as directors in nine regions and as state rural health chairmen in 45 states. Any organization wanting information on setting up a local health council or solving rural health problems may contact one of these representatives or write directly to the A.M.A. rural health committee in Chicago.

• • •

AS AN EXAMPLE of how the council plan works, suppose members of an Ohio farm bureau wrote the A.M.A. that a community needs a doctor and does not have the facilities to attract him. The community wants to build and staff a health clinic with aid from the hospital survey and construction act. What happens?

The information is referred to the regional director who takes the matter up with the state rural health chairman and the state medical society. The state chairman and the medical society contact the farm bureau, a meeting is called, and the state chairman and representatives of the state and local medical societies, farm organizations and civic groups get together at the community level to work out the problem.

That the rural health problem is steadily being solved through cooperative community efforts was generally agreed at a conference on rural health in Kansas City, Mo. The conference brought together more than 500 medical and lay leaders concerned with providing medical care to small communities.

THE FICTION CORNER

ONE AGAINST THREE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

JIM Orson had ridden 200 miles on horseback to commit murder.

Slouched in his saddle, one hand resting carelessly on his thigh near the butt of the six shooter, he watched from beneath the brim of his hat as the boy came toward him.

"This Marc Newell's place?" he asked.

The boy nodded. "My brother will be back any minute. I'm Davie Newell. Are you Mr. Dumont, the cattle buyer?"

3-Minute Fiction

Without changing his expression Jim Orson said: "Yeah, I'm him."

"We've been expectin' you. Come on inside and wait. It's cooler."

"I noticed," Orson remarked, "that you had a rifle in your hands when you first opened the door. Expectin' trouble?"

The boy's face clouded. "I was afraid it might be Jules Snyder. He's promised to get Marc."

"Why is he out to get your brother?"

The boy hesitated. "Because Marc quit his gang. Marc used to hang around with the Snyder bunch, but when they began rustlin' and killin', he quit 'em.

"Right after Marc quit, a man named Tom Orson was shot and Jules let it out that Marc done it. The story spread an' nobody dared deny it because they're afraid of Snyder."

Jim Orson thought: "The boy's lying. He's like his brother—a liar and a killer. It was Marc Newell who killed Tom, and it's Marc Newell I'm going to settle with for the crime."

"You'll like my brother," Davie was saying. "He's swell. He—"

Orson's hand whipped to his hip and he shot at the exact moment lead spurted from the horseman's six-shooter.

Faintly the sound of hoofbeats came to them. Davie set down the pan of potatoes and scurried to a window, turned back into the room, white-faced. Without a word he snatched up the Winchester rifle.

THREE men had drawn rein before the gate. Halfway down the walk Davie was facing them defiantly.

"You git out of here, Jules Snyder!"

The leader of the trio, obviously Snyder, said placatingly: "Put down the gun, kid. We only want to have a talk with your brother."

"You want to kill him!" the boy cried shrilly. "I ain't gonna let you. Marc never done nothin' to you."

Behind Jules Snyder one of the riders had drawn his gun. It was one against three, a boy against a trio of killers.

Jim Orson stepped through the kitchen door. His hand was on his gun.

"ALL RIGHT," he said. "This makes it more even. I'm backing the kid's play."

Snyder's eyes bulged. "Who the devil are you?"

"I'm Orson, Jim Orson. Brother of the man you killed, Snyder!"

Snyder's reaction was a dead giveaway.

The man who had drawn his gun suddenly levelled it. Orson's hand whipped to his hip. He got his own weapon clear and shot as lead spurted from the horseman's six-shooter.

Snyder swore savagely and went for his own gun. Orson shot again.

Two of the horsemen were down, the third streaking up the road.

Orson, smoking gun in hand, bent over the two still figures. The boy watched him, wide-eyed, awed.

"Son, I'll ride into town and get the sheriff. You stay here. When your brother comes back, explain what's happened."

The boy nodded, choking. "Y—you're not Mr. Dumont? You're Jim Orson?"

"That's right," Orson smiled and patted the boy's head. "Come 200 miles on horseback to get a lesson in courage."

"You're going back now?"

"That's right. I'm going back. You see, son, I accomplished what I come for."

Life Insurance

Payments to American families by their life insurance companies were at a record $3,478,364,000 in 1949, some 40 per cent more than five years before.

During November this roadside scene will be reproduced on highways across the country. Thousands of these giant outdoor posters will be displayed to carry the message of the national, non-sectarian program, Religion in American Life. The posters are just one phase of nationwide, annual campaign employing, for the first time in religious history, all mass advertising facilities in support of religion.

RELIGION IN AMERICA

Non-Sectarian Program Stresses Spiritual Life During November

A national, non-sectarian program to stress the importance of spiritual values in personal and community life will concentrate nation-wide attention in November on religion and the religious institutions of America. The annual movement is called "Religion in American Life" program.

"There is abroad in the land a hunger for spiritual things," Charles E. Wilson, national chairman of the program, told a group of religious leaders in discussing plans for the 1950 campaign.

"We must therefore take full advantage of our opportunity here," Mr. Wilson said. "We must enlist the cooperation of every church and synagogue in the land. Having done so, I feel sure that, both as a nation and as individuals, we can all derive the full measure of inspiration, strength and guidance that only religion gives."

The Religion in American Life program started last year as an outgrowth of the united church canvass, a campaign like the community chest in which local churches and synagogues unite to conduct simultaneously their independent fund raising drives. The broad, fundamental appeal of the Religion in American Life program can be adopted to intensify every religious activity in the local community.

3,000 Communities Take Part

Throughout the entire month of November, the message of religion will reach Americans everywhere with the theme: "Take your problems to church this week—millions leave them there!"

Last year 2,046 communities participated in the national program with local campaigns. Judging by the reports from all over the country which are being mailed in to the national offices, more than 3,000 communities will take part in the November campaign. In these communities, churches and synagogues are joining in united action to focus local attention on the indispensable values of religion. Roman Catholic churches participate in the program in many communities.

In one sentence, the goal of this campaign: To bring to the attention of everyone the importance of religion and religious institutions and to awaken in every single individual an awareness of his own responsibility to attend and support the church or synagogue of his choice.

Vigorous Program

"It is through such vigorous efforts in behalf of religion," Mr. Wilson said, "that we can bind our country together in a mighty union as a good church nation."

In obtaining the final objective, the program is expected to increase regular attendance at services of worship, create broader participation in religious life, enlist new members, secure adequate financial support for churches, increase attendance of children at Sunday schools, and help sustain evangelistic and humanitarian work at home and abroad.

Church attendance throughout the United States is expected to increase considerably during November, even in those communities not taking an active part in the Religion in American Life program.

Officials of the organization sponsoring the November observance reports there has been a great increase in church attendance in the past few months. This program is expected to help maintain church attendance throughout the country.

Air Force Develops Unique Arctic Kit For U.S. Airmen

A veritable "walking PX"—a new sustenance kit that attaches to an airman's back-style parachute—is the latest boon to Arctic survival to come out of the air materiel command's laboratory.

The streamlined kit provides the best answer so far to the question how Arctic survival equipment can be provided to a pilot cramped in the small confines of a present-day fighter cockpit. The new kit solves this by doing double duty as a seat for the pilot while he is in flight and by meeting three requirements—completeness, compactness and comfort.

Complete in this instance means everything that would be required to keep a stranded airman alive in the Arctic for several days. A total of 22 different items are packed into the kit. Perhaps the most important is a recently developed vacuum-packed sleeping bag which keeps its occupant warm even if the thermometer skids to 40 degrees below. The bag occupies approximately 40 per cent less space than its hand-rolled counterpart.

Weighs 24 Pounds

Also included are such items as a canned-heat cook stove, a .22 caliber revolver, mittens, ski goggles, signaling mirror and flares, waterproof matches, wool socks, compass, water container, pocket knife, survival manual, and food packets.

The kit itself is a zippered, container which is semipermanently attached to the seat sling of the parachute harness. One side of it is contoured and covered with a foam rubber padding to form a comfortable seat for the pilot during flight. In the event of bailout, the kit is part and parcel of the parachute and there is no danger that it will be separated in descent.

The whole kit weighs 24 pounds—and that includes 10 days of food rations. It has undergone a number of field tests in Alaska and will be issued to all pilots assigned to cold climates.

In announcing the new sustenance kit, air force officials pointed out its importance toward national defense. Before air power became the dominent factor in United States defense, this nation's defense lines were the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Now, however, America's defense must cover the vast regions of the Arctic. It is possible, air force men believe, that many of the great air battles of the future will be fought in this region.

And, in delivering knock-out punches to many sections of Europe, the route north across the Arctic is the shortest and most practical. To protect air force personnel that might be forced down in such a wasteland, the sustenance kit was vital to national defense.

The same seat-type container also will be used for other sustenance kits designed for land survival in warmer climates.

A downed airman can live for several days on the contents of the kit which is fastened securely to his parachute and cannot be lost in descent. Clothing worn by the model is the latest adopted by the air force for arctic wear.

Professional Blind Man Plays Gag to the Very Finish

By BILLY ROSE

Last night, in a mood for malt and malarkey, I stopped in to chin with Sammy Fuchs, proprietor of the Bowery Follies and honorary mayor of that unwashed neck of the Manhattan woods.

"What's new and gruesome in your baliwick?" I asked mine host.

"Nothing much," said Sammy, "except that Faker Kennedy died last week and left his eyes to a bartender down the block."

"Come again?" I said.

According to Sammy, the Faker was a professional blind man who had been rattling a tin cup on the Bowery for as long as he could remember. In spite of his calling, however, it was a standing joke around the flophouses that the cane-tapper could shoot off a bug's ear at a hundred paces.

Billy Rose

"We used to kid Kennedy about his blindness," said Sammy, "but he never let on it was an act—if it was an act. And we were never sure because no one ever saw the old coot without his smoked glasses.

"Down at Gargan's Bar where the Faker used to hang out after hours," Sammy continued, "the proprietor had a kind of running gag at the bum's expense.

"'When you die,' he used to say, 'will me your eyes. Mine are gettin' pretty tired from lookin' at the sawdust.'

"'I'll leave 'em to ya, Gargan,' was the Faker's stock answer. 'And they'll come in handy if ya ever want to play marbles.'

• • •

"That's about how the talk went until one night not long ago when a couple of stick-up-men walked into Gargan's and lined the customers up against the wall—all except the Faker who didn't budge from his usual place at the end of the bar.

"After the punks had cleaned out the register and what little was in the customers' pockets, one of them walked up to the Faker and jabbed a gun in his ribs.

"'You wouldn't take pennies from a blind man, would ya?' said Kennedy.

"'Don't gimme that pennies stuff,' said the thug. 'You guys always got a roll on ya.'

"The Faker made out as if he was fumbling in his pockets, and then suddenly made a grab for the gun, yanked it away from the hood and bopped him over the head with it. Then, using the body as a sort of shield, he pointed the gun at the other punk.

"'Drop yer pistol,' he said, 'or I'll shoot the cigar outta yer mouth.'

"Well, it so happened the thug did have a cigar in his mouth, and when he heard the blind man's on-the-button reference to it he got panicky and dropped his gun. A dozen guys jumped him, and a few minutes later he and his pal were in the precinct house.

• • •

"After that, of course, everybody on the Bowery was sure the Faker was a fake, but he never owned up. 'They got me all wrong,' he once told me. 'The stick-up guy was smokin' an Italian stogie and ya can smell them things a block away. And I guessed it was in his mouth by the way he talked.'

"A couple of weeks ago," Sammy went on, "Faker Kennedy got pneumonia, and the day after his body was carted off to Potter's Field a package showed up in Gargan's mail with a pair of glass eyes."

"Sounds like the old man was telling the truth after all," I said.

"Nobody is convinced, one way or the other," said the Mayor of the Bowery. "Maybe the eyes came out of the Faker's head, and then again maybe he picked them up in a hock-shop. You know, you never can tell about these cuckoos—he might have wanted to play the gag out to the end."

When Tunney and Corbett Sparred

By GRANTLAND RICE

THEY WERE TALKING about the ring's best boxers. They were a bunch of old-time fight writers and old-time fighters. They had listed Joe Gans, Sam Langford, Jack Blackburn, Gene Tunney, Joe Louis, Tommy Loughran, Packy McFarland, Benny Leonard and a few others. They also naturally named Jim Corbett as one of the best. I'll take a chance and pick Corbett as THE best boxer of all time.

Grantland Rice

Here's one of many other reasons. Just a short while before Gene Tunney met Jack Dempsey for the title, Jim Corbett had written a book called "The Roar of the Crowd." Jim was looking for some publicity for the book. Tunney at the time was looking for publicity that would help him nail down the Dempsey fight. Gene was just finishing a long campaign for the championship. So Jack Eaton and your correspondent got the idea of using Corbett and Tunney in a one-reeler in our movie sport-reel series.

Both agreed promptly. The meeting was to be only two rounds at two mintues each. The only outsider permitted to see the boxing duel was Frank Craven, the late and always brilliant actor. Jim Corbett was then 63 years old. Tunney was around 25 or 26. Tunney was dressed in full fighting costume but Corbett asked to be allowed to wear long white trousers.

"My legs are not what they used to be," he said. "They have thinned out a lot. I don't want the old gang around the Oylmpic Club in San Francisco to note the change."

In addition to his 63 years Corbett also had a cold. Gene Tunney later admitted that he had never faced a boxer with that much boxing skill. Corbett would feint with his left and then lead with his left. Or he would feint with his left two or three times before calling on his right. Old Jim had an amazing repertoire.

"I used the feint," he said, "both on attack and defense. Most boxers now use it only in defense—to make you miss. The feint is a wonderful attacking device." It was not only the various uses Corbett had for his feinting, but also the speed of his hands at 63. Naturally Gene Tunney was not out to show Corbett up, or to make it too rough. But Corbett kept Tunney busy enough through those four minutes.

And Tunney that afternoon was at his peak as a boxer—one of the best in the game.

Corbett's Choice

"They always said I was a boxer who couldn't punch," Gentleman Jim said one day.

"I could punch more than hard enough. But there were two fights that I won by knockouts. In both I hurt my hands. So I got to thinking. I knew I could outbox anyone then around by a wide margin. So I decided to save my hands and win decisions. A good boxer can last much longer than a good slugger. In the first place he can save himself from punishment. Especially to his hands. In the second place he can concentrate on one detail in place of two."

That was some 24 years ago. But even then Corbett was severly critical of the way all fighters that far back trained. All except Gene Tunney who studied the game intelligently —who worked, studied the effect of many punches—and who also kept himself in marvelous condition for the five years needed to reach and hold his goal.

"Dempsey can't relax," Corbett said at that time. "Jack goes out for the quick kill. He puts everything he has into his earlier assaults. Dempsey has the finest competitive spirit I've ever seen. Tunney is the coolest man in the ring I've ever seen. Here are two great fighters who are almost opposite in everything they do. Dempsey is 99 per cent attack—Tunney at least 80 per cent defense. But don't think Tunney can't hurt you."

When you think of fighters like Corbett, Dempsey and Tunney—and Louis in his prime—and then look at the morbid heavyweights you see today you wonder how such a change could take place.

Future of Cardinals

Is the once great Cardinal machine on its way out? At least it faces stormy days. When Bob Hannegan and Fred Saigh took over the star team of the older league, both knew the handicap they faced.

"Our farm system is far behind what it should be," Hannegan told me one day just before he died. "Branch Rickey is with Brooklyn building up that organization now and Sam Breadon has been too sick to plan anything."

Fred Saigh is one of the smartest operators baseball has. Saigh is a keen, hard-working owner. But neither owners nor managers bat, hit, run or throw.

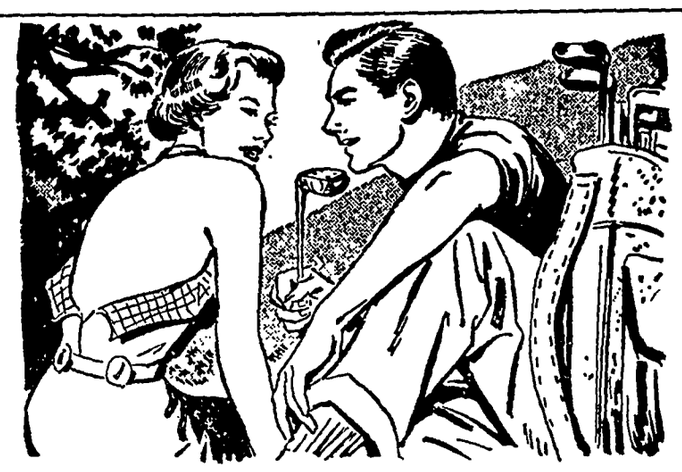
No one could ask for a better manager than Eddie Dyer, the Texan. But Dyer can't replace old, tiring arms and legs with the sinews of youth.

Today the Cardinals have Stan Musial, almost half a ball club and Red Schoendienst, another star.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Girl Athletes Feminine, Too

By Lawrence Gould



Are women athletes "unfeminine"?

Answer: Not always, by any means—it is a matter of the "culture" they grow up in. The more generally customary it becomes for girls to go in for sports, the less "unfeminine" girl athletes will be. But when a woman takes up what she was taught to think of as a masculine activity, one may suspect that she does so as a more or less unconscious protest against what she feels to be the limitations of her sex, and that she cares more about proving she can do anything a man can than about the sport in which she is mgaging.

Is gray a real color?

Answer: Not in the sense in which such colors as red and blue are, says Ralph M. Evans in the Journal of the Optical Society of America. For you cannot see gray unless you are looking at two areas or different degrees of lightness and comparing one with the other. An object of medium lightness that has no intrinsic color looks gray compared with a relatively black or white one. But black and white are not really colors, either; they, too, vary in proportion to the effect of the amount of luminosity on the eyes of the beholder.

Does fluent speaking prove you are sincere?

Answer: No, though it tends to give that impression to the hearer. Fluency shows merely that the speaker is familiar with his subject and is free from inhibitions, both of which may be so whether he believes what he is saying or not. Especially when he's trying to express a new idea, a sincere person is apt to be slightly hesitant because he wants to be sure to convey his meaning accurately. But of course, a "prepared" speech or radio talk is different—the work has been done beforehand and fluency does not mean glibness.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Prevent Tooth Decay With Fluorine

By Dr. James W. Barton

AS A MEMBER OF A COMMUNITY, you natrually have the health of the community, which includes your own health and the health of your family, in mind. A healthy community is bound to be a happy community, other things being equal. As a member of the community you may be asked to vote on some public health project and you may wonder whether the project is worth while, or merely a fad.

Two possible propositions have to do with the water supply. One is whether iodine should be added to the water to prevent goiter. It can now be stated, with abundant high authority behind it, that in some districts, particularly in the region of the Great Lakes, iodine should be added.

The other health proposition is that of adding flourides to the water supply. Some years ago it was found that the inhabitants of a certain county in a certain state were almost free of decayed teeth. Investigation showed that the water and the soil there contained a certain percentage of fluorides. Previous experience with fluorides where the percentage was much higher had caused mottling of the teeth.

Experiments have been carried out in different parts of the United States and Canada in which small amounts of fluorine salts (in the proportion of 1 to 1.5 parts per million) were added to the water systems of town and cities. All reports were favorable to this method of preventing tooth decay.

In The Journal of the American Dental Association, Dr. Francis A. Bull, Madison, Wis., states, "The addition of fluorides to domestic water supplies has now been recommended as a decay-control measure by the U.S. Public Health Service to approval of the state and local health authorities and dental and medical professions. Large scale control tests have been carried on within the past five years in a number of cities.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

A "strong back and a weak mind" don't always go together. As a matter of fact, the weaker the mind, the sooner the back is likely to be put out of commission.

Take the fellow in the picture, bending from the waist to pick up a heavy load. He looks like a sure candidate for a linament rub now and a back-brace later.

Chances are he'll pile that box in a doorway for someone else to trip over. Or drop it on his soft-toe shoes and turn the air purple with words that won't help a smashed foot a bit. Even then, he may not be bright enough to report his injury to the plant doctor or foreman. He's in too big a hurry to punch out, never dreaming he may do it some day from a stretcher.

You may have heard this guy holler "One side or a leg off," as he staggers through with too big a load. Well, at least he's that considerate. Machines aren't. They'll take off a leg--or a finger, hand or arm - with never a pang of conscience

Stop that machine before you reach in to oil it If you spill a little oil, clean it up before you spill yourself right on your hospitalization insurance

You can think of plenty of other safety steps, like wearing protective goggles, an not wearing loose clothes or dangling jewelry. Take those steps, says your Iowa Safety Congress—so you can eat supper at home and not in a hospital.

WILL PLAN ANNUAL POLIO FUND DRIVE AT BRITT DINNER

The annual meeting of chairmen for the various townships will be held at the Central States building at Britt with a dinner at 6:30 o'clock on Saturday evening, November 25th.

Joe Osman, county chairman for 1951, will present the plans for the annual drive for funds with which to combat Polio. Mr. Osman has appointed a chairman for each township in the county and it is planned to have a house-to-house canvass made this year in order to raise more money.

Twin-Lake Hustlers 4-H Club Met November 13th

The Avery-Twin Lake Hustlers 4-H club met on November 13, 1950 at the home of Dean Burgess. Sixteen members answered roll call by naming a bird.

The members discussed having a basketball team and also appointed a committee to meet with the Avery girls and plan their part in the 4-H awards night to be held December 16th

Forrest J. Kohrt, County Youth Assistant, was present and discussed the different cuts of beef and the part of the animal that they come from.

The meeting was adjourned and for recreation the boys played keep-away with a football.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Burgess.

BRITT SPLITS WITH K H S

SHAMROCKS BLEW GAME IN THIRD PERIOD

Klemme High School split honors with the visiting Britt Eagles here Thursday night The Little Shamrocks clipped the Eaglets 25 to 13, but their big brothers avenged the defeat when they took the Shamrocks 44-29.

The Little Shamrocks showed some good prospective material to bolster good teams in the future.

Shamrocks Held Lead

The Shamrocks showed a lot of flash the first two quarters of the feature game as they led the Eagles 8-2 at the quarter and 18-15 at the half-way mark.

Britt was definitely in control starting late in the second quarter and stretching their lead by 20 points before the Shamrocks again found their shooting eyes. The Eagles held the Shamrocks scoreless in the third quarter which ended 31-18 for Britt. The last quarter was on more even terms, Britt scoring 13 and the Shamrocks 11, but the third quarter had already wrecked the Shamrocks hopes and the Eagles won the game 44-29.

Boys And Girls Tuesday Night With Hayfield Here

Next Tuesday night, Nov. 28 the Hayfield Girls will play the 'Rockettes here at 7:00 o'clock.

The boys varsity game should get under way at about 8:30 Plan to see these two games on Next Tuesday night.

The public is invited to attend. Lunch will be served after the meeting.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

By Burr Combs

Two men were talking on a street corner.

"Just came from the bus station," one said. "I saw a mother saying goodbye to her son. I'm no softy but it sure choked me up."

"Was he going to Korea, do you suppose?" his friend said.

"He must have been," the first man said. "It wrung my heart to watch but I couldn't help it, and neither could anybody else who was there.They never shed a tear, but the grief and love on their faces was so deep and moving.

The other man nodded slowly and sadly. "It's a terrible thing, this Korean war. Why, that women may never see her son alive again."

"That's why I'm letting Junior have all the fun he can while he can. I'm letting him have the car Friday night so he and his buddies can go to the game."

"By George, Buddy was asking me for the car, too. You're right! Let 'em have their fun now."

. . . That was the conversation. When the men talked about the sadness and grimness of war their faces were long and thoughtful. But they brightened at the though of the fun their sons would have in the family cars.

Would they be filled with unshed tears and heavy fears when they said goodbye to their sons bound to military service? Probably.

But how would they feel when they handed over the car keys? Sad? Filled with foreboding? Probably not.

Yet, in the last four months, 233 persons were killed in Iowa highway accidents—While 59 Iowans died on the battlefronts in Korea.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Foreign Policy Outlined

IF THERE is any doubt in the mind of any citizen about what the foreign policy of this nation is, he has not heard nor read the utterances of President Truman at San Francisco upon his return from Wake Island, or before the general assembly of the United Nations on October 24.

Some folks may rail at our expenditure of money; others may criticize the slow, cautious steps taken to attain our objectives. The isolationists who are a small minority in this country, may charge the President with "war-mongering," as does the Kremlin; there is deep sorrow throughout the nation over the casualties in the Korean conflict and there certainly can be no objection to honest differences of opinion as to the steps taken either in the congress or in the United Nations to implement our foreign policy.

But there is no basis for such charges as were made by Harold E. Stassen, which he made in a nation-wide broadcast, that the President's trip to Wake Island and his subsequent report to the people at San Francisco was "a sinful political escapade." Neither is there any basis for the charges in a few isolationist newspapers that the President is deliberately and eagerly fomenting conflict in order to keep himself and his party in power.

As one national magazine said editorially: "This distortion of the President's character and purposes is not only vicious, but palpably absurd. It is also stupid."

For if this were true, the President is not only driving the Republican and independent voters away, he is also driving away Democratic voters, for war and the selective service are no respecters of political labels. Democrats as well as Republicans died in Korea as did those with no party affiliation.

This column believes that this nation's foreign policy as enunciated by the President is contained in a couple of paragraphs from his speeches: "Our national history began with a revolutionary idea—the idea of human freedom and political equality. We have been guided by that idea down to this day. The forces of Communist imperialism dread this revolutionary idea because it produces an intolerable contrast to their own system. They know that our strength comes from the freedom and well-being of our citizens, and this idea is what we hold out to all nations as the answer to the tyranny of international communism. We have seen this idea work in our own country. We know that it acknowledges no barriers of race, or nation, or creed. We know that it means progress for all men."

Peace Is Goal

It is the idea behind the Marshall plan, behind the North Atlantic pact, behind the point four program; it is the idea behind the President's plea for support of the United Nations and for international peace and justice and an international rule of law in the world. Without freedom and equality there can be no peace; without peace there can be no freedom and equality for millions of people in the world, and without both there can be no justice for these teeming millions.

• • •

Domestic Policy Vital

It has been pointed out that actually there is little distinction between our "domestic" and our "foreign" affairs. For everything we do here affects our influence abroad—how we tax and spend our national income; how we operate not only our public but our private business; how we settle our differences among ourselves and with other nations; what is said in our newspapers and on the air—all these things affect, not only our own security but our dealings with other nations.

• • •

U.S. Prestige Increases

The concensus of newspaper correspondents returning from Korea is that United States prestige and influence in the Far East was never higher than it is today as a result of the brilliant victories in Korea under the leadership of General MacArthur, and the President's dramatic trip to Wake Island, because "I (Truman) wanted to talk to General MacArthur. The best way to see him and to talk to him is to meet him somewhere and talk to him." That, briefly, is his explanation for the trip to Wake Island.

• • •

MacArthur Blasts Criticism

General MacArthur probably blasted some of the propaganda currently being used to foment differences between the President and his general of the armies when he said: "No field commander in the history of warfare has had more complete and admirable support than I have had from the agencies in Washington." As one war correspondent summed it up, "There will be no more chips placed on the shoulders of either."

Practice Makes Perfect

WHEN the westbound train stopped for a few minutes in a Nevada town, a traveler from the east got off to exercise by walking on the station platform. He had stopped to talk to an elderly citizen of the town when, presenting a rather striking picture, a shapely young brunette galloped by on a palomino horse.

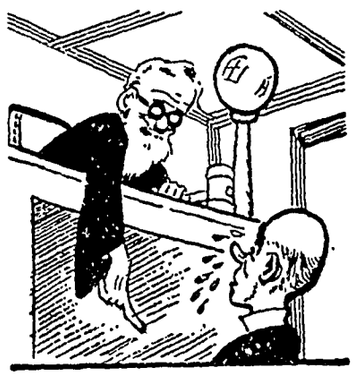
"Some class to your local gals," said the admiring traveler.

"She ain't a native," was the reply. "She's an easterner heiress that's out here for a second time gettin, a divorce."

"But she rides a horse so well. . ."

"She learned to ride on her first trip out here," the westerner explained. "Now she's learin, to rope. Yes, sir, if she don't lose her figger or her fortune like she keeps imagin' she' losin' her heart, looks like she'll be one of the best danged rodeo performers in the country."

RECKLESS DRIVER



Judge: You're a menace to pedestrians. No more driving for two years."

Defendant: "But, Your Honor, my living depends on it."

Judge: "Quite true, but so does theirs."

A BOOMERANG

An efficiency expert went in to see the boss about his vacation. He came out with a hang-dog expression on his face.

Asked what was wrong, he replied:

"I only got one week. The boss says I'm so efficient I can have as much fun in one week as other people have in two."

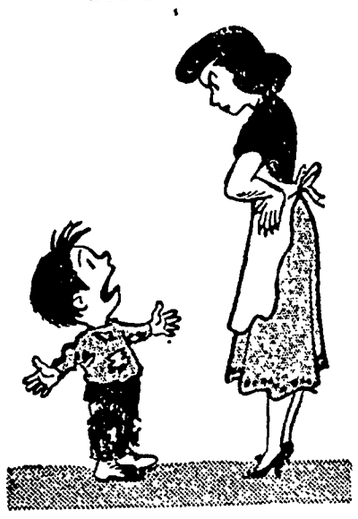
Poor Service

After several hours' fishing, Patty suddenly threw her fishing pole into the bottom of the boat and exclaimed, "I quit!"

"Why, Patty, what's the matter?" asked her mother.

"Well, Mother," she answered, "I just can't seem to get waited on."

SOME PARTY



Bobby came home from the party with a big hole cut in his clothes.

"What happened to your new suit?" gasped his mother.

"We were playing grocery store," said Bobby. "I was the Swiss cheese."

Gall Trouble

At three a. m. the doctor's phone rang. A man spoke nervously "Doctor, this is Bob Jones. I know it's a long drive but please come quickly. My wife has appendicitis."

The doctor spoke soothingly "Think again, man. I took out your wife's appendix less than three years ago. Have you ever heard of anyone having a second appendix?"

"Think again, yourself, Doc," Jones barked. "Have you ever heard of anyone having a second wife?"

Formula for Misfortune

A BEGGAR clutched at the coat of a benevolent-looking passer-by.

"Five cents, sir, for a cup of coffee," he whined.

The other turned to him.

"Why should I give you five cents?" he asked. "What brought you to this terrible plight?"

"A terrible catastrophe, sir," the beggar replied. "Two years ago, like you, I enjoyed business prosperity. I worked hard. On the wall above my desk was the motto: 'Think Constructively! Act Decisively!' Wealth poured my way. And then. . . one night. . ."

"Yes, yes?"

The beggar's frame shook convulsively. "The janitor burned my motto."

Modest Boys

Young mother, to neighbor: "My son always has his shirt-tails flapping, and your four sons always dress so neatly with their shirts neatly tucked in. How do you manage it?"

Neighbor: "Oh, it's really very simple. I just take all their shirts and sew an edging of lace around the bottom."

Prays for Rain

The pious but cranky old lady was put out because her neighbors had not invited her to their picnic.

On the morning of the event, one of them called to ask her to go along.

"It's too late," she snapped, "I've already prayed for rain."

'TAINT SO

A patient in an insane asylum was trying to convince an attendant that he was Napoleon.

"But who told you that you were Napoleon?" inquired the attendant.

"God did," replied the inmate.

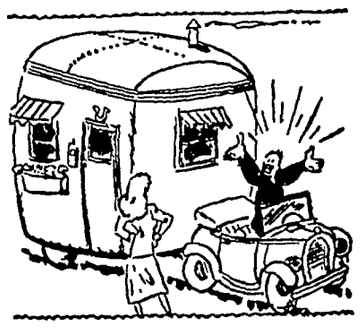
"I did not!" came a voice from the next bunk.

Peace of Mind

Doctor—"This is a sad case, very sad, indeed I much regret to tell you that your wife's mind is gone—completely gone."

Husband—"I'm not a bit surprised. She has been giving me a piece of it every day for the last 15 years."

WHITE ELEPHANT



"I've made a sad discovery, darling," said the young husband.

"Don't tell me we can't have three weeks for our vacation," cried the little lady of the house.

"It isn't that," sighed the man. "But you know we bought that wonderful trailer, spent all our savings on it, too."

"So we haven't money enough left for gas?" asked the wife.

"That isn't it either." The husband groaned. "Our car won't pull it."

Important Consideration

Donald and Mary decided to adopt a child, and asked at the orphanage for a little girl. One was produced, and Mary was about to close the bargain when Donald tapped her shoulder.

"Mary," he whispered, "let's have a boy. Hae ye forgotten the lad's cap we found in the train?"

Cheerful Giver

Lesson for November 26, 1950

TAKE a good look at a piece of money. Let it be in any form at all; "hard money," "folding money," a check, a money order, scrip,—anything you can shove across a counter and buy something with. Let us say it is your own money, and that you earned it yourself. Just take a look at that piece of cash. Do you recognize it? You should; for it is nothing less than a piece of your own life.

Dr. Foreman

• • •

Money is Life

You got rid of something quite valuable to get hold of that piece of money. Time, certainly; you are poorer than you were 24 hours ago, poorer in time, for you have 24 hours less to live than you had then. But you are richer in money, for you did not have this money then, if it is the return for your work during that time. You lost time but you gained money; in other words the money represents time, which in turn spells life.

Look at it in another way: You put out a certain amount of energy for this bit of money. You plowed a field or you raised some chickens or you laid some pipe or you taught some children or you sold a bill of goods. Whatever you did to earn the money, it tired you a bit. You put out the work, — and the money came back to you. Money is time, money is energy. Furthermore, money is knowledge.

Why is a skilled workman paid more than an unskilled one? Not because he works harder or sweats more. He is paid more because his work is better, and his work is better because he knows more. Now, what would life be without time, energy or knowledge? Not much! So if a robber ever says to you: "Your money or your life!" you would be quite correct (even if untactful) if you said, "My dear felon, you repeat yourself; money is life!'

• • •

Life Comes from God

AMONG the many differences between a Christian and a non-Christian is this: the Christian knows too much to say, "My life is my own, to do with as I please." Consider those three elements of life: time, energy, knowledge. Time itself is certainly God's gift, the Creator's gift. None of us can make a moment of it. We can accept it, use it; or we can waste it; but it was given us in either case.

Energy cannot be created by you or me. Each of us has a certain (and a different) amount; we inherit it, we are endowed with it; but only God in the long run is the source of energy. To make a long story short, life is God's gift, not our creation. It is a blank page on which we write, an empty field in which we can sow as we will. But though the writing and the sowing are our own, the page and the field are God's. So the Christian recognizes this as the central fact of his life: I belong to God.

Now if that is true it is also true that our money is also, just as much as life itself, ours only as a trust from God.

• • •

Stewardship

"STEWARDSHIP" is the word which recognizes God's right in our lives; it is the word which describes the principle of life for those who honor God as source of all they are and have. When the proverb-writer says, "Honor God with thy substance," he has just said, "in all thy ways acknowledge him." No man is likely to do what is right with his money who habitually does wrong with his life. No man is going to admit his partnership with God in money matters who does not confess God to be the Lord of all his life.

Now there are two principles brought out in our Scripture about stewardship of money in particular. One is this: God looks on what we have, not on what we haven't. A widow who gives one tiny coin, if that is all she has, is more generous than a millionnaire who has just given half a million to Charity. Second is the principle of willingness. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. Sour givers, regretful givers, stingy givers, no. But the Lord does love the man who gives with a smile.

It isn't how much you give, it isn't the fact that you give, it's HOW you give. Is your heart generous in the first place?

Sing Something Purple

The fact that music can bring certain colors to mind has long been recognized by psychologists. Two of them, Henry S. Odbert and Theodore F. Karowski, found that—out of 148 college students—39 per cent were able to "see" a color or colors while listening to music. Of the number, 53 per cent were able to associate a color and 31 per cent felt a color response. Newton related colors to the diatonic scale in this manner: Do, red; re, orange; mi, yellow; fa, green, sol, blue; la, indigo; and si, violet. Attempts have been made to fashion color organs and other devices to express the correlation of color and music.

Protest

"Getting this fifty dollars from my husband was like taking candy from a baby."

"Honest?"

"Yes, he put up a terrific holler."

Absent-minded people should hang a cardboard sign with the word, DEFROSTING, printed on it on the knob of the refrigerator door so they won't forget to turn the power on again afterward.

Some farmers want an "OPEN CENTER" TIRE...

Other farmers want the "TRACTION CENTER" TIRE...

ONLY Firestone has both!

YOU'LL find exactly what you want — in tread design, in traction power, in wearing qualities, and in extra-value features — when you buy Firestone tires. In BOTH Firestone Champions — the Open Center and the Traction Center — you'll find all of these outstanding advantages:

- Curved and Tapered Bars for stronger, cleaner bite.
- Full-width Tread for full tread life and power.
- Flared Tread Openings for positive cleaning action.
- Dual Shock Protectors for full body life.

Yes, you can have the tread design of your choice and get the finest in quality, too, when you buy Firestone Champions. Only Firestone provides you with this choice. Only Firestone has all these extra advantages. So when you need tires, get Firestone Champions, either in Open Center or in Traction Center design.

GET EXTRA TRACTION FOR YOUR CAR THIS WINTER

Have Firestone Polar Grip Treads applied on sound tire bodies or on your own tires. Polar Grips give you the extra pulling power you need in mud and snow, the extra skid protection you need on icy roads. Choose from two popular designs available at your nearby Firestone Dealer or Store.

NEED FUNDS FOR HOSPITAL ROOM

The Women's Guild of the Immanual Evangelical and Reformed Church in a recent meeting decided to undertake as a project the complete furnishing of a hospital room in the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital in Marshalltown, Iowa. This project is being done as a living memorial to the late Rev Calvin Grosshuesch, former pastor of Immanuel Congregation. Rev. Grosshuesch served at one time as Chairman of the Board of Directors of Deaconess Hospital.

The cost of completely furnishing a room in the hospital including redecoration and drapes and all items of furniture is three hundred and fifty dollars The treasurer of the Women's Guild reports that the Women's Guild contributed $60.; and individual members $27.00; the Young People's Bible Class $30.00, and the Adult Bible Class $80.47 and the total contributions received are $217.47 Members of the church or friends wishing to contribute to this project are kindly requested to make their contribution to Mrs. Ed. Becker, Treasurer of the Women's Guild not later than Tuesday, November 28.

GRIESEMER'S LEATHER STORE

Since 1879 Garner, Iowa

Mr. Dan Goldsmith, 3024 Cameron Road, Louisville, Ky., owner of Coogla Cut Rate Store at 935 West Broadway, says there just aren't enough words in the English language to praise HADACOL correctly. He says he knows most folks don't realize what a change HADACOL can make in their life if their systems are deficient in Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin.

Here is Mr. Goldsmith's statement:

"Before I started taking HADACOL I was run down and nervous — and had a hard time sleeping nights. With my work in the store I have to spend sometimes 14 hours a day on my feet. Since I am in the retail business I saw how many folks were asking for HADACOL so I decided to try it myself. After the first couple of bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now I have all the pep and energy in the world, my nerves are steady as ever and I really do get a good night's rest. HADACOL is wonderful — I not only take it, but recommend it to all my customers. I praise the day Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc put HADACOL on the market."

HADACOL Is So Different

Thousands are benefiting from HADACOL . . . whose systems lack Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin. HADACOL is so wonderful because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these great Vitamins and Minerals to every body organ — to every part of the body.

Give remarkable HADACOL a chance and if you don't feel better with the first few bottles you take — you get your money back. Only $1.25 for Trial Size; Large Family or Hospital Size, $3.50. If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order it direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

Good Eating in Iowa . . .

Edna and I stopped for dinner at the Amanas this month. My—those wonderful Amana fritters!

"I'm glad those pioneers from Germany brought their fritter recipe with them," said Edna.

Yes, and it's not the German pioneers alone! For good Iowa eating we also have to thank the Czechs for Kolaches. The Dutch for Pella bologna. Scandinavians for their institution of Smorgasbord. Italians for Pizza, Spaghetti, etc. Well . . . you could go on naming almost every country. Each has contributed its tastes in fine food to our good living.

That's another reason why Iowa is such a wonderful state. Many ideas, many tastes, mingling here, enriching our lives. One person may like one kind of food, or dress, or way of speaking. That's his privilege. One may like onions, another garlic dressing . . . one prefers ginger ale, another a temperate glass of beer. Each has a right to his choice here in Iowa.

It's a great state . . . as big, as broad, as the viewpoints and culture of its diversified people.

Lost Directions

When 68-year old Herman Wittenberg of Sumner became separted from his sons-in-law while on a fishing trip near Frederika, he lost his directions and walked to Fredericksburg; then walked back again from Fredericksburg to Sumner. His total mileage on foot was 20 miles.

Bagged Golden Eagle

Three Waverly men unintentionally bagged a golden eagle on the highway near there recently. The big bird was devouring a rabbit on the shoulder of the paving and took off directly into the automobile driven by Dick Zahn. The bird had a seven-foot wingspread and he weighed 25 pounds. It will be stuffed and given to the schools.

Greetings..
Thanksgiving 1950

THANKSGIVING DAY rolls around again and all of us should be remindful of the many things for which we should be thankful . . . . above all we should be thankful for living in a free country . . . we should be thankful for being a part of our fine community of good schools and churches, fine farms and homes.

And once again we at the Creamery want to express our sincere thanks to our patrons and our friends for their patronage and loyalty extended to us during the past year. Without your fine spirit of cooperation it would not be possible for us to forge ahead.

This is YOUR cooperative and with your continued support we will continue to grow in the years ahead, and our Thanksgivings will all be happy ones.

GREETINGS FROM ALL OF US TO ALL OF YOU

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

The boys and girls have been reading stories and talking about Thanksgiving. We have learned our own song about turkeys and a Thanksgiving Prayer.

First Grade News

We have a new student in our room. Her name is Lois Ann Lucas. There are now 28 boys and girls in our room.

We colored turkeys and put them out in art.

The boys and girls have been bringing records to school. We certainly enjoy listening to them and singing them.

We have been bringing toys, puzzles etc. to school to play with when the weather is bad.

Some of boys and girls have been sick with the mumps and the chicken pox. The boys and girls hope that all of the children will be back with us soon.

—Mrs. Zenkman

Third Grade News

Our large reading group has been writing stories in different grades which we have read. Tuesday each one selected a certain dog story which we wished the rest of the class to hear and write it. To illustrate the story more clearly we drew a picture to go with it.

We received a letter last week from David Tuggs who was a student here in Klemme last year. He told the boys and girls what he had been doing the whole year. We decided that we would send him a letter also. We all wrote a letter. Then we chose the best one which was Lois Engmann.

We have been making jack-o-lantern out of art. They have scarlet type arms and legs that spring up and down. We enjoyed making them very much.

We are glad to have Donald Anderson back to school again. He was out with the chicken pox. Lynn Eisenmann has been ill the past week.

Suzanne Beck celebrated her birthday last week by treating us all.

—Miss Isabelle Sebber

4th Grade News

This week Graeme Lee Craig Larson, Jerry Lee LaFavre, Roger Mennis, Carrol Priebe and Virginia Kudje worked together on a miniature Pilgrim settlement.

For health inspection our class was divided into teams—the Bathtubs and the Toothbrushes. Those on the Bathtub team are Harlan Beach, Roger Mennis, Craig Larson, Dorothy Reil, Judith Gilpin, Graeme Lee, Robert Tiemann and Jerry Jensen. Those on the Toothbrush team are Myrna Barz, Gary Kothenbeutel, Carol Ann Parey, Virginia Kudje, Carroll Priebe, Jerry Lee LaFavre, Gaylon Bridges, Muriel Stahlecker and Miss Franken. The object is to see which team can remember to do the five inspection points for a nice appearance and good health for a whole month. The winning team will get a prize.

CHRISTMAS SEALS

Tuberculosis Is Nation's Most Costly Communicable Disease

It is interesting note against tuberculosis the National Tuberculosis Association again for year sentiment in the 4 Christmas Seals for funds with which to carry on its program of education, medical research and rehabilitation against the nation's most costly communicable disease.

The story of Christmas Seals is the story of the battle against a disease that took more than 4,000 lives a year in the United States.

Christmas Seals have been sold in this country since 1907. In that year the late Miss Emily P. Bissell put on a seal sale in the home town of Wilmington, Del., to raise funds to help a group of women continue the treatment of a small number of tuberculous patients. When a Philadelphia newspaper took an active interest and aided the sale, nearly $3,000 was realized. Miss Bissell's goal had been $50.

• • •

THE DANES got inspiration from Denmark in that country Christmas seals had been sold in 1904, the year the NTA was organized, because of modern postal facilities. Since Denmark taught people could send many valuable Christmas cards. Ea encouraged the use of a Christmas seal on letters as a way to raise money. The first seal sales in Denmark were used to build a sanatorium for tuberculous children.

Carl A. Ring an American citizen of Danish birth, pioneered the bridge over which the seal traveled from Denmark to America. He wrote an article about the Danish seal, which was published in this country, and suggested that the idea be adopted. Miss Bissell remembered the article when she was looking for a means of raising funds and used it for suggestions.

• • •

THE ENEMIES of Christmas seals are not of flesh, tuberculosis organisms which reach approximately 70 per cent of the population. The disease is transmitted in the main through droplet infection which is that discharged into the air by coughing, sneezing, talking or spitting of persons with active tuberculosis.

The national and local organizations are fighting tuberculosis in three broad forms:

1. Education—telling the facts about tuberculosis and its prevention to large groups of people.

2. Case finding—searching out tuberculosis wherever it is and seeing that treatment is provided for persons who have disease.

3. Rehabilitation — helping the tuberculous person fight it to the utmost extent and prepare for useful living when his disease is arrested.

4. Medical research—aiding qualified investigators through annual grants, in their unceasing search for more knowledge about tuberculosis.

That is the broad program of NTA that benefits when Americans buy Christmas seals.

SPORTSCOPE By JOE MAHONEY

SPORTLIGHT

Calumet Horses Can't Win 'Em All

By GRANTLAND RICE

THIS HAS BEEN a rough year on champions. Notre Dame fell. Joe Louis tottered and was badly beaten. And now Calumet stable and the Jones boys are running second in the Big Money stakes after taking top honors in 1946, 1947, 1948 and 1949. Brookmeade's able stable, owned by Mrs Dodge Sloan and trained by Preston Burch, is now in front with Vanderbilt closing in from third place

Grantland Rice

Both Calumet and Vanderbilt are on their way to California where the Hollywood track and Santa Anita are offering a flock of purses from $100,000 to $230,000—with $10,000 and $50,000 pick-ups scattered all over the Western Coast. At least that part bordering Los Angeles.

The $230,000 purse will be for the Maturity Stake, a four-year-old affair where Hill Prince will be the horse to beat now that Middleground's racing career has been ended by a broken ankle It seems impossible to realize that Calumet, is no longer at the top. You turn back and see Citation, Coaltown, Whirlaway, Armed, Ponder, Fervent, Two Lea, Bewitch and many, many others who have dominated the tracks from here to nowhere and back.

Ben and Jimmy were dividing their big stable and were mopping up. Both are among the great trainers and they had the horses, largely the offspring of Bull Lea.

In 1947 Calumet piled up over $1,400,000, an all-time high. They won $1,269,710 in 1948 with Citation and Coaltown mopping up at every track. Ponder was a big money winner in 1949, ably abetted by Coaltown, and the stable's winnings totalled $1,128,943. But suddenly something happened. Something always happens in racing. And not always for the financial best. Bull Lea suddenly quit sending those crack two-year-olds to the tracks—two-year-olds who grew to be fine three-year-olds and four-year-olds.

Calumet was certain Citation, rated with Man o 'War as a three-year-old, would collect most of the gold in California last winter. I saw him run several times, but the 14-month absence from competition had taken its cut. Citation was no longer Citation and then there was Noor who would have taxed Citation even at his best on the coast tracks. Citation may come back again later. So may Coaltown, who won 12 straight in 1949.

Bowl Phantoms

It is still much too early to start lining up the various Bowls. But you can gamble each Bowl has more than one hard-working inspector working on the job. There are now four veteran Bowls with several added attractions The four major Bowls are the Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Orange, at Pasadena, New Orleans, Dallas and Miami

The Rose Bowl is the most uncertain of the lot. The Pacific coast champion will be in doubt for several more weeks. If Ohio State wins the Big Nine or Big Ten title, the second-best team will head west. The Big Nine has no outstanding delegation today. It could be Michigan, Purdue, Ohio State, Wisconsin or some other. The Big Nine is in the throes of an off year, compared to its big years in the past. California and Stanford still lead the west coast people with Washington close up.

The Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, another 75,000 crowd-getter, is eyeing Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, Oklahoma and either Texas or S M U As the Cotton Bowl at Dallas is banking on Texas or S M U., unless Rice can slip in, it appears that the winner here will remain in Texas on New Year's Day. Just at the moment the Cotton, Sugar and Orange Bowls are all watching the same teams—Texas, S M.U., Rice, Tennessee, Kentucky, Maryland, Oklahoma and any outsider who may pop into the middle of the picture.

The southwest now has more bowl entries than any other sector.

What To Do?

I checked last fall with graduate managers from Pennsylvania, Yale, UCLA and Southern California. Each figured television had cost them around 11,000 paid admissions each game—especially each important game. This was equal to a loss of $33,000 a game. They were getting $77,000 a season for television rights—not nearly enough to make up the heavy deficit and keep the sport going in the schools

It may be in a few years the crowds will tire of television sets and come back to the playing grounds again. But as long as they are willing to bring the game to you for nothing I can't visualize huge mobs rushing out to pay for being crowded, shoved around and set down in uncomfortable seats. I'd rather have them bring it to me, than go out and look for it. Especially when it's just as good.

Almost everyone would rather have television except the promoters or owners.

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative — do as MILLIONS do — chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon...right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . . you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Economical Cough Relief! Try This Home Mixture

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen.

First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

DEMOS HELD COUNTY MEET

BEN V. GREIMAN APPOINTED DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN

At a meeting of the Hancock County Democratic Central Committee held at Britt on Monday evening, County Chairman C. E. Proctor resigned his position.

Ben V. Greiman of Garner was appoisted as Chairman of the Hancock County Central Committee to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Proctor.

Mr. Proctor was very active in the recent campaign and for the first time in many years there was nearly a complete Democratic ticket on the county ballot. Mr. Proctor deserved a big bouquet for the work he has done for his fellow Democrats.

Mr. Greiman is active in politics and should make a good successor to Mr. Proctor. Ben is a former AAA Chairman of Hancock County.

MAIL COLLECTION OFF TO GOOD START

The first mail collection letter for the 1951 Farm Bureau membership dues was mailed out Tuesday, and the first three days brought in 29 checks. That is off to a good start, if we can keep that up until the first week in January, the time of the regular membership drive, it will make the work of the volunteer captains and leaders a great deal lighter. Come on folks get those letters in the mail. Hancock County might just as well be the first county in the state to have their quota of 1320 for 1951.

Said Paul G. Shurts, County Fieldman, "Farm Bureau works for you every day, so please take five minutes and fill in the check and mail. No stamp is necessary."

THE HIGHWAY STORY

BY BURR COMBS

Bluebills and some of the smaller ducks ride pretty low in the water. If the water is just a little rough, it's sometimes pretty hard to spot the ducks.

George was a born hunter. His mother was the first to say it, although sometimes his Dad felt that he had ben the first to notice that about George. Anyway after finishing high school and getting his name in the paper several times, and once guest writing the sports column and being an officer in the sports club, nearly everyone would say that about him:

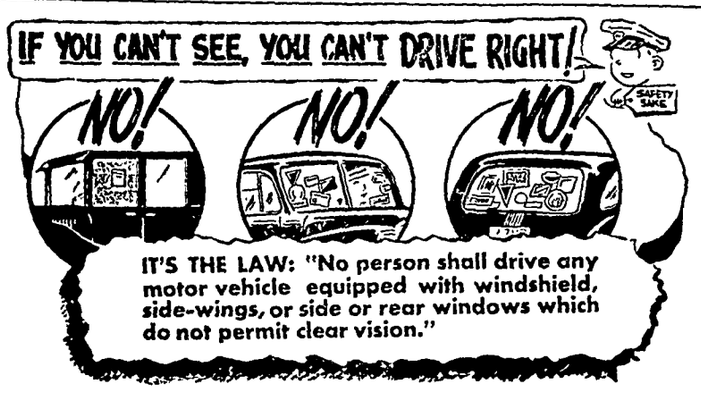
"George? Now there's a real hunter. A born hunter, that boy is!" It was probably true. George had a quick, keen eye, a steady hand, iron-clad nerves and ability to stand rain, sleet, cold, wet or any other kind of discomfort.

A good gun was one of the first things he ever bought with money he had earned by himself. Later his collection of guns was famous. They were not an antique collection, either. They were all ready for business.

From all those facts it was reasonably easy to deduce why George died violently and horribly.

He was driving down the highway close to town - coming in to work after being out at daybreak for ducks. As he passed the sandpit he must have concentrated the gaze of his keen eyes on the choppy water to see if there wasn't a bluebill or two - riding low - among the waves.

He didn't see the hole in the shoulder as his wheel went off the road and hit it. He died the second time the car rolled over.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Okay, so you've been to Yosemite, and Grand Canyon, and Niagara. But just because you've traveled, don't let your windows get "stuck up." Car windows are made to see through, not to serve as a travel promotion bureau.

A board or cardboard with a peephole to replace your broken window may save you money . . . and cost you your life! Don't be blind behind, either. That rear window is just as much needed as a reverse gear.

With cluttered or frosty windows, you may not see the train at a crossing, or the other car at an intersection . . . but you'll be just as dead as if you had! The law requires clear vision because your life depends on it.

Have you been reading the new-car advertisements lately? Do you notice how many talk about things like "picture-window" visibility and "better all-'round vision, with bigger windows and slimmer corner-posts "

There's a reason behind those bigger windows, of course: Greater safety. The more you see, the less chance of your having an accident.

Why defeat the auto-builders' purpose, and put your neck in a precarious spot? Keep your car windows clear! You wouldn't wear a blindfold to play golf, would you? Or a heavy veil to a movie Then why try to drive half-blind, when your very life depends on clear vision

PRE-CHRISTMAS FAMILY DINNER HELD AT SCHOOL SUN.

A pre-Christmas dinner and family gift exchange was held Sunday noon at the grade school dining room which was attended by a large crowd. Each family contributed to the dinner and all brought baskets of food for the big meal.

Miss Dorothy Meyer and friend, Miss Collette Lake of Manly; Mrs. Marie Wille and Darwin; Aaron Wille; Harold Rockow and family and Ron Yeakel and family.

All enjoyed a fine time and after dinner held their gift exchange.

NEW ROXY READY FOR OPENING

KANAWHA THEATRE TO OPEN FRIDAY, DEC. 1ST

Harry Pulley, manager of the Tall Corn Theatre of Kanawha, announces that he will again open the theatre under the new name of Roxy Theatre on Friday, December 1st when Betty Grable and Dan Dailey will appear in the feature "My Blue Heaven."

It will be recalled that the theatre was gutted by a disasterous fire last summer. The theatre has been completly renovated, enlarged and modernized and will be one of the nicest theatres in North Iowa.

The New Roxy is complete with new projectors and sound equipment, new sponge rubber cushioned seats, new air conditioning unit. The seats are "staggered" so that every person has a clear view of the screen. The theatre was enlarged and will now seat 350 people

Hank Ward Has Invented Simple Corn Unloader

Above is pictured Henry Ward, Klemme farmer, with a gadget he has made from old automobile parts assembled into a power take-off to attach to an elevator for unloading corn.

As shown in the picture all that is necessary when coming from the field with a load of corn, is to unhitch the tractor and run it up to the gadget so that the belt wheel on the tractor touches the tire on the new machine. The power is then transmitted through 3-1 gears to the power shaft which has already been hooked up to the elevator. There are no belts, no motors or other power needed and the machine works perfectly.

Those who want to see the new elevator drive can see it at Melvin Schaefer's farm this week where they are picking corn and using the unloader.

The new machine will be manufactured in Klemme and at present several are being made at the Christie & Langltiz garage.

Mr. Ward and Elmer Langlitz went to Des Moines last week to consult a patent attorney and get the machine protected for manufacture. Mr. Ward has already received a number of orders for making up a machine for farmers.

The picture shown above is the first machine made. Others that are being made will be "dressed up" and some parts eliminated.

4 H CLUB WINS MORE HONORS

BUSY MONTHS FOR LITTLE CATTLE FEEDERS 4-H CLUB

Fall months are busy months for everyone and same was true for the Little Cattle Feedrs 4-H Club.

They completed their show circuit for the year when five members, Dale Lage, Carroll Morris, Leonard Gobeli, and Doris and Galen Gruis exhibited at the Waterloo Fat Steer Show. Competition was very keen as the quality of the show rates close to the Interntional Livestock Show. Eighty to 100 head were shown per class and even though they didn't place in the prize money they all stood in upper third of their respective classes.

Dressing percentages returned from the packer buyers showed the calves yielded 63-65 percent and graded US double A.

The annual 4-H banquet held at the YMCA was well attended with 30 guests from the club. At this time seven members were awarded medals for outstanding work during the past year. Their leader, Gene Janssen received the silver 4-H lapel pin for 5 years leadership.

The Kiwanis Club of Mason City honors the top ten record books of county in each boys and girls club at a luncheon. To this luncheon six members were invited.

To carry out plans for 1951 a meeting was held at Ferdinand Lemke's. Program was planned and Lee Gruis was elected president, George Dirks, vice president, Pauline Kramer, secretary-treasurer and Ferdinand Lemke, reporter.

Doris Gruis, Dale Lage and Carol Morris have just returned from an enjoyable and educational expense-paid trip to Chicago. Besides seeing the sights of Chicago they attended the National 4-H Club Congress and the famed International Stock Show.

Each year we are breaking our own record. This year we are going "to make the best better." You've seen our exhibits, you've read about us so this year be one of us. Join the best club: The Little Cattle Feeders 4-H Club of Meservey.

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY AT WORK

NEIGHBORS PICKED THIRTY ACRES OF CORN FOR N. L. LEISNER

Farmer Had Been In Rochester Hospital For Two And One Half Weeks

The good neighbor policy was again demonstrated Saturday, November 18th when neighbors came to the N. L. Leisner farm 6 miles east of Klemme and picked and cribbed 30 acres of corn.

Mr Leisner had been in a Rochester hospital for two and one-half weeks following an operation on his back and was unable to do his farm work, but his good neighbors came to the rescue with pickers, wagons and plenty of help to do the corn picking job up in a hurry, and they all had lots of fun doing their good turn.

The ladies of the neighborhood also did their good turn by having a big dinner for the men at the Ed. Thieman home.

The men who turned out for the corn picking job were: Ed. Christians, Clarence Christians, Maurice Murray, Lester Neuberger, Bob Schulz, Billie Neuberger, Ray Bransen, Frank Hoyt, Lynford Back, Melvin Howard, and Jake Hess.

The ladies who prepared the big dinner wer Mrs. Ed. Christians, Mrs. Ed. Thieman, Mrs. Merlin Neuberger, Mrs. Clarence Christians, Mrs. Maurice Murray and Mrs. Lester Neuberger.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT THE METHODIST CHURCHES

The Klemme - Liberty Methodist Churches will participate in a state-wide Evangelistic Advance program from December 1st to the 10th. The local congregation are 2 of the 930 Iowa Methodist Churches sharing in the program under the leadership of the Bishop of the Des Moines Area, Charles W. Brashares.

Evangelistic visitors are being recruited from the local congregation to call on the unchurched and prospective members of the communities during the week of visitation. The Rev. E. Morris Egeland, pastor of the Klemme-Liberty Churches announces that two visiting ministers from out of the state will be on hand to help him in directing the local campaign and in conducting the evening preaching services the first week of December.

Included in the state-wide Methodist program are a series of 15 District Schools of Evangelism for the 640 Iowa pastors and some 1,000 guest preachers who will assist them. They will be held at district centers during the mornings of the week Dec. 1-8. The schools will train the pastors for the programs of visitation evangelism and also preaching services to be held in the participating Churches each evening. The school for the Algona District will be held at Algona.

A series of district youth rallies will be held throughout the state on Saturday, Dec. 2nd, and 18 mass meetings will climax the program on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 10th. The mass meeting for this area, scheduled for 3:30 in the afernoon will be held in the Algona High School. A feature of these meetings will be massed choirs of 200 and 300 voices. Bishop Brashares will speak to all of the meetings at the same time through a radio-telephone hookup. The preacher at the Algona mass meeting will be the Rev. Harry Denman, the dynamic Secreary of the Methodist General Board of Evangelism.

The special preaching service in the Klemme and Liberty Churches, with guest speakers in both pulpits, will be held next Sunday morning and evening, and Monday thru Friday evening of next week. All evening services will be at 8 o'clock and the Klemme Sunday morning service at 10 and the Liberty service at 11:15.

PUBLIC INVITED TO SEE PICTURE

The Film "Second Chance" To Be Shown At High School December 4th

The film "Second Chance" is a seventy-five minute, black and white, dramatic sound film produced by the Protestant Film Commission for the Evangelical and Reformed Church, the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., and the Congregational Christian Churches.

The film is done in the general area of stewardship and evangelism. It shows he dangers of spiritual apathy resulting from too great concern for the details of living. The film is truly inspiritational and challenges the veiwers, causing them to re-examine their commitment to Christ.

This film will be shown in the High School Auditorium on Monday, December 4. All members of the Church and the general public is cordially invited to attend.

This film is sponsored by the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church. An offering will be received.

A Year of Decision

THE YEAR 1950 will go down in recorded history as one of momentous decisions, the results of which only the future holds in the firm grip of destiny.

In the midst of the customary election confusion, Korean war news, inauguration of economic controls incident to military mobilization, military missions from twelve member nations of the North Atlantic Pact have been meeting here in Washington, causing little more than a ripple in this news-ridden city.

But behind these meetings, set in a lofty green and gold conference chamber of the inter-departmental auditorium on Constitution avenue, there is being settled the fate of nations and in all probability the destiny of the free world in a life and death struggle against Russian communism.

And in that struggle, the United States is committed to play a leading role in this new and dramatic fight for self-preservation, which in all likelihood may be the first step toward a centuries-old dream of a United States of Europe.

Grim visaged men sat in those historic meetings. These were men of war dedicated to band themselves together to keep the peace, if possible, but to pool their united strength against the common enemy—communism.

They were there from little Iceland, from our neighbor to the north, Canada, from the United Kingdom, from our ally France, from the Netherlands, from the Republic of Portugal, from Belgium, from tiny Luxemburg, from Italy, from Denmark, from the fiords of Norway and from our own United States — led by five-star Gen Geogre C. Marshall, secretary of defense.

Amid the popping of flash blubs, the white gleam of the kleig lights and the clicking of newsreel cameras, the tall scholarly looking Marshall, dignified, calm and speaking slowly, but firmly, welcomed the missions from the twelve countries Then the newsmen and cameramen were chased from the room and under the utmost security precautions the history-making conference got underway. What the results of this conference will mean to the folks in the home towns of the country of course, will be more money, more armaments and probably five to six divisions of American boys along this nation's first line of defense, which is now moved to the Elbe river.

* * *

First Epochal Event

But this is not the first epochal event of 1950—the first likely being the establishment of the economic union in Europe under the aegis of the Marshall Plan, the same Marshall who is now this nation's secretary of defense. And the second was the first army of the United Nations which victoriously prosecuted the Korean war under the leadership of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and which gained the United Nations tremendous prestige and a more united support from the free world than ever before.

* * *

Truman Speech Praised

Added to this is the fact that there is general agreement here that the speech of President Truman before the United Nations on October 24, will go down in history as one of the finest state papers of record—that his pronouncements on that occasion offered more light and more hope to troubled peoples throughout the world in the age-old fight for freedom and liberty. This is indeed the year of decision, in which it will be decided whether the world is free or shackled.

Void Hard to Fill

This reporter was one of those privileged to know and to talk often with Albert S. Goss, who died unexpectedly as he was about to deliver an address at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York. His passing from the Washington scene, as master of the National Grange will leave a void difficult to fill, for Mr Goss was one of those unselfish men, unselfish of his strength and ability, who literally gave his life to the cause of agriculture. He had a gift for organization, and to draw to him the loyalty and love of those surrounding him and his statesmanship on the agricultural field in Washington will be sorely missed.

FAO Having Trouble

The United Nations food and agricultural organization is having its troubles in session here Some are of the opinion that it is merely "growing pains", but there are others within the organization who would like to see FAO become only a statistical organization and play a role similar to the pre-war organization known as the international institute of agriculture The American delegation however, believes FAO should take action.

"The Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in his report on Chinese intervention in North Korea.

George Bernard Shaw, Irish author and wit, who died at the age of 94, for years had kept the world in a whirl with his use of words. Here are some Shavianisms: Success—"The secret of success is to offend the greatest number of people;" Truth— "The truth is the one thing nobody will believe;" Love—"Sir, there are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it."

KOREA:

Situation Serious

The war in Korea which seemed on the verge of complete victory for the United Nations forces took a dangerous turn with the invasion of Chinese Communists. Political observers termed the situation serious, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the U.N. commander.

According to available reports, between three and six Chinese divisions crossed the boundary between Manchuria and Korea and went into battle beside the North Koreans. The immediate military result was a withdrawal of U.N. troops south, in some instances as much as 50 miles.

MacArthur summed up the situation by reporting that the North Korean army was finished as a fighting force in October by the inflicting of 335,000 casualties. This included 135,000 Reds who were captured.

His communique on the situation said: "In the face of this victory of U.N. arms, the Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record . . . "

There are available in Manchuria about 300,000 troops— veterans of the Chinese civil war—which could be thrown into the battle immediately. Another 300,000 are believed to be either in Manchuria or North China.

The dangerous question now facing the free nations is what attitude the Chinese will take to MacArthur's charge that "alien Communists" have entered the war.

Whether the Communist world is prepared to take this colossal step is a secret, most probably locked in the depths of the Kremlin.

If the Communists are ready to take this risk it may mean the start of World War III and the end of the world as we have known it.

As ven states will gain a seats in the house of representatives; nine states will lose that many seats. The reapportionment will take effect in the congress convening in 1953, assuming the 435-seat total of the house is not changed in the meantime.

Congress could change the membership total of the house if it wished, but most observers believed this unlikely.

GERM-WARFARE:

Infected Rats Found

One of the most frightening and horrible discoveries of the Korean conflict was made public when the army disclosed it had found five thousand rats and mice innoculated with deadly plague and other germs in a secret laboratory near Pyongyang.

The army reported more than 5,000 rats and mice were inoculated with such diseases as bubonic plague, encephalitis, and eurirrawaddy fever immediately after the U.N. landing at Inchon.

Only 380 of the carriers were alive when discovered and 200 of these were mad from hunger. None were believed to have been turned loose or to have escaped from their sealed cages, though fleas from the dead animals might spread disease.

The project was reported under the supervision of a Russian woman scientist who fled northward after the landing.

The animals were kept in cages in groups of from two to 20. They were well fed and their furs sprayed with a chemical that encouraged the multiplication of fleas.

The discovery will provide a clue to the type of germ-warfare experimentation Communist countries might be carrying out and give the free nations of the world an indication as to what horrors the Communist will resort.

SPAIN:

Ban Is Lifted

After four years the United Nations had lifted its diplomatic ban against the Spanish government. The action accomplished two objectives:

1. It withdrew the 1946 recommendation to all U. N. members that they withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid.

2. It lifted the 1946 ban against admission of Spain to the U. N.'s specialized agencies.

The United States, however, will not return an ambassador to Madrid. President Truman said publicly recently he would not appoint one.

The U N.'s resolution left intact the condemnation of the Franco regime for its aid to the Axis during World War II.

The United States voted in favor of removing the boycott which was spearheaded by Catholic Latin American nations.

Revolutionist

Pedro Albizu Compos, Harvard graduate, leader of the Nationalist party that threw Puerto Rico in turmoil, was arrested after the attempt to assassinate President Truman. FBI agents were trying to connect him with the attempt on the President's life.

WORLD WAR III:

Thunder Can Be Heard

The capitals of the world trembled because many observers believed they heard the thunder of World War III on the horizon.

The thunder was caused by Communist China which adopted the attitude that "American intervention in Korea signalizes an intention to invade China."

All Communist dispatches and broadcasts hammered out the same recurrent themes:

1. The Chinese Communists will oppose "American imperialist aggressors" with concrete action.

2. American use of the atom bomb will mean retaliation in kind

Observers were further troubled because the Chinese evidently meant business. From three to six Chinese divisions had been identified in action in Korea against United Nations forces. They forced U. N troops to make withdrawals, and, from early reports, intended to continue their march south.

No one in his right mind can overlook the fact that China could be the strongest nation in the world. The Chinese Communist armies already are estimated at 5,000,000 men of whom 1,000,000 are in Manchuria Peiping recently announced organization of 5,500,000 armed militia, bringing the country's armed strength to more than 10,000,000.

Its industrial might never has been exploited, but could, within a few years, become one of the greatest in the world. China's war supplies at present are furnished in great part by Russia. There is no reason to believe they will be discontinued.

Observers believe that if China is determined to do so, she can take over Korea. It would mean a defeat for United Nations forces and the first phase of World War III The answer seems to be hidden in the brain of Mao Tse-tung, China's Communist leader.

Stewardship of Life

Lesson for December 3, 1950

"WHAT'S the death rate here?" asked the stranger. "Same as everywhere," retorted the native son,—"one to a person." Only one to a person, because there is only one life to a person. If you had nine lives or even two, you might afford to waste one (though it's doubtful). But with only one life you simply cannot afford to waste it. Of course you do waste it, in thousands of little ways; and some of these cannot be helped. But if a faucet leaks, that's no excuse for turning the water on full blast.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

God Wants You

WITH all due respects to the arrangers of these lessons, the lesson for last week and this one seem to be in the reverse order from what is logical. It is very doubtful whether any one ever understood stewardship of money who did not understand stewardship of life first. Now in almost any church you may hear people singing,

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

Very good; wonderful. Surely these are a devoted brotherhood! But wait, what is this coming down the aisle? A man with a collection plate! Now we shall see . . . There's a man putting in a quarter, and there's a prosperous-looking lady laying out a five dollar bill. (She bought a $50 cat last week.) But who is putting in his soul, his life, his all? Oh well, they didn't mean what they sang. But isn't it more than half hypocritical to sing one way and "give" another?

The whole realm of nature is not yours to give; but you do have a life; and God wants it. More than he wants what we have, he wants what we are. God created you; God redeemed you; as Paul says, "You are not your own, you were bought with a price."

* * *

Not for Preachers Only

A COMMON mistake is to think that a Christian has a choice between being a preacher and not being one. If he decides to give his life to God then he will be a preacher; otherwise he keeps his life for himself.

This is absurd, when you think about it. God has the first claim on every man's life. To be a Christian is to recognize this claim. He has not a bit more claim on the preacher or the missionary than he has on the grocer or the farmer's wife. Stewardship of life means recognizing God's right, it means living your life in partnership with God.

"Who sweeps a room as to Thy laws Makes that and the action fine," sang a poet long ago. God certainly does not want all his children to be preachers. But he does want his children to live AS his children; and that means stewardship of life.

* * *

Stewardship of Time

PICKING up again a thought from last week: Time is the raw material of life. Stewardship of life means stewardship of time. It means spending each day as if God had personally said to you: "Here are 24 fresh, new, unused hours. I shall want them back. You cannot keep them. I shall look at them to see what you have done with them."

What do you do with your time? Does it count for God or against him? And yet — how many Christians there are who if asked to do some kind thing, some simple act of mercy or friendliness, something to help some one else, something that may cost them a little trouble, —how many will say, "Sorry, I'm busy, haven't the time!"

* * *

Gift Without the Giver is Bare

JUST put together four sentences from the four sections of the Scripture for this week, and you have the whole business of stewardship of life in a nutshell: "Having gifts, let us use them." "First they gave themselves to the Lord." "Honor such men." "My God will supply every need of yours." No one ever used for God in the service of man any gift which God did not more than repay. The gift without the giver is bare— and so is the giver. But giver and gift, devoted in love to God and man, are rich indeed.

CLIPPING HELPS KEEP MILK CLEAN
Big Aid In Control Of Sediment In Milk Sold

It's easier to command higher prices for clean milk from cows that are clipped, says Bob Fincham, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Fincham points out that sediment is one of the main causes for milk being rejected at the plant. Keeping cows clean is one way to cut down on sediment and this can be done in part by clipping.

Three main area on the cow are responsible for much of the sediment in milk especially where cows are milked by hand. These areas include the thighs, udder and belly, Fincham says. The tail is another potential dirt threat.

Clip Udder

He says to clip the tailhead and tail down to the switch. Then clip the switch so it will clear the ground by 4 inches. Clip the udder thoroughly from the front to the rear attachment.

Next move to the belly and hocks, Fincham says, clipping clean these parts as well as the area behind a line drawn from the milk well over the thurl to the base of the tailhead which has been previously clipped.

A clipped cows doesn't guarantee clean milk, but it does the job of producing clean milk a lot easier. It's a good idea to brush cows before each milking to remove all loose dirt. And it also takes clean utensils and good straining to produce a clean product, the extension dairyman concludes.

HOGS TO BE UP IN PRICE AND NUMBER IN 1951

More meat will be produced in 1951 with the average consumption in the nation expected to ri se to 148 pounds per person, according to the economic outlook for the coming year.

Meat consumption has risen from an average of 134 pounds per person for the 4 years from 1937 through 1941 to 145 pounds per person in 1950, Hancock County Extension Director, Paul Henderson, points out.

Pork production is expected to be up in 1951 and slightly more beef will be on the market. Poultry meat supplies will remain about the same, while lamb production will be down, according to reports of studies by economists and government officials who recently met in Washington at the twenty-eighth annual Outlook Conference.

While this fall marks one of the largest market movements of hogs on record a 5 to 7 percent increase in hog numbers is likely in 1951. Pork production in 1951 may be the second largest in history with more hogs carrying heavier weights than were common this year.

Hog prices are expected to average higher in 1950 even with a larger spring pig crop. However, record 1950 June farrowings will limit the price for the coming spring even through prices will be somewhat higher than last spring.

Henderson says the economist think the corn hog ratio will be a little more favorable in '51 with the rise in hog prices being greater than that of corn.

NEED 6-ACRE WOODLOT ON AVERAGE FARM

It takes from 1,200 to 1,500 board feet of lumber each year for the average farm, reports Dick Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College.

He says an acre of well-managed woodlot will produce about 300 board feet per year. This means that about 5 acres of good woodlot is needed to supply enough lumber for the farm.

Fence posts aren't figured in on that. The extension forester says a farm needs about 80 posts per year. This figures out to around 400 board feet and would require more than an acre extra.

Campbell figures a saving of $110 per thousand board feet for farmers who grow their own lumber rother than buy it.

Farmers with woodlots will want to decide now on their lumber needs for 1951. Then they can saw the lumber during the winter and stack and store it before spring work begins. Better lumber is obtained from logs that are sawed up as soon as the trees are cut.

With green boards it's important to leave plenty of air space on all sides of each board, and make sure the lumber is off the ground.

"FREEDOM FLAME" BALLOON FOUND IN WISCONSIN

Traveling as far North as the natural gas "Freedom Flame" was a "Freedom Flame" day toy ballon released at Garner about 1:30 A. M. Friday.

The balloon traveled almost as fast too. Borne by a strong southwest wind, it had gotten 75 miles north of Madison, Wis. by dark.

Before the little orange balloon was released, a tag in a self-addressed envelope was attached to it by H. O. Sandberg of the Central States Electric Company. The tag asked the finder to send it back to Garner.

Sure enough, Sandberg received the envelope, postmarked at 8 P. M. Friday, Richland Center, Wis. The tag was signed by a person named Allan Holzman who said the balloon was found near Yuba, Wis., which is almost directly east of the Iowa-Minnesota line.

Husks Make Up Part Of Picked Corn Weight

A load of ear corn with a lot of husks may contain less corn by weight than some farmers might guess, says Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

Reports from Iowa State College agricultural engineers indicate that a load of snapped corn generally contains 5 percent by weight of husks. The average husk percentage at the national corn picking contest averaged two-thirds of 1 percent. That leaves a big margin of doubt for farmers who are marketing corn by measure, or who pay for picking by measure, Henderson points out. Five percent by weight of husks in a standard wagon box would mean over 70 pounds of husks per load. That would be for snapped corn, of course, Henderson reminds farmers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Dutheridge Will Spend Winter In South

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Dutheridge left Sunday for the sunny south where they will spend the winter. They are returning to Tampa, Florida, where they spent last winter. They took their trailer house with them and their address will be "Municipal Trailer Camp, Tampa, Florida."

They enjoy being in Florida much more than in some of the other states they have tried.

Ted was anxious to get back to Tampa where he enjoys playing "Shuffle Board." Ted is quite an expert at the game and belongs to a regular team which has won a lot of matches.

METHODIST YOUTH RALLY DECEMBER 2nd

A delegation of young people from the Klemme-Liberty Methodist Churches will attend a great district Youth Rally at Algona on Saturday evening, Dec. 2nd. The meeting is one of 14 being held simultaneously in as many cities throughout the state.

These youth rallies are a part of the current Des Moines Area Evangelistic Advance being conducted in all Iowa Methodist Churches, under the leadership of Bishop Charles W. Brashares, head of the 240,000 Methodists of Iowa.

General theme for the rallies will be "Christ Calls Youth." A large youth choir will sing and Bishop Brashares will speak to all of the rallies at the same time by telephone-radio hookup. There will also be a challenging address by an outstanding guest speaker from out of the state.

The youth rallies will usher in a week of intensive evangelistic effort in Iowa's 930 Methodist Churches. The week's program will include morning and evening services next Sunday, and evening services, Monday through Friday of next week, and vistitation by laymen. Two visiting pastors will be coming to this community to preach at the services in the Klemme and Liberty Methodist Churches and to assist the laymen in their visitation.

Pfc. Melvin Ell Wins Honors At Parris Island Marine Base

Josephine Ell of Panama, Nebraska writes the Times of an item that will be of interest to our readers, regarding her nephew Pfc. Melvin Ell.

Pfc. Ell was recently graduated from the 54th Clerk Typist Class at Parris Island, N. C. with a mark of 97.82 to win 3rd high in a group of 28 who completed the six weks course.

Pfc. Ell is the son of Mr. and Mrs Ernest P. Ell of Panama, Nebraska. He enlisted in the U. S. Marines in May 1950 and took his boot training at San Diego, Cal. He has been stationed at Parris Island, S. C. since September. He is now a Clerk Typist in the battalion headquarters office.

SUGGEST WAYS TO KEEP PIPES FROM FREEZING

Frozen water pipe are the cause of a lot of trouble and expensive repairs on Iowa farms every winter. That's why measurers taken to prevent them from freezing more than pay for the time and effort spent when sub-zero temperatures set in.

Corroll Worlan, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, lists several devices that help keep water pipes from freezing. Most of them are relatively easy to make and don't require any expensive materials.

If there is plenty of clearance around a pipe, it's best to build a wooden housing over it. This can then be filled with insulation. Electric heat bulbs placed in the housing will also do an effective job of keeping the frost out during the cold nights ahead.

Exposed drain pipes present a special problem. Worlon suggests slipping regular drainage tile over these and then filling the space between with corn cobs. This should make the pipes frost-proof and give the water a chance to drain without freezing.

Pipes can also be covered with plastic tape containing a thermostatically controlled heating element. This is a little more expensive but does an effective job.

Fatal Burns

DEAN OF OPERETTA

Romberg Has Composed Over Seventy Operettas and Musicals

Sigmund Romberg, whose life story soon will be shown on the world's movie screens, is the kind of man who makes "highbrows" unhappy.

He insists he is a "middle brow" composer and that he is happy being just that For a man who bears the impressive label of Dean of American operetta, it is a startling admission.

"Most Americans have middle brow tastes in music. What's wrong with that?" he says in support of his statement that he'd rather write melodies with a sentiment and a tune that people can remember and whistle than heroic arias that almost no one can sing without weeks of hectic practice.

Since Romberg exiled himself to America 43 years ago to escape his parents' determination to make a bridge builder out of him, he is quite content to have the same tastes as most of the rest of the people in the United States

"Besides," he asks, "what highbrow achieves enough importance during his own life to merit a Hollywood movie treatment of his career while he is still around to see it?"

Sigmund Romberg, dean of American operetta, who has composed more than 70 state and screen operettas and musicals. His most popular include "Maytime," "Student Prince" and the "Desert Song."

Romberg will be able to see it as soon as Hollywood finishes the moxie it is now making.

* * *

SIGMUND ROMBERG really might have built some beautiful bridges if his parents had their way and he had become a construction engineer. But instead, he has turned out more than 70 stage and screen operettas and musicals, among them standards like "Maytime," "Student Prince" and the "Desert Song," one or the other of which is still touring somewhere at almost any time. He has written a magnificent total of 2,000 songs like "Lover, Come Back to Me."

And he isn't finished yet!

"There is lots more music to be written—lots of it in me—and I am writing it," he explains.

Right now, he is composing another musical which he expects to have on Broadway this winter.

Some composers compose their songs on a piano, some in their head. Romberg composes most of his music on a Hammond organ, so that he can get the effect of the entire orchestra as he tests a melody on the Hammond. He used to do it on a pipe organ, sitting in solitary majesty before the gigantic instrument. When the Hammond organ was invented, he got one of the first made. Since then he has been using it to turn out the kind of music that fits in with America's heart beat.

IT WAS IN VIENNA that he got his first formal music education. Finishing his schooling in Vienna, he had to serve his term in the army When that was finished, the crisis came. His father, though very musical himself, was determined his son was going to be an engineer and build bridges. The peace maker in the dispute that arose was his mother who suggested that he spend a year in America before making a decision. America had a lot of fine bridges, she figured, and maybe her son would learn to love bridges over rivers more than musical bridges. It didn't work. Romberg came to the United States, went to work packing pencils in a pencil factory for a brief period and then got a job as a pianist in a restaurant he had stopped at to satisfy his craving for Hungarian goulash. That was the beginning.

The next steps in his career came in rapid succession. He organized his own orchestra, played at a fashionable New York restaurant and began composing in earnest. He never got around to thinking of the bridges again. Let the highbrows build the bridges, he decided. Instead, he wrote enough music to make him probably the most prolific of the big-time composers in the theater.

Irene Dunne handled the difficult impersonation of Queen Victoria in "The Mudlark" so satisfactorily that the picture was chosen for a command performance in London. But wait till you see what happens to her in RKO's "Never a Dull Moment". She falls into a haystack, sets a stove on fire and tries to cook a cougar, all incidents gleaned from the life of Kay Swift, on whose book the picture is based. However, she needed no elaborate make-up. For "The Mudlark" she said, "They covered my face with strips of plastic lastex so I doubt whether my own daughter would recognize me". And made her a heavy-set woman with several double chins!

Samuel Goldwyn will come up with a re-make of "The Winning of Barbara Worth", remembered as the picture which launched Gary Cooper's career, in 1926. This time Dana Andrews gets the starring role. And it will be produced in semi-documentary style, since it deals with the trials of desert reclamation in the west. But the love story won't be ignored.

Gov. Dan E. Garvey of Arizona has agreed to appear in a walk-on role in Pine and Thomas' "The Last Outpost", being filmed near Tucson. It has not yet been decided whether the governor will portray a Yankee or a Confederate soldier. In either case, he will be given the grade of corporal. Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming and Noah Beery, Jr., head the cast.

THE FICTION CORNER

NEW NEIGHBORS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE Whitney's living room faced on a court. Across the court were the windows of another apartment. Occasionally Paul Whitney, relaxed on his couch, could see people moving around there. After a day or two he decided that the occupants were a young, childless couple who spent a good deal of time at home.

3-Minute Fiction

"I'd like to get to know them," Paul confided to his wife.

Mrs. Whitney sighed. "I would, too. We've been here a month now and haven't met a soul. Do you suppose I ought to go over and call?"

Paul shook his head doubtfully "I wouldn't—not without some good excuse. You know how apartment dwellers are. They might think we were imposing." He glanced across the court. "They have a much better apartment than ours."

"Better?"

"Why, it's obviously their living room we can look into and, if you'll notice, there are windows on both sides."

Mrs. Whitney followed her husband's gaze. Without effort she could look into their neighbors' living room and see the window on the wall opposite. "That's so," she admitted.

Mrs. Whitney went into the kitchen and Paul rose and strolled idly toward the window of his own living room. On the chance of being observed, he pretended to examine a potted plant on the sill.

Surreptitiously he glanced across the court, and was shocked to see the head and shoulders of a man framed in the window on the far side of their neighbors' living room.

He called his wife, and, standing well back so as not to be observed, they peered across the court. But the figure in the window on the far side and vanished.

"You're positive you saw someone?" Mrs. Whitney asked.

"You're positive you saw someone?" Mrs. Whitney asked.

"Positive!" Paul affirmed. "Ought we to notify the police?"

"I wouldn't. Whoever it is is gone, and perhaps the police wouldn't believe us. We'd appear ridiculous."

TWO evenings later Paul again saw the peeping Tom. He was standing in the same position, and sight of the man at the window of their neighbor's apartment gave him the same unexpected shock.

"I'm going to do something about it. Sooner or later the chap will conjure enough courage to break his way in," Paul said.

"Let's go over there and warn the people, tell them what we saw and then let them do as they like about it." She hesitated. "Perhaps we can strike up an acquaintance."

THEY CROSSED to the neighboring apartment and knocked. A pleasant-faced woman opened the door.

"Are you Mrs. Phelps?" Mrs. Whitney asked. The woman nodded and Mrs. Whitney said: "We're Mr. and Mrs. Whitney from across the court. We—"

"Come right in! Frank and I were thinking of calling on you."

The Whitneys entered and were greeted cordially by Mr. Phelps "I'm afraid," said Paul, "that we came on rather an unpleasant mission." And he explained what they had seen.

Mr. Phelps looked puzzled. "There's something wrong here. Would you mind stepping into the living room?" They followed him in and he pointed toward the far wall. "You see we have no windows on that wall.

He broke off as Mrs. Whitney gasped. "Why, it wasn't a window at all! It was that mirror! You see, it hangs where a window might be, and faces our apartment. Paul Whitney, it was your own reflection you saw! Standing near the flower pot, you saw yourself in the mirror, and it appeared that some one else was peering in at the Phelpses!"

Paul's jaw dropped. He swallowed, grinned and looked sheepish. But the Phelpses thought it was a grand joke, and urged their new neighbors to spend the evening.

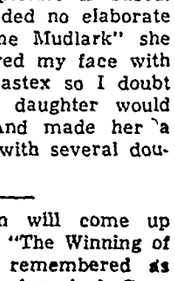
Wise Boys Learn Impossible Sometimes Can Happen

By BILLY ROSE

Last night at Lindy's a bunch of us were discussing what, for want of a better term, I'll call the inevitability of the impossible.

"The most improbable yarn I ever heard," said Deems Taylor, "is the one about a missionary named Renault who was captured in 1948 by a tribe of cannibals in French Equatorial Africa.

"According to a report in the files out at the U.N., just as they were about to roast him over a fire, shish-kebob style, the missionary fell to his knees and asked the Lord to have mercy on his servant, Renault. And when the cannibal chief heard the name, he untied him and told him to go about his business.



Billy Rose

"No, it wasn't the prayer that did the trick—it seems that six months before, they had cooked and eaten another gent named Renault and he had turned out to be tough and tasteless."

"I KNOW AN equally implausible story," I piped up. "The one about the clerk in Tacoma, Washington, who was handed five thousand dollars to buy insurance for a bridge that was under construction. The fellow had never stolen a nickel in his life, but this was one temptation he couldn't stand off—what in the name of the five Ringling Brothers could happen to a bridge?

"Suiting misdeed to thought, the clerk went to Reno and blew in the whole five grand on a couple of gals, and then, the night before he was due to start back, the Mayor of Tacoma phoned and wanted to know about the insurance. It seemed that the bridge—the famous Galloping Gertie of the newsreels—had come apart at the seams and fallen into the gorge."

"THE BELIEVE-IT-OR-NOT that tops them all is the one about Charles Coghlan," said Eugene Burr who writes the theatre pieces for Playbill.

"Charles who?" I asked.

"Coghlan," said Burr, "the actor who used to play opposite Lily Langtry back in the last century. When he was 50, he bought himself a farm on Prince Edward Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and quit the stage for what he thought was good. A few years later, however, Forbes-Robertson made him a very attractive offer to play Mercutio in a touring production of 'Romeo and Juliet,' and while Coghlan hated to leave the island, he couldn't afford to turn the offer down. In one season he'd earn enough to be able to live comfortably the rest of his life.

"When his neighbors came down to the boat to see him off, the actor assured them that, come heaven or high water, he'd return when his tour was ended. And he did—but it took both heaven and high water, and in that order, to arrange it.

"Heaven got into the act shortly after the tour started—in Galveston he suffered a heart attack and died, and was buried in a cemetery not far from the sea. The high water came a year later, September 8, 1900, when a tidal wave hit Galveston, drowned six thousand people and washed away a good part of the waterfront, including most of the coffins in the cemetery.

"Some months after the disaster, a fisherman on Prince Edward Island went down to the beach one morning to inspect his nets, and found a coffin which had washed up on the sands.

"On it was a brass plate with the name 'Charles Coghlan'—the actor, with an assist from the Gulf Stream, had made good his promise to return."

Let Turkey Take a Second Bow.
(See Recipes Below)

Turkey Topics

MR. GOBBLER can score several triumphs after the big feast is over if he's dressed with the proper trimmings. Even the smaller turkeys which are purchased for small families have much good eating on them, and certainly the large ones do, too, even though you may have had the whole big family around the table.

As long as the bird can still be sliced, serve the succulent slices just as they come from the bird, with salad or for sandwiches. Then when you get to the smaller pieces, put them in delicious pie, creamed dishes, and casseroles

* * *

Turkey Pie

(Serves 6)

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 5 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Few grains pepper
- 2½ cups milk
- 1½ cups diced cooked turkey
- ½ cup cooked lima beans
- ½ cup cooked whole kernel corn
- Cheese Pastry

Melt butter in saucepan, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add milk, cook until thick, stirring constantly Add turkey, lima beans and corn; heat. Pour into 5 individual casseroles and top with cheese pastry cut in turkey shapes. Bake in a hot oven (425°) for about 12 minutes, or until pastry is lightly browned.

Turkey Pilaf

(Serves 6-8)

- 7 tablespoons cooking oil
- 4 mushrooms, finely sliced
- 3 tablespoons finely shredded green pepper
- 1 tablespoon tomato puree
- 1 cup light cream or top milk
- ¼ cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 2 medium onions, sliced
- 1 cup raw rice
- 3 cups meat stock or bouillon
- ¼ cup blanched, fried almonds

Heat three tablespoons of cooking oil in heavy pan. Add sliced mushrooms and cook over fairly high heat for two minutes. Add green pepper and tomato puree. Stir in the light cream or top milk and sour cream very slowly. Add mustard, one teaspoon salt, the pepper and mix well. Add diced, cooked turkey. Heat two tablespoons of the cooking oil in a heavy skillet and brown sliced onion until crisp. Add browned onion to turkey mixture.

To prepare rice, heat one tablespoon of the oil in a heavy pan, add rice and remaining teaspoon of salt. Cover with meat stock or bouillon and bring to boil. Cover pan with waxed paper, then lid. Bake rice in moderate oven (350°) for 25 minutes or until tender. Mound rice on a serving dish and pour hot turkey mixture over Scatter almonds that have been fried in the remaining cooking oil, over the top.

Cheese Pastry

- 1 cup flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅓ cup butter
- ¼ cup grated cheese
- 2 to 3 tablespoons water

Sift together flour and salt. Cut in butter and cheese until consistency is like coarse cornmeal. Add water, mixing lightly with fork and form into ball; chill. Roll out and cut with round or turkey shaped cutter.

Turkey Corn Casserole

(Serves 4-6)

- 2 cups cubed, cooked turkey or chicken
- ½ cup finely chopped celery
- 1 12-ounce can (1½ cups) whole kernel corn
- ¼ cup chopped pimiento
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- ¼ cup fat
- 3 tablespoons enriched flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup turkey stock
- 2 well-beaten eggs
- Green-pepper rings
- ⅔ cup buttered bread crumbs
- ¼ cup grated American cheese

Arrange turkey, celery, corn and pimiento in greased baking dish. Cook onion in hot fat until golden. Add flour and salt; blend. Gradually add stock; cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Quickly stir sauce into eggs. Pour over turkey mixture. Top with green-pepper rings. Mix crumbs with cheese; sprinkle over top. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes.

Bones, Skin and Scraps for Rich Stock

To prepare broth, crack the bones if possible. For the cracking use a steak pounder, a mallet or a pair of pliers. If you can't crack them go ahead anyway for you'll still get a good broth. Place bones in a sauce pan. Add water to cover, 1 small onion, a carrot, a few ribs of celery, and soup herbs if you have them. Simmer 2 or 3 hours. Strain, cool promptly, then store in coldest part of refrigerator.

Cream of Turkey Soup

(Serves 4)

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1½ cups turkey stock
- ½ cup cream or top milk
- ⅓ to ½ cup chopped cooked turkey meat
- Chopped parsley

Prepare a sauce of the butter, flour and stock. Set over hot water, add stock and meat. Heat. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve very hot garnished with parsley.

Turkey in Toast Cups

(Serves 4-6)

Combine one 10½-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup and ½ cup top milk; blend; heat; add 1½ cups diced, cooked turkey and ½ cup chopped canned pimento. Add some of hot sauce to 1 egg yolk; stir into remaining hot sauce. Heat thoroughly over low heat. Serve in toast cups.

One-half cup of seedles raisins added to your favorite recipe for cranberry sauce adds interest to the relish. This is especially good with pork.

A good sauce to serve with asparagus, frozen or canned, is to make a thin white sauce. Pour over the vegetables and garnish with riced, hard-cooked egg.

Good to serve with chilled vegetable juice as a first course is a thin slice of ham spread with well seasoned cream cheese and rolled, then fastened with a toothpick

Some Complaints

"MY WIFE GETS A COLD, and the tip of her nose gets red, and it's that way all winter," a man wrote me, some years ago. "She never cures it up, and you'd think she was rather proud of it if you could hear her say, 'here's my cold again.' Now our little Sheila is four, and Gwen is beginning on her. 'I believe she's going to have my colds every winter,' she tells people. Doesn't it ever go through her head that a man hates that sort of thing?"

"Lottie talks poor," another husband also wrote me some time ago. I have saved a dozen of these letters from men, all about those apparent trifles that really do have an important effect on married happiness. "Lottie talks poor," writes Fred Green. "We aren't poor, not by any standards that would hold anywhere else in the world. We own our home and most of our car and a third of our television set, and we have all the rest of it, refrigerator and radio and telephone and gas stove. Of course, we haven't as much money as we'd like, who has? But that eternal cheerful 'well, we're poor folks, and fur coats and trips to Florida aren't for us. Don't talk as if you were as rich as the Smiths, Fred, because you know we can't afford things.'

"You get darned tired of it!" this letter ends gloomily.

A third letter is from a man who married a pretty wife.

Shabby at Home

"Beauty is Fern's business," Kane Choate writes. "She never lets up. The only people who see my wife looking pretty now are outsiders. At home she's always plastered and oiled and has her hair done up in little snails, dripping on her wrapper. She always wears shabby washable things around the house because lipstick and paint and nail polish get on them She shoves one side of her face up at me to kiss when I get home and says, 'don't wrinkle me.'

". . . don't wrinkle me . . ."

"When we go out she looks swell, and I'm proud of her. But a man likes a pretty, neat, comfortable-looking woman in his home, too."

Seven other letters, among those I have been collecting over the years, complain of untidiness and sloppiness at the breakfast table, on the part of busy wives and mothers, but for these criticisms I have less sympathy, for only a woman knows what that pre-office, pre-school scramble can be.

Then there's the husband whose wife cleans her fingernails in public places; when they are lunching together downtown, for instance. This is most irritating and embarrassing for all present

"I've gotten used, and I guess most fellows have," says this letter, "to her taking out her compact and doing up her face and her lips right at the table. But then when she slowly and comfortably goes at her nails, somehow it makes me sick. Jean and I share law offices together, and she is a great pal, but all this nail-cleaning and after-lunch tooth-picking in public kind of goes against me."

Ruins His Jokes

Another husband represents a large class of the domestically ill-treated. He appears to be a real man's man, president of more than one club and a general favorite. He says his devoted, loved little Lucy spoils all social occasions by hurriedly putting in the point of his jokes before he reaches them.

"Lucy has no more sense of humor than our seven-months-old son," he writes. "When I get started and everyone begins to laugh, she puts in these little unamused comments, or reminds me that it happened on a Saturday and not a Tuesday, or she corrects my grammar. What the dickens can a man do when he begins to talk, and his wife says 'that is funny, Dan, but I've heard it so often,' or 'make this one short, dear, other people like to talk'? And it isn't," the aggrieved Dan finishes, "as if she contributed anything Getting anything out of my wife is like getting the cork out of a bottle when its way down in."

Philip Merkey's wife, Beryl, had an international education, and she has great fun embarrassing Philip by showing off her French, Italian and German whenever she gets a chance. He writes that she will use words no one else in the group can understand, pretending she can't quite remember the American word, and that on occasion she bursts into gushes of Italian—her father, a clerk in an American Scientific Institute, was stationed in Italy for some years. This is pure affectation and shows egotism.

Football Is Hard to Officiate

By GRANTLAND RICE

Lefty James, the very able coach at Cornell, let out a lusty squawk about football officials and the penalties imposed against his Cornell team in the Harvard game.

Grantland Rice

Lefty James is a first class coach and a first class sportsman. He was merely giving public utterance to what so many other coaches said before in private conversation

What they all overlook in this—football is not a game that lends itself to the operation of officials. You have 22 men on the field, widely scattered, all over the lot, any one of them quite willing to face the chance of any penalty that might help win the game.

As Hurry-up Yost once said to me - "There are at least one or two penalties incurred on every play in football. There are off sides There is holding, secret or otherwise. There is always some form of rule breaking All the officials can do is watch for penalties that affect the play directly.

In the course of one season after another, I have seen penalties that changed the course of four or five games a year. I have seen many penalties that were not called but that directly affected the turn of the game These were shown in motion pictures later Some of them were glaring infractions but unseen by the officials

It so happened that I worked as an official in the south for many years as referee, umpire and field judge. It was then I made up my mind that football was not a game that could be handled efficiently on the field. I have never changed my mind since.

No pair of eyes doubled and redoubled can follow all that takes place Pass interference alone could drive any set of officials stark raving mad I have shown slow motion pictures of such plays to many officials whose rulings in the game were at variance with the camera portrayal They were, of course, guessing

'Backfield in motion" is another problem that keeps coaches and officials in a frantic state of mind. It is a split-second decision and the human eye isn't equipped for split seconds The hand—and the foot—are both quicker than the human eye Which is never too fast. Otherwise magicians would starve to death. Yet the official must work with his eyes, which are not capable of handling the job.

* * *

Football the Toughest

Football is by all odds the toughest of all games for any set of officials to handle.

Baseball is a holiday in comparison. The umpire today—or four of them—knows where to be and there can only be two men involved right under his nose—the runner and the fielder. But with 22 men scattered all over the field—from 50 to 100 yards apart—all with a little honest larceny in their hearts—no set of officials could cover this ground.

But the main fault is with the structure of football itself, not with the officials. No set of officials in any game works harder, trains harder, or tries harder to handle an impossible job. It is an impossible job on many occasions where the human eye falls down completely. In sitting up in a press box above the field, you frequently see plays clearly that officials on the field must miss with their visions shut off by intervening players.

The worst place to see a football game is from the bench. The level view is impossible. That is why scouts, helping to direct the play, move to some elevated spot and use their phones from above the field. Football officials, however, work on this level range. One official, working above the field, could see twice as much on many occasions as those working on the ground.

Coaches should understand the fault isn't with the officials. It is with the game itself. And the coaches could do a better job in training their men to play the game by the rules, which so few coaches do. Off side, holding, starting too quickly in the backfield are rule infractions, that right coaching could reduce.

Jinx in Sports

Stan Musial, recently voted the second most valuable player in the National League for 1950, can hit between .300 and .400 in any park in the majors—except Forbes Field, which is next door to his home town of Donora, Pa. Most years the finest batsman in the National League is happy if he can top 200 at Pittsburgh, his absolute, three-ring, gold-plated jinx. The following afternoon at Ebbets Field, Musial may be on base everytime

Harry Breechen has won thirty times in his forty games with the Chicago Cubs. All he has to do is throw his glove on the field and the Cubs are down. Same was true of Art Nehf, the left-hander who could always beat the Pirates Through four seasons Nehf defeated Pittsburgh thirteen times in a row before they broke the spell in 1922. Nehf was the main factor in depriving the Pirates of the pennant in 1921. They had a lead of seven and a half games going into New York in mid-August, but the Giants took them five straight.

How to FIX-IT

BY HAROLD ARNETT

GLASS RACK A GLASS RACK OF REMOVABLE DOWELS IN SLANTED HOLES SAVES DRAIN BOARD SPACE AND DRIES GLASSES QUICKLY.

Here's a way to stretch your Christmas money and please your friends at the same time! The cigarette smokers on your list will welcome a carton of cool, mild Camels. And to the pipe smokers and men who "roll their own"—give a one pound tin of Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco. When you give Camels or Prince Albert you're giving the very best in smoking enjoyment. Mild, full-flavored Camels are made of the world's choicest tobaccos, expertly blended — a good reason why more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette! And mellow Prince Albert is America's largest-selling pipe tobacco. What's more, both Camels and Prince Albert are already gift-wrapped in gay, red and green packages. All you do is fill-in your personal greeting on the built-in card. No fuss. No bother. Save time, save energy, save money. Give Camels and Prince Albert — the perfect Christmas gifts for smokers!

Without Painful Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

FARM COSTS HIGHER IN 1951

Hancock County farmers can expect higher farm costs in 1951. In fact, some items may be the highest on record, according to outlook estimates made for the County Extension Director Paul Henderson by Iowa State College.

While farm machinery supplies will be adequate for 1951, the "buyer's market" for farm machinery may be out of the picture for some time. List prices may be higher and most dealers won't be in a position to make attractive offers on trade-ins.

Farm labor will be scarce and more expensive in 1951. The economists report that specialized farmers already have labor problems, with the draft and high paying industrial jobs competing with farmers for workers.

They also suggested that farmers order insecticides and fungicides early. Supplies of farm chemicals are considered ample for 1951, but prices are expected to be slightly higher.

Fertilizer is another item that may be due for a price increase next spring, although price relationships will still favor continued use of fertilizer. Demand for fertilizer is expected to be heavy next spring, especially with the South planting a larger cotton acreage in 1951.

On the brighter side of the cost picture, the economist point to the plentiful supplies of legume and grass seed. Brome, timothy and clover seed supplies are large and alfalfa seed will continue to be plentiful. Demand for seed may be lower than in 1950, too.

Lumber may be another of the few farm needs that won't advance in price next year. Economists explain that lumber supplies are ample and tighter credit controls may cut down new home construction—a big source of demand for lumber. However, metal building materials will be scarce and their cost is expected to be higher by next fall.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

If the term "Shopper Stopper" leaves you cold—well, you've got the idea of the above picture.

A Christmas-shopping pedestrian may be walking in a winter wonderland, borne up by Yuletide spirit until he's run down by the "Shopper Stopper"—the December motorist who drives as if it were June—and the pedestrian is left temporarily or permanently cold.

The "Shopper Stopper" forgets that ice and snow, though pretty on a Christmas card, are an ugly menace on streets and highways. The "Shopper Stopper" ignors early darkness, frost on car windows, and other visibility factors, until he's delivered a Christmas gift of a cast or a casket to a package-laden pedestrian.

"Christmas shoppers, loaded with bundles and hurrying from store to store, too often forgets to be careful," warns Pearl W. McMurry, Iowa Commissioner of Public Safety. "Then, too, children are out of school during Christmas holidays, another reason why December is the high-accident month of the year. Seventy-six pedestrians have already been killed in Iowa this year, compared with only 57 in the first 11 months of last year. And that's too many already."

Your Iowa Safety Congress joins with Commissioner McMurry in urging you to drive safely during the crowded Christmas season. Don't make any family replace its Christmas wreath with a funeral wreath.

PARENTS OF MRS. GERALD KOERNER CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. George Rule of Dow City celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Thursday, November 30th with open house to hosts of friends and relatives.

The decorations were carried out with yellow and white chrysanthemums and lighted yellow candles. A three-tiered wedding cake frosted with yellow roses, served as the center-piece at the serving table.

Mrs. H. G. Scott of Dow City, only sister of Mrs. Rule, poured, and Mrs. Gerald Koerner of Klemme, daughter of the Rules, served. Another daughter, Mrs. Jesse Gregory of Lincoln, Nebr., was in charge of the guest book, while Mrs. Frank Rule, also of Lincoln, had charge of the gifts. A friend of the couple sang, "Silver Threads Among The Gold."

A son, Vaugn Rule of Long Beach, California, and another daughter, Mrs. Lester Helm of Yakima, Washington, were unable to attend the celebration.

WE THANK OUR SPONSORS FOR CHICAGO TRIP

May we, the Hancock County's delegates to the International Livestock Show, take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation to those who made the trip possible. We all had a swell time and believe this to be one of the highlights in all our years of 4-H work We not only got a glimpse of the 4-H projects that every boys and girl would like to have but we have an idea of how other people live in the huge, crowded but very busy city. The operation of the Grain Exchange was very interesting and also it gave a clearer idea of how the Markets for our grain out here are established. There were many other highlights but we would rather say, come on 4-Her's this is something to shoot for, and thanks a million to the following sponsors: Elmer Urich, Goodrich and Bethke and Hancock Co-op. Oil Co., all of Garner; Cooper and Knutson, Farmers State Bank of Kanawha, Gorton and Gabel, Brummund and Raber, Miller and Brunsen and Farmers Elevator all of Kanawha.

Vic Huneman Gets Patent On Endgate Unloader

BOARD PUSHES CONTENTS TO REAR OF BOX INTO ELEVATOR

Is Simple Device Operated With Cables And Motor Or Tractor

Victor C. Hueneman, farmer residing on Highway 69 three miles north of Klemme, in Liberty township, was recently issued a patent by the United States Patent Office, on an unloading endgate which he invented for use on a truck or wagon box.

Mr. Hueneman's device is simple and inexpensive to build and is effective for unloading grain, ensilage, chopped hay etc. It saves time and labor in unloading.

For unloading, the endgate is first located in the front of the box before the box is loaded. It then operates by pushing the contents of the box backward, or to the rear of the box, emptying into a hopper on the elevator conveyor and thus distributed to the desired bin. The endgate, which operates from the front to the rear, is moved backward with a mechanism of pulleys and cables and power is supplied by a motor or tractor.

Mr. Hueneman applied for the patent nearly 2 years ago, through his attorney, B. C. Berge at Garner.

FUNERAL MONDAY FOR GOODELL LUMBERMAN

Miller officiating. Burial was in Glidden, former home of the deceased. Survivors include the widow, 4 daughters, 10 grandchildren and a brother Harry of Cedar Rapids.

WE ARE SORRY SOME NAMES WERE LEFT OUT OF STORY

In the write-up in The Times last week about the neighbors who gathered at the Norman Leisner farm to pick his corn crop, five names were left out due to some error.

The following names should also have appeared as assisting with the work: Bud Neuberger, Ed. Thieman, Bill Neuberger, Walt Neuberger and Emmet Hoyt.

We are sorry that the above names did not appear in the original story. It was just one of those errors that creep into the news. Most likely 2 or 3 linotype slugs with the above names were mislaid in making up the paper.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

BY BURR COMBS

Ed. nd Joe lived in the same town. Had for years. They never knew each other, though. They ran into each other once, but it wasn't a time for formal introductions.

"Ed," he heard his wife's voice on the phone, "pick up those two Christmas presents for the kids and a couple bulbs for the tree. Then hurry home."

"Sure thing, honey," said Ed.

Big, wet snowflakes were starting to fall as he left the last store and headed home. Ducking his head against the wind, he made the corner just as the light turned from green to yellow. He took three running steps, intent on getting across before the light went red.

* * *

Joe drove out of the storage garage ten minutes later than he'd intended to, and headed up the street toward the intersection. The light was green.

The first wet snowflakes had melted on his warm windshield, then bgan to stick. Just as he neared the corner, Joe turned on the windshield wipers.

The first swipe of the blade showed the light, just turning yellow. Joe crammed it into second and gunned around the corner to beat the light.

The second swipe of the wiper showed a startled, unbelieving face and an upflung arm, scattering packages.

* * *

Joe and Ed only met once, but that was all it took.

1951 DAIRY OUTLOOK MIXED

The butter price outlook for 1951 is going to depend on how soon and how fast government-stored butter supplies are sold and the price they bring.

As soon as the government sells its surplus butter stocks, market butter prices are expected to rise. Butter price supports will be higher in 1951, partly due to a parity rise, according to Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

He reports that feed for dairy cows will probably cost more in 1951 and the defense program is expected to raise labor costs.

However, the price outlook for milk is favorable in 1951 with few changes in milk output during the year. Fluid milk consumption is expected to rise as a result of bigger national income and consumers will probably spend more for ice cream and cheese Henderson concludes.

HANCOCK COUNTY "CROP" NEWS REPORT

Hancock County CROP Chairman E. H. Olsen of Britt, reports that all local communities are now active in the annual CROP drive. All materials have been distributed to local solicitors and community chairman and citizens are being contacted.

Chairman Olsen is anxious that the drive be completed promptly and urges all citizens to co-operate wholeheartedly in the program.

R. H. Higdon of Britt has been named treasurer of the CROP in Hancock County and any citizen not contacted by a local solicitor is requested to mail his contribution either to Mr. Olsen or Mr. Higdon.

The ladies packed a Christmas box to be sent to the Navajo Indians at Farmington, New Mexico.

There were 18 members, 3 visitors and 2 children present. Lunch was served.

BUD NIEMAN AND LOIS JEAN ZOOK WED IN LAKE CHURCH NOV 26

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Nieman

NIEMAN IS SALESMAN FOR PRITCHARDS

Couple Honored At Reception Monday Eve

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Nieman, who were married at the Methodist Church Sunday evening, November 26 at 7:30, have returned from a brief wedding trip and are making their home at Clear Lake. The Rev. Warner M. Hubbard, pastor, performed the double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Nieman, nee Lois Jean Zook, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Zook and Mr. Nieman is a son of Mrs. Ben Nieman, 1011 S. 8th street. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown, fingertip veil and a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. Her bouquet was of white roses.

Miss June Ashland, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and Mrs. Louis Brandt and Miss Beverly Thiele, Nora Springs, were bridesmaids. They wore brocaded satin, matching gloves and white roses in their hair. Each carried a lighted candle and mums.

Verne Greiman, Garner, was bestman and ushers and attendants were Junior Pringnitz, Kanawha; Jesse Schwichtenberg, Klemme, and Joe Schaefer, Garner. Jack Zook and Roger Terhufen escorted the mothers to their seats. Kathy Pritchard and Julia Ann Barlow were flower girls.

Mrs. Harry Mason, organist, played the traditional wedding marches and accompanied Ronald Abel who sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The wedding reception was attended by 225 relatives and friends. Mmes. Harry Welker and Ray Badker cut the cake and Mmes. Frank Smith and Glenn Terhufen poured. Mrs. Howard Casey and Miss Margaret Klein arranged the gifts.

Wedding guests were present from Kanawha, Garner, Klemme, Ventura, Thornton, Mason City, Steamboat Rock, Chicago, Chapin, Grinnell, Cedar Falls and Britt. The Niemans entertained at a wedding dance at the Surf December 4th.

NELLIE GREIMAN RACKED UP 35 POINTS TO LEAD 'ROCKETTES

The Klemme 'Rockettes, girls high school cagers, are still going in high gear and in Friday evening's game Nellie Greiman blasted the net for 35 points to lead her team in a 59-22 victory over the lassies from Kanawha.

The Shamrocks dropped their game to the Bulldogs 44-26 to give the Kanawha boys their 5th straight win of the season. Kanawha's Jeff Yeakel hit for 16 points and Ray Maynard was close second with 14. For the Shamrocks, Laverne Schmidt scored a total of 17 to lead his team.

Thornton Here Friday Night

This week Friday night, on December 8th, the Thornton Girls and Boys will meet the local high school teams on the Klemme court.

GILBERT GUENTHER TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Mr. Gilbert Guenther, president of the Hancock County Farm Bureau, was elected as one of the delegates for the state of Iowa to the American Farm Bureau Convention held in Dallas, Texas next week. Mr. and Mrs. Guenther left Des Moines on Monday morning on the Farm Bureau special train that will take them to Dallas via the southern parts of the United States with stops at the Mammoth Caves in Kentucky, the T.V.A plant in Tennessee, the share Croppers of Alabama and a 24 hour stop at New Orleans. Then on to Dallas for the American Farm Bureau Convention.

The election of Gilbert Guenther as one of the delegates for the Iowa State Farm Bureau Federation is quite an honor for Hancock County - our congratulations to Mr. Guenther.

APRON PARTY AND TEAS FOR MOTHERS

The Ell Tip-Toppers 4-H club enertained their mothers at an apron party and tea on Saturday, November 18 at the home of Carol and Verneil Humphrey. The 4-H girls each made an apron and presented them to the mothers and other guests as they answered ther regular call. The ladies in turn measured their waistlines and gave a penny per inch to the club treasury.

Corsages were given to the new officers and leaders as they were introduced and installed. They are as follows: Lois Christians, president; Gracka Gerardi, vice-president; Daisy Schaefer, secretary-treasurer; Delores Thieman, historian; and Verneil Humphrey, reporter. The leaders are Mrs. John Humphrey and Mrs. Ed. Thiemann.

The entertainment committee appointed for the Christmas Party is Doreen Lackore, Shirley Greiman and Verneil Humphrey.

The meeting was adjourned and lunch was served by the hostess.

DESPITE ICY ROADS HAWKEYE PRESS CLUB HAD GOOD MEETING

The Hawkeye Press Club held its scheduled meeting at the Grade School dining room Saturday evening with twenty-four in attendance and who braved icy roads to make the trip.

A nice dinner was served by the Klemme Music Mothers at 7:00 which was followed by a good talk by Art Wellemeyer. Mr. Wellemeyer spoke on the history of newspaper work in Klemme and brought in many humorous situations in the history of The Klemme Times. Mr. Wellemeyer concluded his talk by expressing his views on world conditions today and what can be done to bring peace to the world. Wellemeyer's talk was greatly enjoyed by the publishers and their wives.

After the dinner the publishers and their wives adjourned to the Times Print Shop and the Jorgenson home. The men talked shop while the ladies played Court Whist. Mrs. T. J. Farnan of Clear Lake won the high prize and Mrs. Bert DuSold of Mason City won second high.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Great Adventure

THE MAN MY DAUGHTER is engaged to marry is not making enough money to support a home and a wife," writes Pauline Grace, from Austin, Texas. "We are New Yorkers, who came here because Maureen's lungs were affected by the eastern winters. Here she met her Ronny, whose pay is $45 a week. Now you know and I know, Mrs. Norris, that a young couple can't live on little more than two thousand a year. If there were children, privations and underprivileges would ruin their lives. Unfortunately Fred, my husband, and I, cannot be of any regular financial help, as with prices what they are today it takes every cent we have to keep going at all, and Maureen's wedding will set us back for some time Will you put into one of your articles," the letter concludes, "what you think a fair income on which a young couple today, living in a southern city, may reasonably start?"

Well, I'll tell you, Pauline. I think a young couple can begin on anything from $12,000 down to $1,200 a year. I expect a ream of angry letters about this, but I will hold my ground. Two persons can live on $100 a month, if they want to. "But live how!" the letters will scream. "Live like pigs, live on garbage, never have new clothes or amusements, or a car, telephone, radio; never know what is comfort or peace of mind!"

The $1,200 Income

But that's just where you're wrong. The persons who have financial peace of mind are by no means the richest among us. Anyone who lives 'way over his income lives worried, and when you read of a pugilist who lets himself and his fame get smashed in a ring, or a movie star who has borrowed a hundred thousand to pay her income tax, you realize that that is true. One movie star who talked poor had an income of over three hundred thousand a year.

But back to that $1,200 income. Could Maureen and her Ronny live as Mother and Dad do? Of course not. Could she live like her matron of honor, who has married the son of a rich family? Certainly not.

But on $1,200 a year she may have all the richness of what I call the American adventure. She may prove, to her own and Ronny's enormous satisfaction, that the days of pioneering are not over. She may take that low income as a challenge, and presently find herself writing articles or talking on the radio or instructing college groups of younger women in what she has learned from that experience.

She must shed, to begin with, a great many of the artificial fine feathers that are cramping her contemporaries in their flight from realistic living. All pretence of having more money than she has, all struggle to keep up with richer folk, must be abandoned at once.

But when that is done, Ronny and Maureen may find, if they are of the right stuff, that pretty much everything worth while in life is theirs to command. Austin, like all our other important cities, will offer them free lectures, free lessons in languages, or in any science, free galleries, free concerts. The cocktail parties they must give up wouldn't be of any benefit to them, not in a thousand years. But the language or the trade they might perfect in three or four of those years might push them on to success.

Lasting Friendship

They'll find contacts and friendships that are lasting. They'll find out how heartfilling it is to launch forth alone into this unknown sea of poverty that is never want, and of simplicity that is never need. They'll get the finest medical care in the city, free, in clinics. Their two-room home on an obscure street may well become the place to which two rich and prominent middle-agers look back someday with a nostalgic ache in their hearts.

This venture takes two things that not even the richest marriage can buy. One is love, an element conspicuously lacking in most very prominent weddings.

The other is courage. Love means that Maureen and Ronney trust each other; that they go into this thing wholeheartedly and hand in hand. The other means—well, it means an essential to just about the most exciting experience life can offer young folk today Men have traveled all over the world, and seen the Taj Mahal and the slums of Europe and the beaches of Honolulu, and haven't found the real adventure. But with life and $1,200 a year it is not only waiting, for any new venturers, but it is the background for success.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Impact of Election

WHILE THERE will be comparatively few new faces in the 82nd congress and the Democrats will maintain "paper" control of both houses, the result of the recent election may be far-reaching in its impact.

These factors may be considered: (1) With a presidential election coming up in two years the Republican leadership actually did not want control of the 82nd congress; (2) Democrat leadership has been warned and forewarned concerning the issues to which the American people object; (3) Although Dean Acheson, the day after election, denied vehemently that he would resign as secretary of state, there is a persistent rumor here that he may quit, which will involve an extensive cabinet shake-up; (4) Despite the proportions of the victory of Senator Taft in Ohio, there is bound to be a clash in the Republican ranks over leadership of the party in the senate, and (5) it is evident Democratic policies will move over closer to the conservative side with every indication that the 82nd congress will be an anti-administration congress.

Prior to the 1948 election the Republicans found that performance, instead of promises, was a difficult feat, and as a result their control of the 80th congress was a factor in the Truman victory in that campaign. For this reason the GOP leadership believes their best position prior to 1952 is the minority in the congress where they will be free to act without the responsibility of making a record.

The GOP leadership, therefore, is elated over the election results for the reason that a definite Republican trend is indicated which puts them in position to go on from there in 1952. At the same time, the voters in the home towns throughout the country indicated in no uncertain terms they took to heart the fight made by Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin against Secretary Acheson and the alleged harboring of Communists in that agency. Although Senator McCarthy never proved his charges the folks back home acted as though there must be some fire where there was so much smoke. The defeat of Sen. Milliard Tydings of Maryland, veteran of 24 years in the senate, was because of this issue of "McCarthyism." Tydings, chairman of the sub-committee which probed the McCarthy charges, found them unfounded and was in turn charged with "whitewashing" the whole thing. McCarthy stumped Maryland from one end to the other telling the people this story and lambasting Tydings unmercifully.

Duff Called Anti-Dewey

Although Gov. James Duff of Pennsylvania, who defeated Democrat incumbent whip of the senate, Francis Myers, was an anti-Dewey man at the Republican national convention, it is not believed he will team up with the Taft-Wherry-Millikin axis in the Republican leadership. Rather, because of his more liberal beliefs and his eagerness to clean the GOP of reaction, he is believed likely to throw his lot with Senators Lodge of Massachusetts, Ives of New York, and other more liberal senators on the Republican side.

• • •

May Drop Farm Plan

Significantly, Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan said a few days before the election that he might be willing to sidetrack his Brannan farm plan in the interest of unity. Also significantly, everywhere candidates supported the Brannan plan in the election they were defeated. This happened with Thomas in Utah, Thomas Fairchild in Wisconsin, Albert Loveland in Iowa, Ferguson in Ohio and others.

• • •

Tydings Big Upset

The only real upsets in the election were Tydings in Maryland and Thomas in Utah. However, one of the paradoxes which developed was in the Utah race and in Missouri where Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., defeated Republican Sen. Forrest Donnell. Both Thomas and Hennings made their campaigns on a straight fair deal program. Hennings won handily, but Thomas, one of the most scholarly men in the senate was soundly whipped by Wallace F. Bennett, Republican, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

• • •

Balance of Power

If they desire, the southern bloc of Democrats can take over the reorganization of the senate. They have the votes to name one of their own members, probably Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia. However, the best bet is that the southerners will let President Truman name his leaders so they can feel free to oppose whatever legislation they desire including civil rights. It appears that Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney may succeed Sen. Scott Lucas.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

Sharing Our Faith

Lesson for December 10, 1950.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 8:1-13; 18:1-7; I Corinthians 9:16-17; II Corinthians 5:17-20; Philippians 1:12-18; 2:12-18.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 1: 8-17.

A COMMON sight in cities of ancient times was the "libation." Statues of gods or goddesses stood at every prominent corner, in every yard; they were as numerous as billboards today. Before one of these statues some one would be pouring out wine from a cup or goblet, an offering of thanksgiving or dedication. Saint Paul even used the libation as a figure of speech to describe himself. My life, he said to his friend Timothy, is being poured out—there was not much left of it, but all of it, every drop, would be poured out as an offering to God.

• • •

Miser of Life or Spender?

PAUL was no miser of life. If life was a full cup, it was not a cup with a tight lid, not like one of your grandmother's jars of very special preserves to be saved and saved but never used. Paul was a spender of life. Whatever God had given him was to be poured out, not to be saved.

There is something in every one's cup of life; something that spoils if kept too long, something fragrant and beautiful when poured out in service.

The miser of life finds that life at last turns sour on him. The spender of life finds that as he has given, in the same measure it will be given him.

Faith Can't Be Hoarded

ONE very important part of the Christian's life is high-lighted for us in this week's Scripture: his faith. Indeed, faith ought not to be a part of life for the Christian. Faith is no more a "part" of life than sunshine is a part of the out-of-doors. Without the sunshine there might as well not be any out-of-doors. So without faith the Christian's life would be mere existence.

The question is: What do we do with our faith? Do we keep it for ourselves alone or do we pass it on?

Last summer a man tried to get a grocery store to take back 100 pounds of sugar which he had laid up during World War II. He had hoarded it till it was hard as rock and he could not use a pound of it. (The grocery would not take it back, and it served him right.) Faith is like that. It is sweet and good — but only if we use it and share it, not if we keep it to ourselves.

• • •

What Is Sharing Faith?

SHARING your faith means helping others to have a faith at least as strong as your own. All around us there are persons who have no faith at all. They are discouraged, blue, bewildered, at loose ends—in the sad old phrase, they are lost. Sharing your faith means sharing it with just such people.

With some things, the more you give away the less you have left; but the arithmetic of religion is different. The more you give away, the more you have. Shared faith is living faith; shared faith is growing faith.

There are more ways than one of sharing our faith. One way is to talk about it. A person can "give a testimony" in a prayermeeting, and share faith that way; but this is not the only way. A person who merely talks about faith is a little like a gardener who is proud of his own garden and brags on it, but never helps his neighbors with theirs.

• • •

How Can We Do It Every Day?

REMEMBER, what we are really trying to share when we "share the gospel" or "share Christ" is not an argument, a set of propositions The big thing is not arguing other people into becoming Christians.

Very few persons have ever become Christians because some one talked them into it. Talk has its place, and every Christian should be eager to say a good word for Jesus Christ at every chance. But good words for Jesus have their best effect when they come from a life that is really His.

A Christian whose faith is something put on on Sundays with the "church clothes" is not going to have any great success as a soul-winner. We can't share faith we don't have; we can't share second-hand or imitation faith. A former Mohammedan, being asked what was the great arugment that won him to Christianity, replied, "It wasn't any argument, it was the lives of some missionaries."

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative— REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as MILLIONS do — chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon...right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . . you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Toys Under The Christmas Tree—

MAKE THEM AT HOME

A nail keg rocking horse made at home can be sturdy, colorful and full of personality, a wonderful companion for your toddler. This is just one of many make-them-yourself toys to be found in Iowa State College's latest bulletin, About Toys: Make Them at Home."

A little boy pushes a toy train across the linoleum, happily supplying his own lusty sound effects His sister struggles with the big wooden pieces of an animal puzzle, smiles with pleasure as they fit together. These playthings are a very important part of their lives. Child development specialists at Iowa State College tell us that good toys teach children all sorts of things and are a wonderful outlet for their ideas and feelings.

"Do-With" Toys

What are "good" toys? Specialists say a good toy is a "do-with" one that gives the child lots of experiences. A tot can soon lose interest in a windup duck that waddles across the room until it runs down. But he can spend hours making things out of blocks, piling them in different ways, finding out what he can and can't do with them. And sooner or later comes the social significance of a toy when other children are around. Should he share it with them? Maybe they can take turns, maybe they can build something together.

If you have a workbench, materials and a yen to make things yourself, many of the toys on the market can be copied at home. It can be an exciting family project, with daddy as construction boss, and the children holding down jobs as painters, carpenters, sanders and whatnot.

Toy-Making Equipment

Equipment should include a heavy table or bench,, a vise, claw hammers, an 8 or 10-point crosscut saw of good quality, a coping saw with an adjustable blade, a brace and various sized bits or a hand drill and a plane. Later on you'll want to add a power jig saw, a level and a square, and assorted supplies. Dowelings are essential to have on hand for many toys. They can be bought at your local lumber yard and are used to hold pieces together, for spindles and for pegs, or to make wheels when sawed crosswise.

Make Easy Toys First

Start out with simple playthings. A toy train is one of the many fascinating make-it-yourself toys included in Iowa State College's new toy bulletin. This train can be made out of all sorts of household items. The engine might be made from a cookie can, laid on its side, and an upright cocoa can, both bolted firmly to a flat board. follow some simple directions and let your imagination take it from there. Finish it up, says the booklet, by sanding and painting with bright colored enamel.

Other easy ones to start on are a drum made out of a 2-pound coffee can, heavy string, pieces of inner tube, and a dowel, clappers, cymbals, rattles, animal puzzles and pegboards. Then you can go on to projects such as a nail keg rocking horse, scottie rocker and tree whirl.

Designs for all these and more are included in the new toy booklet. You may obtain it from the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa. The title, again, is "About Toys: Make Them At Home."

The bulletin is full of pictures, diagrams and directions. It even lists the type of toys best for different ages.

SEASONS CLOSE

The 1950 pheasant season closed December 5th after a 25-day season in 70 counties and 10 days in 13 additional counties. Commission spokesmen termed the season very successful.

The trapping season on muskrat, mink and beaver closes at midnight, December 9 over the entire state, except that a special regulation will allow muskrat and mink trapping until Dec. 24 on the Mississippi River north of the north Muscatine city limits to the Minnesota line, east of the Milwaukee railroad tracks.

Martha Circle Entertained At Mrs. Leonard Swanson Home

Mrs. Leonard Swanson entertained the Martha Circle in her home Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 29, with Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, as co-hostess. Twelve ladies were present. Mrs. Egeland led the devotions.

Mrs. Harry Gibbs reported that the articles for the Supply Department, which had been collected at the Bazaar, have been packed and sent to four different institutions. Our circle donated articles amounting to $33.77.

Plans were made for serving the December General W.S.C.S. meeting and the supper for the visiting ministers and visitation teams next Thursday evening.

The hostess served a lovely lunch following the meeting.

ELLINGTON EXPERTS MEET

Seventeen members answered roll call by "an idea for a simple gift that can be made." Also present was a guest and Patsy Kunz joined our 4-H club. An illustrated talk "Choosing Curtains for My Room" was given by Mary Lee Fosse. A report on the music training school which Mary Lee Fosse and Janice Swanson attended was given by Janice. The songs that we are to learn for this year were sung by the club.

Lunch was served by the hostess, Francine Ericson and her mother. Our Christmas Party will be held at Judy Wetterling's December 16th.

YOUNG FARMER SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN TRACTOR TURNED OVER

Charles Velau Taken To Belmond Hospital Following Accident

Charles Velau, young farmer living one mile north of Goodell on the Henry Buseman farm, was seriously injured Monday forenoon at 11:30 south of Goodell 2½ miles as he was driving his tractor on the pavement to Belmond for repairs. The tractor skidded on the icy pavement, turned completely around and upset in the ditch, injuring Velau.

Ed Barz of Klemme came along and took Velau to the Belmond hospital where it was found that both pelvis bones were fractured. He will be hospitalized for about 8 weeks.

Correction

In last week's Times the party for Mrs. Fred Etchen was held at the Wm. Heginger home, rather than at the George Heginger home.

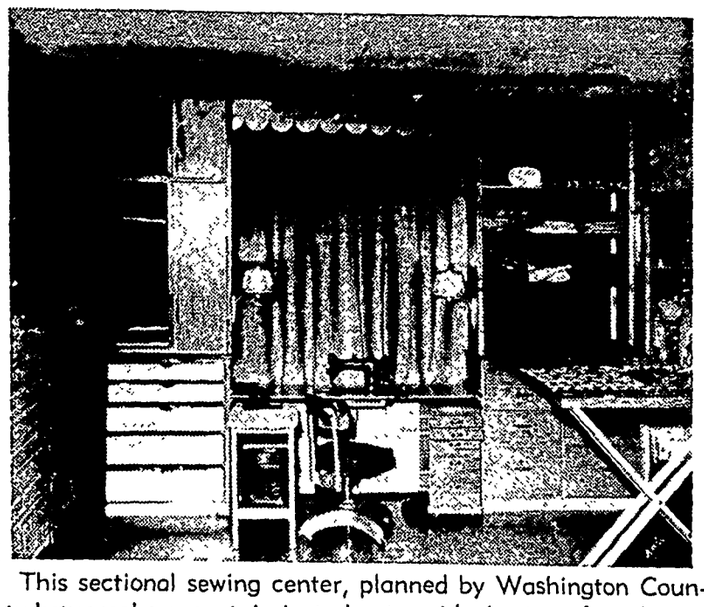
SEW A LOT---

PLAN A SEWING CENTER



This sectional sewing center, planned by Washington County homemakers, contain just about an ideal set-up for a home. Worked out as is or in part, depending upon your space and needs, it makes the sewing business more orderly, and provides storage for fabrics and equipment.

Sewing centers are becoming an important part of modernized homes. Extension clothing specialists of Iowa State College say there are two good reasons for this. In the first place, more women are sewing at home. The trend toward home sewing has been growing by leaps and bounds in the last few years. In the second place, well-planned storage solves the problem of where to keep sewing things handy and yet out of the way of usual household activities. Most women are getting tired of having to look the house over for the sheers, tape measure or a spool of thread.

Handy Arrangement

First of all, note that the sewing machine (which may be your cabinet-style machine or a portable set into a counter) is centered in the unit. An adjustable ironing board and a sewing cabinet for holding small equipment are located within arm's reach on either side. This is the heart of your sewing center. Even if you can't work out as much storage space as is shown in the picture, you can achieve this simple unit arrangement at little cost.

Put a waste basket under the ironing board to catch scraps and threads; provide your unit with good natural and artificial lght, get yourslf a posture chair, and you've already done much to make sewing easier.

Cutting Table

One of the main problems in sewing is finding a flat area large enough to use for a cutting table. Washington County women think it's time to get away from cluttering up the dining room table every time you sew. They though up a two-in-one table. It is hinged so it can fold up flat to form the door of one of the cupboards when not in use. The standard underneath the table is a separate piece which slides into the left-hand closet.

Another idea is to hinge your cutting table to the wall so that it can fold down out of the way when not needed. Whichever plan you use, say clothing specialists, do make sure that the table is at height best for you so you do not have to bend your back and can work comfortably. Have it large enough so that you can lay out your entire pattern.

Plenty Of Storage

Planning the amount of storage for your sewing center will depend very much on the wall space you have and the amount of sewing and repairing you do. But, if possible, work out some storage near your sewing unit. Make it movable or built-in depending on which is most practical. The unit to the far right provides closet space for partially completed clothing or for garments to be mended; storage for your iron, and a high cupboard for seasonal goods.

The cupboards immediately above the cutting table are planned to hold new fabrics, folded garments which need mending, the portable sewing machine when not in use, and a tray filled with pins and other necessities to work with when cutting out the pattern. Immediately underneath the table are drawers, some with file dividers, to hold countless scraps of material and other sewing supplies.

The cupboards and drawers to the left of the sewing area are planned to hold the pressing equipment, additional thread and darning supplies.

Mrs. Groesbeck Entertained The Naomi Circle

The Naomi Circle of the Methodist Church was entertained at the home of Mrs. Mervin Groesbeck with Mrs. Clarence Groesbeck assisting. Mrs. Clarence Lemke was the lesson leader.

Sixteen members, 3 visitors and 8 children were present. A delicious lunch was served after the business meeting.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

Christmas is coming and the Kindergarten room is filled with excitement. Santa Claus Christmas scenes and snowmen have been used as decorations. Many lovely books have been brought which have lovely Christmas stories.

Many of our boys and girls have returned to school. We all hope the rest will be back soon.

—Miss Dobson

Second Grade News

Several of us have been absent with chicken pox or mumps, or both, during the past few weeks. Mary Karel West, Joanne Trampel, Wayne Schlichting and Jerry Kropp have all had the chicken pox. Mary Karel also had the mumps.

Little by little our room is beginning to reflect the spirit of the Christmas season. We are learning several new Christmas songs and some poems.

Jerry Stokesbary is the new president of our B. C. (Better Citizens) Club.

—Miss Brones

First Grade News

Joyce Hummel and Terry Lassahn celebrated their birthdays this week.

Collyn Bridges brought his dental card back this week.

We have had sevral absent all week. They are Keith Christians and Arthur Lyins.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Third Grade News

Here at school we have been getting ready for the Christmas season. We have been reading abut yuletide customs in other countries and also how in some places people often celebrate Christmas with special eats.

We are starting a "Questions Box of Christmas" in which each child gets to ask any question they wish to be answered and that can be answered which deals with Christmas. The questions that have been asked so far are: 1. How did "Xmas" come to be an abbreviation for the word "Christmas." 2. Why were gold, frankiencense and myrrk appropriate gifts for the Christ Child. 3. Why are evergreens so often used as Christmas decorations. They are having a great deal of enjoyment out of this.

Our United States maps have been completed. Now we are beginning on our new geography books.

We are happy to have a new pupil in the third grade. His name is William Evans. He is orginally from Rowan, Iowa. has a brother who is in kindergarten. Our total enrollment is now 22.

Lowell Greiman and Billy Greiman are out of school with chicken pox. Lynn Hueneman is out with the whooping cough. We hope they will soon get well so they can come back to school.

—Miss Sebben

Fouth Grade News

Those with perfect attendance for last six months are Harlan Baack, Gaylon Bridges, Jerry Janssen, Cozette Lau, Roger Meints, Carroll Priebe, Dorothy Roul, Mardell Stadtlander and Carol Ann Pavey.

Last Monday for art each one of us had a different project for Christmas decorations. We've had a lot of fun putting our posters on the wall and letting the other classes see them.

Gaylon Bridges and Jerry Lee LaFavre returned their dental cards this week.

CATTLE FEEDING OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

Economist now look for cattle prices to continue to work higher in 1951 although no extreme price changes are likely.

A threat of price ceilings puts an upper limit on prices, while high consumer income acts as a price support, explains County Extension Director Paul Henderson. He expects price spreads beween grades to remain narrow.

The increase in Hancock County beef breeding herds is part of another 2-million-head gain registered by the nation's beef cattle herds in 1950. The national increase is about the same as last year's, with most of the expansion coming in the South and East.

Henderson reports that the number of cattle marketed in 1951 is expected to be larger since cattle numbers are now great enough to allow increases in marketing without slowing the present rate of climb in the nation's bef cattle numbers.

Most of the marketing increases will come during the last half of the coming year. In fact, spring and early summer marketings may be fewer than those made during the same months in 1950. More well finished cattle will be on the market in the first and last quarters of 1951 than in the same periods of 1950.

Despite heavier marketings, the demand for beef cattle breeding stock is expected to continue strong next year.

COOLER, DRYER NOVEMBER ENDS IN IOWA

November was 10.29 degrees colder than the same month last year according to statistics released by Earl Henscen, Court House janitor, weather observer. The average temperature for the month was a cool 26.57 as compared with 36.86 a year ago. The average maximum was 35.9 and the average minimum 26.57. Temperatures dipped below zero on 3 successive mornings with 2 below on the 23rd and 24th. The high temperature of the month was 66 degrees on Nov. 16th.

Precipitation for the month was .57 inch exactly the same as for the same month last year. The comparatively dry weather enabled farmers to complete the harvesting of the corn crop and helped to condition the crop for safe cribbing.

Eighteen days of the month were listed as fair, 11 days cloudy and one partly cloudy. November weather was a return to the pattern that has been prevalent throughout the year with the exception of the month of October which was above normal in temperature.

CONTROL SHEEP TICKS FOR PROFITABLE FLOCK

Most people think the trouble from flies is over when cold weather comes. However, this isn't the case, as sheep ticks are actually wingless flies that live by sucking blood. They'll be a source of trouble all winter unless steps are taken to control them.

The irritation from these ticks will cause spoiled fleeces, lower gains and an unprofitable flock. Sheep that are affected will rub and scratch and usually lose weight.

This insect is relatively easy to control because it is passed from sheep to sheep only on contact, says Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. If the flock is treated and cleaned up once, there is no danger of reinfestation until new sheep are brought into the flock.

At the present time, rams and western ewes that are being added to flocks may be bringing ticks in with them.

For control, Raun recommends dipping or spraying with 50 percent wettable DDT powder mixed at the rate of 8 pounds in 100 gallons of water. A 2-pound box of wetting agent should also be added to help the spray cut through the grease and dirt in the wool and get down to the ticks. A wetting agent will also reduce the pressure that is needed on the sprayer. Pressures of 70 to 75 pounds will usually do the job.

About 1 gallon per animal or a good thorough soaking is the proper application rate, according to the entomologist. Special care should be taken to soak down the brisket, tail and ears.

The preferable time to spray is during warm weather, but sheep can be treated during cold periods if they are shut up in a pen and allowed to dry before being turned out again. It is also advisable to use warm water during the cold weather.

BILL OF RIGHTS

Bill of Rights Is a Precious Heritage and a Solemn Trust

This is the first of a series of three articles on the Bill of Rights and Bill of Rights Day which will be celebrated December 15.

December 15, Bill of Rights Day, commemorates the one hundred and fifty-ninth anniversary of the most important document in American history. As every school child learns, the Bill of Rights comprises the first 10 amendments our founding fathers so wisely attached to the constitution of the United States to safeguard our civil liberties. Freedom of speech, press, assembly and religion, together with the guarantee of fair trial, due process and equality before the law, form the cornerstone of democratic government.

Now, as never before, our democracy is being challenged. Anti-democratic forces often hide behind the protection of the Bill of Rights, hoping to frighten us into curbing our civil liberties, the first step toward totalitarian rule. Being fully aware of their insidious purpose, we must preserve these liberties, even for those whose opinions we detest.

• • •

TO REMIND AMERICANS of their precious heritage in the Bill of Rights, and to renew the faith of free men everywhere, the American Civil Liberties Union is planning a nationwide program of publicity through the press, radio, television and magazines. Featured in this program will be a newspaper survey of the current status of civil liberties in the country's largest cities, a documentary drama broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company network and a series of articles in leading national magazines. The American Civil Liberties Union is also sponsoring a contest in cooperation with the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, for the best college radio script on civil liberties.

Today the Bill of Rights takes on new world significance as one of democracy's proudest achievements. Only by continuous support of both the word and spirit of the Bill of Rights can we insure the heritage of freedom for our children and furnish the best argument for universal acceptance of the democratic way of life.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

TONY DEXTER, chosen from 75,000 candidates for the lead in Columbia's "Valentino" movie, began life as a Nebraska farm boy, the son, grandson and great-grandson of clergymen. While in college he became interested in acting; his first role was with Eva LaGallienne in "Ah, Wilderness." As Walter Craig he had a successful Broadway career, interrupted by three years in the army. Katherine Cornell suggested him for the Valentino role, and Producer Edward Small kept him under wraps for three years, training him for the part; because of his startling resemblance to the dead star he couldn't even rhumba at a dance hall!

Valentino . . . Dexter

Linda and Boyd Morse, great-grandchildren of Adolph Zukor, titular head of Paramount, have roles in the Pine-Thomas "The Last Outpost." They are also great-grandchildren of Marcus Loew, founder of Loew's M-G-M.

Richard Whorf, well known in Hollywood, heads the cast of The wholly delightful new play, "Season in the Sun." He staged "Champagne for Caesar" and "The Groom Wore Spurs" before leaving for Broadway. Nancy Kelly, appearing opposite him, has made some 25 films as an adult, 50 as a child; Anthony Ross has also included the movies in his career. The play is one of the best comedies to reach New York in some time, and will make an award-contending comedy when it reaches the screen.

The new March of Time, "Schools March On!" presents a vivid story of public school consolidation in Woodford County, Ill. It also strikingly presents the advances of educational techniques and facilities in other parts of the United States. But it emphasizes the necessity of improving our public schools and raising educational standards throughout the country.

THE FICTION CORNER

POLICE GUARD

By Richard H. Wilkinson

OLD Man Bursley phoned in to headquarters about 6:30 P.M. one evening. His voice was quite calm and unruffled.

"I've just been held up and robbed," he explained. "I think if you go to No. 302 Market street you'll find not only the bandits, but the money."

3-Minute Fiction

"Wait a minute," said Deke Miller. "What is this? Let's have a few particulars."

"I suggest," cut in Old Man Bursley, "that you get down to 302 Market street at once."

Deke hesitated. "Where are you now, Mr. Bursley?"

"I'm at my office at 1102 Main street."

"O. K. You stay there till we get back." Deke hung up and nodded to me. "Come on," he said. "It sounds screwy, but you like screwy set-ups."

Old Man Bursley owned and operated one of the city's biggest department stores. There were about 300 people in his employ and he personally supervised the making up of payroll envelopes.

I asked Deke about details of the hold-up as the police car rushed us downtown.

"I don't know any," he said shortly. "Bursley simply told us to go to 302 Market and we'd find the money and the bandits."

The address at Market street was a saloon. We got out and went inside. "Where's the boss?" Deke asked. The barkeeper shot a quick glance toward a rear door, wet his lips and shook his head. "He ain't in."

Deke headed for the rear door.

The bartender shot a quick glance toward a rear door, wet his lips and shook his head. "He ain't here," he said.

He banged it open. Three men were sitting around a table and on the table was a heap of money and pay envelopes.

There was a lot of excitement during the next 15 minutes. No one but Deke Miller could have handled the situation so adroitly. He stood with his back to the wall at the farther end of the room with a gun in his hand while I called headquarters.

WE saw the three gangsters safely away in a patrol wagon, then returned to the police car.

"Where to?" I asked Deke.

"Bursley's department store. I don't mind telling you I'm burning up with curiosity."

"Me too," I agreed.

SO WE DROVE up to Bursley's and a watchman let us in and told us that Mr. Bursley was still in his office. Bursley was sitting there calmly reading the evening paper.

"Did you get the money back?" he asked.

"Yes," said Deke.

"Thought you would," said Bursley.

"What made you think so?" Deke asked.

"Eh?" said Bursley. "Oh, well that's where they phoned before leaving here. I and my assistant were locked in that closet. We heard them phone."

"Do you mean to say," Deke asked "that they were stupid enough to give away their hide-out by phoning from here?"

Bursley chuckled. "It amounts to that, though they didn't know it. They used that phone. Dial, you know. Didn't have to speak a number so figured no one could check back." I counted the clicks. Easy You count the clicks of the dial when she goes back, and you can figure what number anybody's calling."

It's quite a jolt when you find an ordinary citizen as calm and level-headed in time of emergency as a cop should be.

Deke cleared his throat. "Mr. Bursley, I'd like to remind you again that it is dangerous the way you make up your payroll. Now—"

"Tut, tut, tut," said Bursley. "I've taken care of that. Beginning next week I'm having the envelopes made up at the bank. Also I'm paying off by check. Besides that, I'm having a police guard to watch over things." Yes, sir, gentlemen, I've decided I ought to have a police guard to keep an eye on things."

Bake Cookies A-Plenty for Gifts!
(See Recipes Below)

Homemade Goodies

GAPS IN THE holiday gift list can easily be filled with delectable cookies and candies made right in your own kitchen. All kinds of inexpensive toys like the drum and the wheelbarrow make perfect cookie holders, and it's fun to find and use them in this way.

To finish packing the goodies, tie cellophane around the drum or wheelbarrow, bringing the edges of the paper together at the top, then tie with a ribbon.

Meringues with whipped cream can be a fancy dessert if two are put together for each serving with sweetened, flavored whipped cream

Good salad dressing for greens uses soured cream blended with mayonnaise, mustard, celery seed and just a touch of minced cardamon seed.

With lamb chops you can find nothing better in the way of a sauce than currant jelly blended with chutney, a dash of lemon juice, salt and pepper

Baked bean salad is bound to appeal to the men folk when it's properly seasoned, say with chopped celery, chives, minced olives and salad dressing.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Moe's Biggest Catch Found Rose Dangling on His Line

By BILLY ROSE

Among the doodads on my desk is an old piece of string wrapped around a wooden spool, and people who come to my office often quiz me about it. My rough, ready and routine answer is: I'm fond of that bit of string because, thanks to it, my business address is Sixth Avenue instead of Davy Jones's Locker.

But let me crank the reel back 44 years and give it to you—as my Aunt Frieda would put it—"in sequins." . . .

The scene I remember most vividly on the East Side is the dock near the Fulton Fish Market where we used to go swimming on summer days when school was out and the tide was in. And the waterfront character who usually takes stage center in my memory is a little ragbag of a man we called Crazy Moe who spent most of his days spool-fishing over the edge of the pier.

Billy Rose

We often pointed out to this incompleat angler that he was wasting his time that no self-respecting flounder would be caught sauteed in the polluted waters of the East River—but Crazy Moe paid no attention to us. His answer, when he bothered to answer at all, was that he didn't much care about catching anything—he just liked to fish. And as nearly as we could tell, he never even took the trouble to bait his hook.

ONE DAY A BOY named Terry, the most promising juvenile delinquent on Avenue A, swiped a mackerel from a fish stand, dove off the dock when Moe wasn't looking and hooked the fish onto his line. And when the tetched one began to pull in his "catch," his hands shook so violently that the fish looked alive.

Before he could get wise to the deception, however, one of the kids grabbed the mackerel out of his hand and hacked its head off with a jackknife. Crazy Moe cussed at us for five minutes—and it wasn't because he wanted to stuff and mount the fish, he just wanted to throw the poor thing back.

There was another day when this same Terry decided it was time I learned how to swim, and when I tried to ward him off with the wily dialectics of a seven-year-old he began calling me "sissy" and "yella belly." Finally, realizing there was no way to dodge the dunking, I stripped down to my shorts. Terry and another kid grabbed hold of me, gave me a couple of hammock swings and pitched me into the river. I landed kersplash between a grapefruit rind and a floating bottle, and water began rushing into me from every opening.

• • •

AS I WAS GOING down for the second time I somehow got tangled up in a bit of string, and when my head broke water I saw Crazy Moe standing on the dock hauling in his second fish—me, and I was darned near as dead as the first one. The line, of course, wasn't strong enough to do more than keep me afloat, but it gave Terry a chance to dive in and pull me over to the ladder.

After I had recovered breath and bravado, I asked Crazy Moe to let me have his fishing line for a keepsake, and when he demurred I bribed it away from him with what was an important piece of money in those days—a new Liberty Head nickel.

Today, many decades and chins later, the piece of string occupies a prominent place among the mementos on my desk—sort of a mute reminder of the time when my life hung by a hair. And my favorite mermaid who, of course, knows this story says it explains why I married her.

"You wanted a swimmer in the family," says Eleanor, "because the next time they throw you in, there may not be a Crazy Moe hanging around."

How About a Charles-Maxim Bout?

By GRANTLAND RICE

JOE BENJAMIN, former lightweight boxing star, a pal of Jack Dempsey's, and man about the world, has a good idea.

"This present day fight game," he said, "is pretty terrible. It is even worse than that. Why not take a chance and go back to at least part of the big years? I mean the years when Dempsey and Kearns came along. We can't use old Jack now, but we can call on Kearns. At that I think Jack wouldn't do so bad today. But Doc has a fighter named Maxim who can give Ezzard Charles all the trouble he is looking for. It would be a good fight."

Grantland Rice

"What chance do you think Maxim would have?" I asked the wanderer. "And why did you once toss aside a title and a million dollars when you had the chance?"

"I didn't care to be bothered with that much responsibility," Benjamin replied. "If I had won the title I'd have lost it later. If I made a million dollars, I'd have spent it. I'm doing all right.

"About Charles and Maxim," he resumed. "It would be a good fight. They have met three times already and it was all nip and tuck. No big difference. I know Charles has improved—but so has Maxim. Maxim had a bad arm when he met Charles and this choked down his punching. The arm is O.K. and Maxim is a far better puncher now.

"Besides," Joe rambled on, "wouldn't it help things out to have Doc Kearns back? You remember what he was when he handled Dempsey back in the lost past? Doc might have lost a little of the old zip—but not too much. He could help stir things up—anyway. And I'm not kidding you about Maxim. He can really fight. He is a fine boxer and a much harder puncher than he used to be. This might not make one of the greatest heavyweight fights of all time, but it would be better than anything we have in sight. And I think it would pick up a louder ballyhoo."

Dempsey-Louis Angle

Being a professional fighter it has always struck me that it was strictly Joe Louis' business when he decided to keep on fighting. Many a professional writer keeps on writing when he is well over the hill. Maybe it's a matter of habit. But Dempsey and Louis are well apart in this respect.

Dempsey tried one comeback. After losing to Tunney he started training again, beat Jack Sharkey when Sharkey had two brainstorms, and then moved on to the famous long-count with Tunney. Dempsey lost that one. He took quite a beating around the eyes. There's something that few know. After the long-count fight, Jack was offered $750,000 for a third meeting. Dempsey turned the offer down. "What good would $750,000 be to me," he said, "if I lost my eyesight?"

In the wake of the long-count argument a third Dempsey-Tunney fight might have drawn close to $3,000,000 in 1929—the big boom year before the bubble was punctured.

Anyway Dempsey turned down $750,000. He might have held out for a million—in a time when taxes were extremely low. At that time $750,000 would be the same today at $7,000,000. Tunney kept over $900,000 of the million he collected in the second Dempsey fight. Today he would be allowed to carry away $91,000.

The point is that Dempsey turned down $750,000 in 1928 while Louis was still willing to fight for $100,000 in 1950. And possibly for $30,000 his next time out. Still, who can laugh off $100,000 or even $30,000 for a night's work?

Then and Now

Back in 1889 Snake Ames of Princeton played through every game His substitute, Shep Homans, never had a chance to get into a Tiger contest The next year Shep Homans, Princeton's 168 pound fullback played in every game—13 all told—and Shep's substitute never had a chance to play.

Later on we had the Iron Men from Brown where 11 men played every second of several games.

In those days a good football player had to work on both offense and defense. A back had to run and pass. He also had to block and tackle. A lineman had to stay in and take it. This old game lacked the speed of the modern game. But at least it built the endurance which modern play doesn't build.

It was with something of a shock that we looked at the Columbia charts on the Columbia football program last week. These charts showed how much football had changed.

Here were the different teams or line-ups to be watched—1. Offensive teams—2. Defensive teams—3. Punting teams—4. Punt receiving teams—5. Kickoff teams—6. Kickoff receiving teams—7. Point-after-touchdown teams.

You wouldn't believe this could happen—but there it was. Football is no longer a two-platoon system. It is now a seven-platoon system.

Gleaned From The Convention

At the meeting of the Iowa Retail Farm Equipment Association held on November 30th it was said that if the present war in Korea was to stop now, the farm equipment industry as a whole would be able to produce 14% less machinery than in 1950 and it would cost at least ten per cent more. Right now manufacturers have a small inventory on some items and material to make more, but the squeeze will be on when that is used up. Don't wait for this to catch you.

Took Part In College Pageant At Forest City

Miss Phyllis Boland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boland of Klemme, took part in the annual Waldorf College Christmas pageant at Forest City Sunday evening. Miss Boland participated in the choral reading group. More than 150 Waldorf College students took part in the pageant this year.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

What would Christmas be without a Christmas tree? Well, for one thing—it would be a lot safer!

That stately symbol of Yule joy is loaded with pitch and resin. It's a potential torch that could turn your holiday into a holocaust! Treat it with care, like this:

Keep your tree outside until a few days before Christmas. When you bring it in, cut the base on a diagonal, about an inch above the original cut. Set the tree, well supported, in a tub or bucket of water. The Underwriters Laboratory has found no dependable "solution" for fireproofing trees—no chemical, that is. Plenty of moisture is the best answer.

Place your tree away from heat and flame, such as a fireplace. If there's a radiator or register near, shut it off. And locate the tree so that, standing or fallen, it won't block an exit in case of fire.

Lights? Electric, no candles. Check for loose connections, frayed insulation, broken plugs and sockets. Keep bulbs from touching needles or a branch. Don't overload your house wiring with too many strings of lights in one socket. By all means, turn off all ligsts when you're sleeping or away from home. And keep electric toys away from the tree.

Use metal, glass and asbestos decorations, no cotton, paper or plastic.

Your Iowa Safety Congress wishes you a Merry Christmas, not a fiery one.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

BY BURR COMBS

This is the tale of a misguided bloke, who thought winter driving was all a joke. He always greeted with derision the notion that ice would cause a collision "Why buy chains? That's a lot of bunk. I just throw a big bag of sand in my trunk. Then I reduce my back tires' pressure, And I'm all set." All set- Oh, sure!

* * *

The extra load, and the lack of air in his tires caused abnormal wear. So one day, rounding an icy curve, a back tire blew, and he started to swerve. The sand in his trunk didn't give him a grip—it played a game of "crack-the-whip" — spun his around, like a spinning top, till the crash brought the spin—and his life—to a stop.

* * *

If you're like the guy in this little tale, you're likeswise subject to tire failure. Use chains when it's slick—drive the careful way. Don't let death take your holiday!

JUNIOR HIGH WINS THIRD GAME IN A ROW

The Junior High Monday won their third game in a row by defeating Goodell 39-6 after leading 10-4 at the half.

Cecil Jacobs led the scoring with 13 points, but was ably assisted by Don Thiemans's 10 points and excellent floor game.

The boys had won a previous game from Goodell 53-2 and from Ventura last Friday 20-13. The boys have been playing good ball and are hoping to keep up the good work.

The Junior High 'Rockettes have not been quite as fortunate, although they have been playing good basketball. They lost to Goodell Monday 18-9 in a roughly played game. Previously they had defeated them 22-15. Last Friday they lost to a high-powered Ventura team 44-30. Carol Bridges has scored consistently and Joan Lemke has been playing good defense.

Our next game is at Crystal Lake on Wednesday.

'ROCKETTES — SHAMROCKS WIN TWO FROM THORNTON

Friday was a big night for Klemme high school when their teams won both games from the visiting school, Thornton.

In the opening game, which turned out to be a thriller the Klemme 'Rockettes won a close 48-47 after holding a slim 24-22 half time lead. Nellie Greiman was high point girl for Klemme with 20 points while Schaefer rolled in 10. For the Thornton girls Sorenson had 20.

The Shamrocks had easier going as they stepped into a 17-9 lead at the end of the first quarter and held a 26-15 advantage at the half which they stretched into a 48-25 third quarter marker when the Reserves took over to win 52-33. Ten Shamrocks saw action in the game in which Pearson lead the attack with 14 points. Winthers for Thornton racked up 18 points.

Lakers Here Tuesday Night

Crystal Lake will come to Klemme Tuesday night, December 19th for a double-header with the girls game starting at 7:00 p. m.

The 'Rockettes and Shamrocks travel the last of the week when they go to Rowan on Friday, December 15th.

SHAMROCKS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH GARNER

The Shamrocks split honors with the Garner Cardinals there Tuesday evening as the Little Shamrocks streaked to a 38-26 win over the Red Birds. The Little Shamrocks displayed fine form and played a steady game that saw them in front 24-12 at the half.

The Shamrocks looked flashy in the first quarter when a North breeze must have hit them as they were cold as penguins on set up shots and the Cardinals forged ahead 25-13 at the half. Coach Patterson pulled out the entire first squad in the tail end of the second quarter and filled the gap with Reserves who allowed Garner only one basket in 3 minutes.

Too late in the last quarter the Shamrocks found their shooting eye as they racked up 15 points against 7 for Garner. The Cardinals won 46-36.

SHAMROCKS DRAW SCARVILLE IN SECTIONAL TOURNAMENT

Pairings have been made for the annual Sectional Tournaments which take place near the end of the current basketball season. The Shamrocks will play Scarville at Forest City. Other pairings include:

Class A: Garner vs. Buffalo Center, Forest City vs. Thompson.

Class B: Rake vs. Crystal Lake, Woden vs. bye, Scarville vs. Klemme, and Hayfield vs. bye.

Forest City, a state contender last winter should come through this tournament without any trouble and is again slated for the State. As to Class B, your guess is as good as any.

DEMPSEY CAFE TO HOLD OPENING SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Entirely Remodeled And IS Modernized Following Destructive Fire

Wm. Dempsey, proprietor of the Dempsey Cafe at Goodell, announces that his cafe is now ready again for business after being closed for several weeks following a destructive fire that gutted the building.

Mr. Dempsey's new business presents an entire "new look" as the building has been completely remodeled inside and outside. A new modernistic front has been built. The interior arrangement of the cafe has been changed and enlarged. New leather upholstered booths have been installed, new lunch counter, new fixtures and kitchen equipment. A large party room which will accomodate 30 people has been added.

Opening Day Saturday

Mr. Dempsey will hold his formal opening this week Saturday from 2:00 unil 5:00 p. m. when he will serve free coffee and doughnuts. He invites all to attend.

CARL SWANSONS TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE FOR SILVER ANNIVERSAY

Former Klemme Couple Will Celebrate At Farm Near Britt

Open house will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson of Britt to celebrate their Silver Wedding Anniversary on Sunday, December 17, 1950.

All friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson are invited to their home Sunday from 2:00 until 4:00 o'clock and in the evening from 7:00 until 9:00 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Swanson are well known here and they farmed near Klemme for a number of years before moving to the Britt community.

Moved To Klemme Community

Harry Draves and family of Rowan have moved to the Melvin Mosher farm southeast of Klemme. The Moshers held a farm sale and moved to Clarion where Mr. Mosher has a livestock purchasing business. We welcome the Draves family to our community.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Nuehring announce the birth of a baby daughter, weight 6 lbs. 10 oz. born Saturday, December 9 at the Mercy hospital at Mason City.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Dolder of Paton, Iowa are the parents of a 9 lbs. 3½ oz. baby boy born at the Lutheran Hospital at Ft. Dodge on November 28, 1940. Mrs. Dolder is the former Corrine Merkel of Klemme.

RECEPTION AND DANCE WAS HELD AT THE ALL VETS CENTER, CLEAR LAKE

Large Crowd Attended Dance Despite Bad Weather

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Christians of Klemme, were honored by a large crowd of friends and relatives at a reception and dance at the All Vets Center at Clear Lake on Wednesday evening, December 6th to celebrate the Silver Wedding anniversary of the couple.

Allen Barz of Klemme was master of ceremonies and the evening's festivities began with a quartette number, "Long, Long Ago" by Harley, Edward and Allen Barz and Ardel Rosendahl.

A historical sketch of Ed and Ann Christians was told by Allen Barz, starting with the couple's first date back in 1923 and going up through the years enumerating humourous incidents which happened. The quartette then sang two more numbers, "That's Where My Money Goes" and "Ain't Dat A Shame."

A mock wedding was staged with Lester Neuberger as the minister leading the procession, followed by the bride, Harvey Hubbard and the groom, Mrs. LaVern Christensen. Next came the broken hearted mother acted by Harold Christians and the shotgun totin' father, Mrs. Art Tibbets.

After the program dancing was enjoyed to the tunes of Earle's Rythm Band. During the intermission, treats were passed out to the crowd and a purse of silver was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Christians.

Were Married Here

Miss Ann Merkel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Merkel, and Edward Christians, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Christians, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Dec. 2, 1925 with the Rev. A. W. Guager, officiating. Ernest Merkel, cousin of the bride was bestman, and he and his wife of Champion, Nebraska came for the 25th anniversary. Mrs. Herman Merkel, formerly Grace Christians, was the Bridesmaid, and she also was present for the Silver Wedding anniverary, as also was Mr. Herman Merkel.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Christians began their housekeeping on their farm 3½ miles east of Klemme which was their home for 23 years and where they raised their family. Their children are Clarence, who is married; Raymond, who is in the U. S. Army; Lois Ann and James at home. They have one granddaughter, Ellen Sue Christians.

Mr. and Mrs. Christians moved to Klemme about two years ago and retired from their farm, where their son carries on. They are affiliated with the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Christians are active in community affairs, Mrs. Christians serving as president of the Music Mother 2 years ago.

SCHAEFER SELLS HORSES WEIGHING A TON EACH

Emery Schaefer, Forest City, former Klemme farmer "made" the picture section of the Sunday Register Magazine this past week.

In The Picture Magazine appeared a picture of Schaefer driving a team of Belgians. It was captioned "This Picture Sold 15 Head of Horses." The article then goes on to say: "When this photograph of a team of Belgians owned by Emery Schaefer of Forest City appeared in a trade publication it caught the attention of a lumber company manager in Ontario. As a result, the Canadian bought 15 Belgians through Schaefer, each one weighing more than a ton.

Obituary of Orville T. Stokesbary, 42

ORVILLE THOMAS STOKESBARY was born October 12, 1908 in Corwith, Iowa, the eldest of a family of four children born to his parents, George R. and Ella Halligan Stokesbary.

When Orville was seven years old the Stokesbary family moved to a farm in the Klemme community, where Orville attended a rural school and completed his public school training in the Klemme High School in 1928. His classmates were: Irene Carlson, Ethel Johnson, Golda Moberly, Harvey Nelson, Florence Stokesbary, Alvin Thieman, Donald Turgesen, Gladys Wilson.

In the fall of 1935, at the age of 27, Orville Stokesbary and Nova Koerner were married by Rev. Harvey Nelson at Lakota, Iowa. They commenced housekeeping in Klemme and later built a home of their own at the west edge of town. They are the parents of 3 children: Janice 11, Jerry 7 and Julie 5, and now after 15 years the family circle is broken by the passing of the husband and father.

Orville Stokesbary spent most of his life in this community and was a good citizen. He loved his family and home; his hobby was sports and he was manager of the Klemme Soft Ball Team since its organization a few years ago. He was employed as bookkeeper at the Northern Lumber Co.

About a year ago Orville Stokesbary became ill with a heart ailment, spent some time in a hospital, seemed to improve slowly until other complications brought his life to a close on the morning of December 9, 1950.

He reached the age of 42 years, 1 month and 27 days, and leaves besides his wife and 3 children, his parents Mr. and Mrs. George R. Stokesbary of Garner; one brother Geo. J. of Des Moines; two sisters, Florence, Mrs. Russel Bair, Mason City and Eva, Mrs. Truman Glassell of Garner, and other more distant relatives and friends.

"SING FORTH THE HONOR OF HIS NAME"

Christmas Legends Explain Origins Of Decorations

There are many legends concerning the origin of Christmas trees and why we decorate and cheerish them through the Yule season. And for many of us it would not seem like Christmas without a green and graceful fir standing in its place of honor in the living room, decorated with bright lights and stars.

Why the evergreen? The most beautiful legend of all goes like this:

As Christ lay in the manger after his birth, the wise men came to worship bringing their many gifts. Then came the shepherds and the people of the village to kneel and pray in the presence of this wonderful child.

After them came the trees to pay homage to the Christ child. First the native palms from the hills around Bethlehem, and then the stately maples and oaks and birches and hemlocks.

Then, last of all, timid because of his smallness, came a tiny fir from the frozen north. It was so small and modest that none paid any attention to it until suddenly a star dropped from the sky and twinkled on a bough of the tree.

Another and another fell until the little tree was the most beautiful of all—aglow as if from a celestial light.

Holly has become an accepted decoration for Christmas. Reference to it has been made in numerous stories and carols, such as:

"Deck the hall with boughs of holly

'Tis the season to be jolly!"

The custom dates back to the time of the ancient Romans who used holly in connection with the celebration of their Saturnalia which occurs about the same time as Christmas.

The holly tree was most beautiful at a time of year when other trees were barren and for that reason was ideal for decorations. And because it was most beautiful at Christmas time, many persons thought the tree must be sacred.

Correct Use of Water Keeps Holiday Greens Looking Fresh, Bright

JUST A LITTLE WATER, correctly used, is the answer to keeping Christmas greens fresh and bright throughout the holiday season.

Since the decorations are usually cut well before Christmas, they dry out rapidly unless given plenty of water. The greens not only look dilapidated, but form a serious fire hazard.

For many years it was thought necessary to use chemicals in water to keep the Christmas tree and other greens fresh and bright. It is known now, however, that water does the trick just as well.

To condition the house for better survival of Christmas greens, the first thing to do is to keep the heat down. High temperatures hasten drying by increasing the water loss from plants. Then, keep a pan or two of water on the radiator or heating stove to add moisture to the air.

Water house plants often during the Christmas season. Growing plants transpire a lot of water into the air.

These precautions will increase the humidity in the house and prolong the freshness of evergreen decorations.

Taking care of the Christmas tree itself is no more difficult.

Nail a small wooden base (6 inches square) to the bottom of the tree. Stand the tree in a pail of water. Weight the pail with gravel to hold the tree erect.

Trees kept standing in water will remain in good condition for as long as 30 days.

Body of St. Nicholas Buried at Bari, Italy

The body of Santa Claus—otherwise St. Nicholas, the onetime bishop of Myra in Asia Minor, is buried at Bari, Italy.

The body was stolen from its original tomb in Myra by Italian sailors in 1087 and taken to Bari Europeans in those days thought that a saint's body brought prosperity and good luck to the town where it was buried. For that reason it was stolen from Myra.

Household Hints

As soon as grease is spilled on the kitchen floor, pour ice water over the area immediately. That will make it harden before it has a chance to soak into the linoleum (or wood, for that matter), and you scrape it off with a dull, flat-bladed table knife.

Additional drainboard space can be acquired temporarily if you have drawers on each side of your sink under the permament drainboard. Just pull out the top drawer on each side, put a big tray on each one, and stack the dishes on them.

When linoleum becomes worn and dull looking, you may want to paint it. Linoleum manufacturers advise against this; paint manufacturers recommend it. No one seems to feel it can do any harm, but it's been proved that the paint will crack and peel before it's endured much traffic. If you're determined to go ahead with it, though, any ordinary enamel is all right for the job, provided you remove all wax first.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Vishinsky Names Only Conditions On Which Russia Will Make Peace; Weather Hampers Allies in Korea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Asia is the danger spot of the world today, most observers believe. The above map shows point of Communist aggression and countries being aided by the United States. China Reds now dominate Tibet, and observers theorized Nepal may be next.

UNITED NATIONS:

Formula for Peace

Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky in a slashing, abusing speech in the United Nations general assembly outlined a series of conditions which he said must be accepted before there could be world peace. He made it plain that there was no other possible ground for the settlement of east-west differences.

The main condition of Vishinsky's speech was the demand that the Chinese Communists be allowed a seat in the United Nations. Russia has long battled for admission of China in the U.N., but the tone of Vishinsky's speech was much stronger than it had been on other occasions.

The main points of Vishinsky's demands:

1. A pledge not to try to get around the veto.
2. Unconditional prohibition of the atomic-bomb.
3. Armed forces under exclusive control of the security council.
4. Aid to backward countries under international control.
5. Development of international trade without discrimination.

These were the demands reportedly given to Secretary-General Trygve Lie when he visited Prime Minister Stalin during his trip to Moscow in May. Lie's refusal to accept them is believed the reason the Russians opposed his re-election as secretary-general.

Many observers saw a threat in a part of Vishinsky's speech. He said if these demands were ignored it would be idle to think of peace being achieved through the U. N.

KOREA:

In Ice and Snow

In ice and snow, with the mercury often below zero, United Nations forces in Korea continued a slow advance against Communists troops.

Snow and ice made operations slow and dangerous. Supply routes far to the rear were blocked making it necessary to depend on air drops.

Military leaders reported approximately 100,000 Chinese and Korean Communists were established in a 60-mile line below the great hydro-electric plants on the Yalu river border between Korea and Manchuria. An all-out battle in the area was expected.

The advance has been carried out behind devastating air attacks by the U. S. air force.

American officers said the advance was progressing "well," but just how fast they go depends a great deal upon the weather. In many of the mountain passes wind had piled snow 10 to 12 feet deep

Meanwhile, the Russians are making new threats concerning the Korean conflict. Among other things, they charge that Japanese soldiers are now being used in Korea.

According to the Soviet, a Chinese-Russian treaty calls for their intervention whenever Japanese troops are used against the Chinese.

Some sources believed this could be another step in the Russian plan for justification of her throwing men and planes into the conflict. Others believe, however, that Russia would not take such a step.

NPA Chief

William H. Harrison, standing, national production administrator, ordered a 35 per cent reduction in civilian aluminum supplies and warned that the action will result in some unemployment and higher prices for aluminum products next year. The order is effective January 1, 1951.

DEFENSE:

Nerve Center Moved

The air force announced that headquarters for the nation's defense against air attack will be moved from New York to Colorado Springs, Colo. The move takes the nerve center of air defense of the U. S. 1,650 miles from the Atlantic ocean, deep into the interior for safety reasons.

The move emphasized the fact that the oceans surrounding the country are no longer a barrier against attack. The swing to the west also lent emphasis to the strategic concept that if present tension with Russia should erupt into World War III, the gravest danger of aerial blows against the United States would focus on the northwest "gateway."

Observers pointed out that guided missiles, conceivably with atomic warheads, could be fired from submarines lying a few miles off the present headquarters at Mitchell Field, N. Y., thus destroying the defense center with one blow.

The center now controls both the east and west air-defense forces. Some 800 military and civilian personnel will be assigned to the new center. Lt. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead will be in command.

EUROPE:

Prewar Production

Western Europe, with American aid, increased exports and industrial output above prewar levels, the economic co-operation administration announced.

The report was an encouraging trend in the west's battle against communism. The gains must be increased, however, to support the load of arming for defense against communism.

The E C.A. said: "The urgency to rearm has emphasized the importance . . for western Europe of continuing its progress toward the economic goals of the recovery program. The required expansion in military production cannot be achieved unless Europe's economic base is further strengthened."

WHOLESALE PRICES

Wholesale Index at All-Time High

The bureau of labor statistics reported wholesale prices hit an all-time high during the second week of November. The new index was an advance of .6 of a per cent in one week and was 8.7 per cent above the June 20 level, before the Korean fighting.

All commodities other than farm products and foods again advanced to another peak, 9.3 per cent above pre-Korean war levels. Hogs and steers continued to move in opposite directions. Hogs dropped while steers advanced to the highest point in 1950.

Steel-scrap prices which had not changed for two months advanced 50 cents a ton. Rubber prices, reacting to the war news, also advanced. Tin prices also fluctuated violently.

TRUMAN:

Champions Fair Deal

President Truman held a press conference and declared—in the face of G.O.P. claims that the November election had killed his fair deal—that he would continue to press for adoption of his whole program as long as he was president.

If the Republican party thought their victory had taken any of the starch out of the President they were disappointed. He said he would present his full program to the 82nd congress when it convened in January.

To the surprise of everyone present at the press conference he did not seem disturbed by Republican gains in congress. He brushed off his reverses as normal in a non-presidential year. He added that practically all the Republican victories could be traced to local situations. Most observers were inclined to agree with him in that respect.

Then the President got down to some definite statement.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson is going to keep his job— period.

General Douglas MacArthur reports that American troops in Korea have plenty of clothing.

Surveys are still going on to determine whether price and wage controls are necessary. They'll be imposed as soon as there is need for them, but he doesn't think the time has come.

He could be convinced this country should send an ambassador to Franco Spain, but he hasn't been convinced so far.

He doesn't agree with Taft's recent statement that higher taxes could lead to inflation.

There will be further conversations on the proposed Japanese peace treaty within a few weeks.

PROFITS LEVY

Battle Shapes Up

From all indications a severe battle is shaping up over President Truman's proposed $4 billion excess profits tax. The tax bill in all probability will be presented to the "lame duck" session of congress but the Prsident has no assurance that it will get approval, especially in the senate.

If the proposal fails in the "lame duck" session and is presented in the 82nd congress, observers believe Republican strength will show itself for the first time and a great many changes will be written into the bill.

As of the moment, the U. S. chamber of commerce branded the tax "un-American" and urged congress to cut Federal nondefense spending by at least $6 billion instead of approving the levy.

A Republican substitute for the bill was vetoed in the house ways and means committee. Democrats on the committee criticized the GOP proposal as one that would hit small business and favor corporations with income swollen by the defense program.

The President's plan calls for a tax of 75 per cent on excess profits of corporations, with the four-year period 1946-49 used as a yardstick to determine what profits are abnormal.

A barrage of other protests against the levy was received by the house ways and means committee.

All this would indicate that no action will be taken on the bill this year although it will be ready for consideration. What the new congress will do about the proposed tax is anybody's guess.

The battle will be bitter and may have a great influence on the 1952 presidential election.

Atomic Dogtag

Corp. Doris J. Apgar is shown with the army's new self-developing photographic dosimeter, a device which measures the extent of exposure of individuals to atomic radiation. The "atomic dogtag" is simple, inexpensive to produce and is worn about the neck. Readings can be obtained in about one minute after exposure to radioactive rays.

MINUTE MEN:

Ready for Action

A revolutionary defense plan was announced by defense department officials.

The plan called for millions of civilian "minute men," ready for immediate action, while the regular armed forces are building toward their projected three-million-man strength.

Military men reportedly believe that a three-million-man force will not meet defense needs.

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative— REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative — do as MILLIONS do — chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

A Prize Winner Every Time WITH RED STAR SPECIAL ACTIVE THE FIRST 3-WAY IMPROVED DRY YEAST

Winning Recipe in the first $100,000. Grand National Baking Contest, Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. H. W. Beckstahler, East Lansing, Mich.

Snow Ring

There are almonds, citron and currants between the braids of this coffee cake. The bread itself is wonderfully rich and good—made with eggs and butter. Mrs. Beckstahler suggests that it "may be decorated for seasonal holidays as desired, but is delicious by itself for any occasion."

Makes one large coffee cake.

Bake at 350° F. for 25 to 30 minutes.

Dissolve 1 cake compressed yeast (or 1 package dry granular yeast) in 2 tablespoons lukewarm water. Add 1 cup scalded milk, cooked to lukewarm, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1½ cups sifted Pillsbury's Best Enriched Flour*. Beat until smooth. Let Rise in warm place (85° to 90° F.) until light, about 30 min. Cream ½ cup butter (half shortening may be used) with 1 cup confectioners' sugar. Beat in 1 egg. 1 egg yolk and 1½ teaspoons salt. Add to risen yeast mixture. Blend in 2½ cups sifted Pillsbury's Best Enriched Flour. Beat for 2 minutes. Let Rise in warm place about 30 minutes. Divide dough into three parts. Roll each part between floured hands to make strips about 18 inches long. Lay dough on floured board and flatten slightly. Place ¼ cup blanched almonds down center of one strip, ¼ cup diced citron down center of next strip, ¼ cup currants down center of last strip. Seal fillings into dough by pinching edges together. Braid the three strips of dough and form in a circle on greased baking sheet. Insert ¼ cup almonds in dough between strips. Let Rise in warm place until light, about 20 to 25 minutes. Combine 1 egg white, 1 tablespoon water and brush over dough. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar while warm.

*If you use Pillsbury's Best Enriched Self-Rising Flour, omit salt.

STAGGER BREEDING DATES OF SOWS

That Will Avoid Pile Up Of Work In Spring

One way farmers can prevent their work from piling up next spring is to have sows farrow at intervals. They'll be able to give individual sows better care if this is done, and more efficient use can be made of farrowing equipment.

E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College, reminds farmers that they must control the breeding dates of the sows this fall if they want them to farrow at different periods.

Busy In April

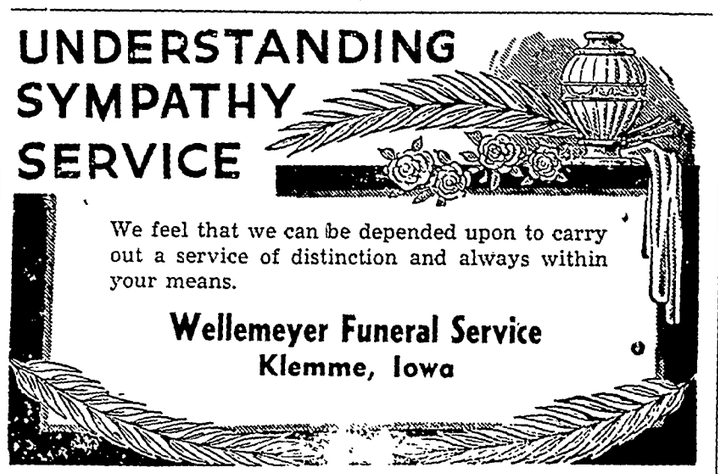
A lot of farmers have a large percentage of their sows farrow in April. From a labor standpoint, this is undesirable, as it usually comes at the same time as heavy field work. The result may be neglect of the sows and heavy baby pig losses.

Quaife also says that as a general rule, the earlier pigs are farrowed the higher price they will bring. He points to this fall's market prices as an example.

Early Sell Best

Early pigs brought up to $25 per hundredweight. The later ones are now selling for around $17.50 per hundredweight. This is a difference of $7.50, or $15 on a 200-pound hog.

Of course all farmers are not equipped to have their pigs farrowed early. However, they propably could have some early and space the rmained of the farrowings. This would even the flow of hogs to market and help make the price steadien over the entire marketing period, Quaife explains.



WATER AS IMPORTANT AS FEED FOR DAIRY COW

A cow that produces 40 pounds of milk will drink about 20 gallons of water a day if she has free access to fresh water at well temperature. But she won't drink that much if she has to quench her thirst on icy water.

The best time to water cows is after they have filled up on feed. Hungry cows won't drink, says Floyd Arnold, extension dairy husbandman at Iowa State College. They'll take on more water if farmers wait until shortly before bedtime for the evening watering. Then cows have had their feed and feel like drinking.

Water is as important as feed for dairy cows, Arnold says. Cows consume a large quantity of dry feed, and water is necessary in the digestion of this feed. But this isn't the only use that dairy cows have for water—it makes up 87 percent of the milk.

Arnold points out that dairy cows need all the water they can hold at least two or three times a day. When drinking cups are available cows will take a drink every 2 or 3 hours. So it pays dairymen to make a water system whereby well temperature water can be taken right to the cows. Water cups are the ideal means of doing this. When cups aren't available, a tub and a hose that's connected to the well will serve the purpose. Cows will drink more water then, and give more milk.

GRASS SEED SUPPLY UP, PRICES TO BE LOWER

The outlook for hay and grass seeds next year features above-average supplies and decreasing demand with lower prices likely for seed, reports Wayne Pearce, Iowa State College farm economist.

He says the back to grass' trend came to an abrupt halt with the beginning of hostilities in Korea and the increasingly dark international situation.

Greater production of most major crops is now being called for by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. All production controls have been lifted from cotton, wheat acreages have been expanded, and the 1951 corn crop is likely to be boosted considerably.

Pearce thinks this will set the grasslands program back several years and will cause a decline in demand for hay and grass seeds next year. Present seed supplies are 60 percent above the 5-year postwar average.

This past year the pasture and hay acreage was at its peak for the 5 years with acreage cut for seed increased by nearly a third.

WINTER BEEF COWS ON CHEAP FEEDS

Doesn't Pay To Keep Them On Top Condition

It seldom pays to use legume hay for more than half of the mature beef cow's winter feed. Only if there is a pleitful supply of relatively cheap legume hay will it pay to go over the half-way mark, explains Rex Beresford, Iowa State College livestock specialist.

The remainder of the ration can be made up of cheaper feeds. Studies in southern Iowa show that farmers generally feed their beef cows at higher levels and at a higher cost than is necessary.

Doesn't Hurt Calf Crop

These records show that winter feed costs where cows were kept in top condition on high-value feeds, were nearly double those of herds wintered mainly on stalk fields, straw, winter pasture and lower grade roughages, and then fed better roughages, grain and concentrate in late winter and spring. Beresfrod says there was no increase in the calf crop or cash return from the higher cost rations.

It takes from 1,300 to 1,500 pounds of total digestible feeds to winter dry beef cows well enough to gain in 5 months approximately the weight of the new calves.

Suggest Rations

A relatively cheap winter ration that meets these requirements is 1,200 pounds of clover hay, 1,500 pounds of corn stover, and 500 pounds of oat straw. This would contain about 8 percent digestible protein.

Another combination that serves the purpose is about 3,200 pounds of average clover and grass hay.

A ton and a half of high quality clover or average alfalfa furnishes the required amounts of total digestible feed needed, but the protein level will be higher than necessary.

Two tons of corn silage plus 1,500 pounds of legume hay, or 2½ tons of silage and 125 lbs. of one of the oilseed meals will meet the feeding requirements also, Beresford says.

These rations are only for mature beef cows. Yearlings need better feed.

IOWA ROAD PROGRAM

Iowa's road building program has two marks to its credit: it is now being operated on a pay-as-you-go plan with no indebtedness and the secondary road program is without equal in the nation.

The state now is well into the second year of the road program advocated by Governor William S. Beardsley and approved by the 53rd General Assembly. The program allots 60 million dollars a year for road improvement. Iowa is now spending about five times as much on primary road construction as it was two or three years ago. Iowa's secondary road program is now twice as large as it was a few years ago, and in the words of Chief Highway Engineer Fred White, "No other state in the union is going forward with a secondary road improvement program like Iowa's. There is nothing even approaching what Iowa is doing."

The Beardsley administration's pledge of better roads is being kept and the record not only proves that great headway is being made in making Iowa roads the best in the nation but that taxpayers are getting their money's worth

Killed In Gun Accident

A 19-year old Wapello youth was fatally injured in a hunting accident recently. Carl Murphy shot a squirrel, crippling it. In trying to kill the animal with the butt of his gun, Carl was mortally wounded in the abdomen when the weapon accidently discharged.

Same Week

At Nora Springs, a husband and wife died within a few hours of each other after long illness for both. They were Rev. and Mrs. Amil Oesterich, 83 and 73 years of age respectively. He was a retired Baptist minister. They were married in 1897.

Dunked

The ducks probably enjoyed this. As three Iowa hunters were returning to shore from their duck blind, strong winds and choppy waters capsized the boat and left them standing in icy water up to their shoulders. The three were Dr. Lloyd Meder of Elkader and two companions from Oelwein.

Pile-Up Near Independence

One accident led to another on the highway near Independence recently, with a total of five cars piling up after a car driven by Jack Busse of Winthrop hit a car driven by Earl Andrews. Two persons were given hospital treatment.

Fell From Car

Virginia Berg, age four, of Winterset, toppled from the family car on highway 92, near Bevington. The rear door came open, pulling Virginia out as the car moved down the pavement at about 40 miles an hour. She was unhurt. Danger from a following car was averted when the driver, Ted White of Cedar Rapids, whipped his car sharply and ran into a graded ditch.

TURN LOGS TO LUMBER FOR GREATEST PROFIT

There's a way to triple the yearly income from woodlots for farmers who sell stumpage rather than boards.

Dick Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College, says a good woodlot will bring in about $6 per acre each year on a long-term basis.

The farmer who cuts his own logs and sells them will jump his income up to $12 per acre every year. But it's the woodlot owner who harvests his logs and has them customed into lumber who gets the highest returns from his acreage. Campbell says this farmer will take in an average of $18 per year on each acre he has in trees.

This income can be upped more yet if the sawed lumber is used on the woodlot owner's own farm. Campbell estimates an average return of $33 per acre if trees are cut, sawed and used on the same farm rather than buying lumber to do the building. The returns per acre are over and above all harvesting expense except labor.

Christmas Ideas—Books For The VERY YOUNG

A new word is an exciting as a new toy to a little child, and a worn and favorite book is a dearly loved treasure.

A little boy or girl does his reading or book-looking strictly "for fun," but the by-products are important and varied. Books have been tagged all sorts of things—windows, doors, bridges, friends--and they are all these things and more to a youngster.

Small fry seldom ask for books in the beginning, but through constant exposure to them, they fall naturally into the category of pleasant necessities like food, toys and sunshine.

Upon first exposure, the very young may lose interest after a few minutes, fidget, wiggle and finally slide from your knee and toddle off. But sooner or later, he'll think of that book again, take hold of it and climb up on your lap with it for another story.

Active Books

Children like books that are active, that have bounce and rhythm, says Marjorie Clark, extension librarian at Iowa State College. They like a story with a plot or suggestion of a plot, not just a pretty picture on every page. For the little one who's still knee high to a grasshopper, however, big, interesting pictures strung together by a sentence or two fill the bill perfectly.

One of the many good picture books is Roger Duvoisin's "Petunia" about a duck that finds a book. Lois Lenski's "The Little Train" is another mostly for looking.

Little girls especially like stories about cuddly animals, and most small boys cherish the book about a train or boat or car. The guto and personality in Hardie Gramatky's "Little Toot," the story about the tugboat that is the bad boy of the river, make it a natural.

Let's look at the old favorites that have stood the test of time. The books are old, but the children are always new! Remember A. A. Milne's Winnie-the-Pooh stories and the ridiculous and adorable adventures of Pooh and Owl? And Peter Rabbit's adventures in Farmer McGregor's garden, The Three Little Kittens Who Lost Their Mittens, and all those other rhymes put to picture?

Familiar Books

Books that show with clarity, vitality and homor the things a child is likely to see and do himself appeal to him.

He also likes to see and read or be read to, about the outlandish things he has an urge to do. A little boy, for instance, will dearly love Ruth Kruss' "The Backword Day," all about a little boy who does things backwards all day long, with his parents joining in the fun.

Some wonderfully laughable and charming tales are woven in Dr. Suess, rhythmic books: "If I Ran The Zoo," "McElligot's Pool" and "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins." Your 4-year-old and over will love them and you'll find them timeless.

A novel and charming interpretation of the traditional tale of Christmas is Dorothy Kunhardt's "Once There Was A Little Boy" that brings the Christ child very close to your younster. Here he is pictured as a little boy with all the curiosity, bounce and lively interest of children everywhere

Your own local librarian is the perfect person to consult during your search for good books for your tots. And an excellent source of enjoyment and many more ideas is Annis Duff's "Bequest of Wings," which tells of a family's pleasures with books

Martin Krier of Washta escaped serious injury recently. A hunting companion, Paul Beazley, blazed away at a pheasant and brought it down, but wounded Mr. Krier in the face and hand.

FEED PRICES MAY GO UP IN 1951

Protein feed is plentiful now but the outlook is for prices to continue high, with the best buys probably coming this fall.

A larger 1951 spring pig crop and increased number of other livestock on farms may mean there will be slightly less protein feed per head of livestock in 1951 according to county extension director, Paul Henderson.

He reports that total oilseed coke and meal production will be about equal to last year, although a large part of it will be made from soybeans. Animal protein feed supplies in 1951 may run 5 to 10 percent more than last year. Wheat mill-feed supplies will be about equal to those of last year, with a possibility that imports of Canadian feed wheat may boost expected domestic supplies.

More livestock on farms during the 1950 and '51 feeding season also are expected to cause disappearance of slightly more corn than the 3.2 billion bushels consumed this year. In fact, the 1951 carry-over may be reduced by from 200 to 300 million bushels, most of which will come from government owned stocks at prices considerably higher than the loan level.

The carryover of old grain is large with the corn carryover of about 860 million bushels being the largest in history. On Oct. 1, Iowa had 160 million bushels of old corn on farms and 110 bushels of corn stored in other locations, largely in government bins.

Henderson says corn prices are likely to average above or close to the average Iowa farm loan rate of $1.41 for the 1950-51 feeding year with feeding ratios about average or slightly higher.

Hay is plentiful in the state this year, with an estimated 6.7 million tons—nearly 2 million tons more than last year. The nation's hay crop also is up 8 percent, with no shortage spots being reported.

BLOW TORCH BEST FOR THAWING FROZEN PIPES

The hot words usually provoked by frozen water pipes aren't too effective in getting them thawed out, observes Carroll Worlan, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

He says the blow torch provides the fastest method to remove ice, although it should be used only where there is no danger of fire.

A good test is to hold a hand next to the wall where the blowtorch is being used. If the hand doesn't get too warm, the blowtorch can be used safely, but if it does, another method should be employed.

The reason is that dust or dirt in the cracks and crevices of the walls may be ignited. This material can smoulder for several days before finally bursting into flames. The presence of oil or grease in the area where the blowtorch is being used can add to the fire danger.

Worlan also offers another caution to blowtorch users. The flame shoudn't be held in one spot too long. The steam formed will build up pressure if both ends of the pipe re frozen, and the pipe may burst.

Heating cable offers another method for thawing pipe as well as keeping it from freezing. This is a new and safe method which is effective although somewhat expensive. The cable can be wrapped around the pipe and plugged in to an outlet. It can be left on the pipe to prevent freezing or it may be moved to another location.

Heat lamps and hot water are other means of forestalling expensive damages to water pipes. The agricultural engineer warns against using electric welders. Both the welder and transformer may be injured if the welder is used for more than a few seconds at a time.

Fox Shot Stealing

When Lowell Dempster of near LeMars shot a pheasant recently, a fox ran up, grabbed the bird and attempted to run away with it. The animal's attempt to act as a "retriever" did him no good, however; Mr. Dempster shot him, too.

POULTRY FLOCKS DOWN IN 1951, EGGS STILL PLENTIFUL

With an egg-poultry feed price ratio that will be less favorable in 1951 and the number of pullets already down 6 percent from last year, the egg output during the first half of 1951 will be slightly lower next spring, with a sharp drop by next fall. More hens kept over this fall will hold up egg production this winter.

In fact the drop in winter and spring egg production will be less production than the number of eggs the government bought and took off the market in 1950, County Extension Director Paul Henderson explains. The secretary of agriculture must decide upon egg supports for 1951 and his decision will be announced in December. Unless the government supports eggs, prices will be at least 5 cents per dozen below those of last year. The U. S. Department of Agriculture bought 10 percent of the 1950 spring egg output, Henderson points out.

If farmers raise fewer pullets in 1951 and cull old hens, we should have a greater than usual drop in egg production in late 1951. This would mean a greater autumn price rise for eggs.

Henderson says economists look for a bigger supply of poultry meat this coming year. Fewer chickens will be raised on farms but increases in commercial broiler production will more than offset the drop. In fact, the county's broilers now exceed farm-raised chickens.

Turkey numbers may be about equal to the 1950 record total with no price supports in sight for the 1951 turkey crop. However, poultry meat prices are expected to rise during the coming year in sympathy with red meat prices.

To "eat like a bird" would mean to eat one's own weight in food every day.

It's just as well that the Max Davis family at Sumner slept late one Sunday recently. About 7 o'clock, while the family was still abed, a stray rifle bullet came through the dining room window, passed through a chair and became imbedded in the wall of the living room.

Costly Prank

It was a costly prank at Remsen recently. A teen-age youth threw a "de-railer" during a switching operation in the Illinois Central yards and threw a freight engine off the track. It took 30 men 14 hours to get the engine back on the rails, at a cost to the railroad of around $2,000.

VITAMIN "A" NEEDED TO PREVENT CALF SCOURS

The lack of vitamin A and many of the intestinal infections of newborn calves, such as white scours, go hand in hand. A deficiency of this vitamin in a calf can be traced to faulty feeding of the dam and an insufficient rest period before calving.

One means of preventing the white scours is to feed cows enough vitamin A in the form of good, leafy legume hay, says Dr. J. B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

The disease can occur as the result of a combination of nutritional deficiencies, bacterial invasion and faulty feeding practices.

Herrick adds sanitation is of utmost importance in raising healthy calves. The cow's udder should be scrubbed before calfing, and the maternity pen should be clean so the calf will not ingest organisms that can cause scours. Dirty feeding pails, overfeeding, irregular in feeding and extreme variation in milk temperature at feeding time all tend to increase the danger of some form of scours.

White scours can appear in the epidemic form, spreading to most of the nearby calves. If the attack lasts more than a week, pneumonia usually developes, Herrick says. The disease hits calves up to about 25 days of age.

Sulfa drugs can be helpful in combating white scours, but they should be administered by a veterinarian, Herrick says. If sulfa is given for two long a period, it causes harmful kidney changes.

Veterinarians have found that blood transfusions from the dam at the time of a calf's birth serve to prevent white scours. There are also some specific serums that have given good results.

DEC. 15 DEADLINE FOR SOYBEAN YIELD REPORTS

Harvest reports for the Iowa Master Soybean Growrs' Contest are due in the office of the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers Association, Ames, before Dec. 15, remind Joe L. Robinson, secretary.

The soybean yield contest is conducted by the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers Association in cooperation with local fraternal orders, chambers of commerce, elevator, soybean processing plants and local cooperatives. The idea of the contest is to get farmers interested in cultural methods that increase yields. These orgnizations present outstanding growers with awards for their achievements.

Winner of the 1949 soybean yield contest was Albert Horras, Richland, Iowa, who turned out 46.98 bushels of soybeans per acre to win the coveted Sand trophy and a number of cash awards.

Prizes awarded are the John Sand trophy for the top grower; the Iowa Soya silver plaque for the second high grower, and the Iowa Cooperative Soybean Processors bronze plaque for the third-place grower.

Announcement of the 1950 winners will be made at the Crop Improvement Day to be held at Iowa State College in February, 1951.

GRADE "A" MILK IS MORE PROFITABLE TO FARMER

One of the purposes of farming is to make money. Iowa State College dairy industry extension men have done some figuring, and as a result they've come up with a way to earn about 90 percent on a long-term investment the first year.

Farmers who can sell milk to dairies that distribute grade A milk may get all the way from 50 cents to $1.30 per hundred pounds more for their milk if it is grade A rather than manufacturing grade.

Suppose a farmer with 10 cows gets 250 pounds of milk per day. If the difference between grade A milk and manufacturing grade averages $1 per hundred, he can make $2.50 per day extra by producing grade A rather than the lower grade. During a year this means he would take in over $900 more by selling grade A milk.

To do this he woold have to remodel his barn and install a mechanical cooler, water heater and any other minor changes necessary to qualify for grade A milk production. A. W. Rudnick says this seldom cost more than $1,000.

This investment would make it possible to sell grade A milk and take in $900 extra each year, or 90 percent on the original investment.

TRACTOR NEEDS EXTRA CARE IN COLD WEATHER

Tractors have a lot of odd jobs to do during the winter, and it's these odd jobs that sometimes cause winter operation troubles in tractors. On short runs, too murh water may reach the oil, forming sludge. This can cause much water may reach the oil, lines or screens, says D. O. Hull, Iowa State College extension agricultural engineer.

When a motor warms up, water is formed by sweating and condensing. About a gallon of water forms for every gallon of gasoline that is burned, Hull says. Most of the water vapor passes out through the exhaust pipe, but some of it will reach the oil by blowing past the pistons. Then it condenses on the cold metal of the crankcase. A gray or "milky" colored oil is a danger signal since it indicates the presence of water.

If the engine is kept warm enough to keep the oil temperature above 142 degrees this moisture will be thrown off through the crankcase ventilator, avoiding crankcase sludge. Hull also suggests warming the tractor up fast by closing the radiator shutter tightly. Run the engine until it reaches the operating temperature before putting it under load. This will expel most of the water that's formed in the crankcase.

Most tractors are now factory-equipped with thermostats to speed warm-up and maintain the radiator temperature at 160 to 180 degrees. Farmers who are troubled with a tractor that warms up slowly should check the thermostat, Hull says.

It's also important to drain the oil often during the winter, and draining should be done when the engine is warm. This will assure the use of clean oil that's free of sludge and water. During the crop season there is little danger of oil contamination because tractors work for long periods at a time.

STORM WINDOWS WILL SAVE FUEL

There is still a long seige of winter ahead for Hancock County farmers, and County Extension Director Paul Henderson urges anyone who hasn't put on storm windows and doors to do so at once.

He has some figures from Sherwood DeForest, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, that show storm windows and doors on a house can save as much fuel during the winter months as a 1 inch layer of insulation in the ceiling or roof.

Henderson also urges checking around windows and door frames to make sure they fit tightly. Air leaks should be closed with calking.

For a good job, the county extension director suggests packing the large cracks with oakum, jute, or similar material, and then covering this with calking compound.

Small cracks can be closed with the calking compound alone applied with a putty knife or calking gun.

Once the air leaks have been sealed, loose-fitting windows and doors should be weatherstripped. Henderson says the best long-time service will be obtained from metal weatherstripping of either the flat "contact" type or the interlocking kind. Felt contact strips will do for short-time use.

HARVEST POOR TREES, LET GOOD ONES GROW

Farmers like to keep their best livestock for breeding purposes. They build up a good herd that way. And the same thing applies to harvesting trees in the woodlot, says E. T. Gardiner, extension forester at Iowa State College.

Harvest the poorer trees out of the woodlot, he advises. This will leave more space for the good trees to grow and develop. If farmers harvest only scrub trees they'll soon have a woodlot that's growing trees which will make top-grade lumber.

On the other hand, if only the best trees are harvested, the woodlot will end by growing little more than junk. Gardiner call this practice "creaming the woodlot." It leaves only the "separated milk" for future use.

The extension forester urges farmers to take good trees only when they are mature. This means they should be full grown. Woodlot owners can tell when trees have reached maturity by watching for signs of deterioration, such as top killing.

STATE TREES AVAILABLE FOR 1951 PLANTING

Landowners who wish to obtain forest seedlings, multiflora rose and wildlife plants from the State Forest Nursery for 1951 spring plantings may place orders now with local county extension directors, soil district farm planners, and conservation officers.

The State Conservation reports that the supply of multiflora rose is larger than last year. Tree seedlings available include: black locust; green ash, black walnut seeds, red pine, Virginia pine, and jack pine. Also available are wildlife plants which include wild plum, wild grape, Siberian pea, dogwood, and Russian olive.

Prices are $15.00 per thousand for multiflora rose and pine seedlings; $1.25 per 250 black walnut seeds; $8.50 per thousand for all other plants. Plants cannot be purchased for landscaping or ornamental purposes, but are available for erosion control and wildlife plantings.

Applications will be received up to March 15, but those who wish seedlings are urged to place orders early. Planting stock will be delivered C.O.D. express. Applicants will be notified when the stock is shipped from the nursery.

GAME STORAGE PERMITS FREE

In cooperation with the Cold Storage Locker Association, the State Conservation Commission is making every effort to assist hunters in the legal storage of game and, at the same time, every effort is being made to prevent illegal storage. All game in Iowa must be disposed of within ten days after the close of the season unless a storage permit has been secured. Under permit game, except waterfowl, may be held until June 30 of the following year. Permits may be issued to hold migratory waterfowl 90 days beyond the close of the season.

To store game beyond ten days after the seasons close, simply ask your locker operator for an application blank, fill it out, and mail it to the State Conservation Commission, 914 Grand, Des Moines 9, Iowa. All locker plants have been supplied with permit applications. They cannot, however, grant the permit. It is issued directly from the State Conservation Commission office with and no charge. Game held in lockers may at no time exceed the legal possession limit and permits will be granted for each license under which game is taken.

TRAPS STILL BEST FOR MOUSE CONTROL IN THE HOME

The old-afshioned mousetrap is still the best thing to use for controlling mice in the house, according to Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

The use of poisons should be confined to buildings outside the house. There are two main reasons for this. The first is that children and household pets might get the poison unsuspectingly and the other is that the poisoned mice usually die in the house and will cause undesirable odors.

Henderson recommends using no less than 6 traps if a mouse campaign is going to be successful. That is true even if there is only one mouse in the house.

For best results, these should each be baited with a different kind of bait. Ordinary wheat flour, corn meal, peanut butter, bacon rind, cotton, and cheese are all good baits.

The place to locate the traps is next to the walls in the kitchen and in other rooms where food is kept, or where mice have been seen. The work table is also a good location.

Traps should be kept baited and in good shape as long as they are catching mice. If there are cracks or crevices in the walls of the house where mice might enter, traps should be left there indefinitely, according to mouse control measures outlined for Henderson by Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist. The dry baits such as flour or cotton are the best baits for these.

If there are a large number of cracks it will pay to get some caulking material and fill them up. This will prevent mice from entering and will also keep out weather this winter.

New Operation Cures Deformity Of Heart Valve

DENVER, Colo.—"I climbed a 40-foot tower at 10,000 feet", the father of a large family proudly told a group of heart specialists.

Only a few weeks earlier this same man with a case record of being hospitalized twenty-nine times because of heart trouble told his doctor, "Doctor, if you threw a thousand dollars at my feet I couldn't bend down to pick it up without fear that I'd pass out."

What had brought about this radical change in a man who was practically doomed to invalidism as result of a heart condition?

It dates back almost two years ago when Dr. Charles Bailey, famous Philadelphia surgeon, literally poked his finger through the patient's heart, giving surgery a new operation to combat mitral stenosis, a deformity of the mitral valve of the heart.

First of Its Kind

The first of its kind in the vast Rocky Mountain region was performed at Denver's National Jewish Hospital, pioneer, free, non-sectarian tuberculosis institution opened in Denver more than a half-century ago. A total of four mitral stenosis operations have been undertaken so far by NJH surgeons.

"Although we are a hospital primarily devoted to the treatment of tuberculosis and allied chest diseases," a hospital medical spokesman said, "we know what concerns the heart must concern the lungs."

The mitral valve is located on the left side of the heart and lies between the left auricle and left ventricle. The function of this vital valve is to allow blood to flow from the left auricle to the left ventricle so that the body gets its quota of the heart's blood supply.

Mitral stenosis occurs when the valve gets deformed, impeding the proper flow of blood. Briefly it can be compared to the improper working of an automobile valve.

Delicate Operation

The operation can be explained simply although its skillful execution is a matter of highly specialized technique.

The surgeon's knife is attached to his finger. Carefully he inserts his finger into the left auricle, feeling for the mitral valve. Then, when he feels the valve, he allows the knife to slip past his finger tip and in one motion opens the valve so that once more the blood can properly nourish the body.

"This operation cannot always be performed," the NJH spokesman cautioned. "It is of extreme importance that many tests of the patient's heart be made before surgery."

But a mitral stenosis operation could be given at NJH to this Colorado father who now can climb a forty-foot tower—Thanks to the skill of surgery that goes deep into the pulsating heart.

First 1950 Grand Canyon Trip Ends Without Accident

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. — The first Grand Canyon evpedition of 1950 was completed without serious accident.

Otis Martson, William Belknap and Wilson Taylor arrived at Pierce's Ferry after a 346 mile trip through the mile deep canyon.

The trip was made in a power boat, the Hudson. Similar river trips have cost 10 lives since the first was tried in 1869.

Seven originally started the trip. Joseph Deslodge and Guy Forcier left the party as planned. Ed Hudson and his son, Ed., Jr., left the party when one of the expedition's two boats, the Esmeralda, had to be abandoned in the mile deep Grand Canyon. Both were rescued by helicopter. The craft carrying the elder Hudson crashed on its attempt to lift him out of the gorge and he was slightly injured. After one night on a small ledge, he was plucked out of the canyon by another helicopter.

It was the intuition of Mrs. Marston that brought about the quick rescue of the Hudsons. Feeling that something was wrong with the expedition, she chartered a helicopter which sighted the Hudson's SOS in the canyon.

It was the second time a boat powered with an engine has conquered the river.

Psychologist Says Life Dull Without Troubles

BOSTON—A Boston University psychologist believes that without troubles life would be unbearably dull.

"It is impossible to achieve perfect peace of mind, and even if it were, it would be undesirable," says Dr. Wayland F. Vaughan. "Troubles make life more interesting."

"The man who meets his problems face to face, gets much more enjoyment out of life than even partial peace of mind would bring," he says. "Licking problems not only gives you guts and confidence to tackle the next ones, but it makes you a kinder and more sympathetic person."

He added, "Marriage and children brings a richness of living that surpasses any peace of mind."

IOWA TRAP LINES PRODUCE FINE FUR

If Santa should bring a mink scarf or a sheared beaver coat to your house, this Christmas, treat it like an old friend and neighbor.

Those pelts may have come from Iowa.

The Tall Corn state hardly seems like the Far North, in most of our mental maps. But its fur catch is usually bigger than that of Alaska, and Iowa ranks among the ten most important states in the annual fur crop.

Trappers are busy right now harvesting this year's crop of furs. The 15-day season on muskrat, mink and beaver opened November 25, and closes on December 9th. Season on other fur animals—raccoon, opossum, skunk, badger and civet cat—opened November 10, and runs through January 10th.

More beavers are expected to enter the garmet business this season than in any year in recent history. This is the second year there has been an open season on the busy little builders, and the season is twice as long as last year's. Official estimates of the beaver catch this year run as high as four and five thousand. Last year, beaver pelts sold for about $12 each.

Muskrat and mink have been the mainstays of the Iowa fur business, in previous years. In the last two years, each of the furs accounted for one-third of Iowa's total fur income. Last year—a low year in the fur market—172,000 muskrat pelts sold for $218,371, and 18,000 mink skins brought -218,371.

Iowa mink and beaver are of good quality for fur garments, in the opinion of furriers, and Iowa muskrat is fairly good. Racoon is becoming popular again, for the new sheared raccoon cats, and Iowa coon skins find a ready market.

Few fur garments are made entirely of Iowa skins, though. Furs vary so much in color that pelts from all parts of the country are sent east to big matching centers, and then bought in matched lots.

Iowa has a dozen furriers, with about 300 employees. They assemble between eight and ten thousand fur garments a year—and many more ready-to-wear fur garments are shipped in.

Seven-year old Ronald Warner, of Iowa Falls, may lose the sight of his left eye. The orb was injured when he was shot by a bow-and-arrow in the hands of a younger brother.

Shotgun Injury

When his double-barrelled gun fell from his hand, Ted McGehee of Mount Ayr was seriously wounded in the armpit recently. The safety catch hit on a railroad tie, allowing the weapon to discharge.

AROUND IOWA

Called Off

Coeds of the girls dormitory at Wartburg College in Waverly recently staged a demonstration, in protest of a rule which required freshmen girls to be in their rooms at 8:00 p. m. and prevented them from using the library. The demonstration was called off when the girls learned that the desired privilege had been granted two months previously!

Too Many

Lawrence Sasse of Griswold brought his cows into the barn after dark recently and found he had an extra number of animals. Two of them proved to be deer which had joined the flock.

Havoc

When a Clarion women returned to her home recently an afternoon away, she found that a squirrel had gained entrance to the house and made a shamble of it. Curtains were torn up and fruit from the kitchen table was scattered about the dwelling.

Assist

When Santa Claus gets to Europe, he will have an "assist" from Mrs. Inga Steele, of Belmond. Since 1945 Mrs. Steele has sent Christmas gifts for the entire community of Noro-Solvar, in Norway, which has had hard sledding since the Nazi invasion.

Butter

At the Waukon co-operative creamery recently, the one-millionth pound of butter was turned out, since the first of the year.

SAE 20 oil, it takes two half times as much pow- rn over a motor when it as it does in 80-degree temperature.

Woolsoncroft adds, a battery that shows 25 percent charge when it is 85 degrees outside, can freeze and break at zero degrees temperature. The only safe way is to keep the battery well charged.

That battery on the combine, hay chopper or other implements may be in for trouble, too, if it's still out there. Wet cell batteries slowly discharge when standing idle. Woolsoncroft suggests taking unused batteries into the basement or some other cool place after they have been fully charged.

Keep Water Up

Keep water up over the plates at all times. Use pure water such as distilled water or a good grade of drinking water that is free from sediment, Woolsoncroft advises. But remember, that the hydometer reading will go down when fresh water is added. To avoid the danger of freezing, it's a good idea to charge the battery for a while after adding water.

Farmers will get the maximum power from their batteries if they keep all cable connections clean. Woolsoncroft suggests using ammonia or baking soda in water for a cleaning agent. Scrub the cable connections and battery posts with a stiff-bristle brush. Then rinse with clear water and grease the posts with a mineral grease or vaseline.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

Our Christmas tree arrived this week and we have been very busy trimming the tree. Each of the boys and girls made a decoration for the tree. On Thursday we were busy stringing cranberries and making paper chains.

This week we started our first reading readiness books. The name of our book is "Reading Pictures." The book has many interesting pictures, which tell a story about Jane, Dick and Baby David. The children in our story books have an interesting pet monkey named Winkey. The boys and girls enjoy talking about the pictures.

The children have been making spatter painting pictures of Christmas scenes. This is their first experience with spatter painting. They have been doing a very nice job.

Second Grade News

The weather has kept us in all day most of this week but no one has minded much because we have been so busy with our tree decorating and gift making at noon and recess. We even made "Rudolph" with the help of a small model on a graph. He has a bright red bulb at the end of his nose.

In language we answered Keith Voigts' letter that we received this week. Rosemary Medin's was chosen to be sent, as it was the neatest. We also drew some pictures to send to Wayne Schlichting and Jerry Kropp, who are still out of school.

Third Grade News

We are happy to have Lowell Greiman back to school after a few days absence with the chicken pox.

We have completed our Christmas decorations. We have made a Santa Claus which now have been hung on one side of the wall. He is painted red and black trimmed in white cotton.

We also have made bells and put arms and legs on them. We have trimmed them with green holly.

Our Christmas tree is now in our room. The children have fixed it up by themselves.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

During the week we have been doing much dictionary work and have decided we can just about look up any word. Because we have worked so hard we have decided we could use the following for a slogan: Our dictionary never grows dusty from lack of use.

Friday we decorated the Christmas tree for our room. Some of us were busy stringing cranberries and a few were making stars and some of us even strung animal crackers but for some reason not many got on the tree.

Vickie Bridges came to school Wednesday with her brother, Gaylon, to celebrate her fourth birthday. Vickie had treats for all of us and then we played "Fruit Basket Upset."

Mrs. Paul Stromer Made A Correction In News Story

The Times was pleased to reeive a letter from Mrs. Paul Stromer of New Underwood, South Dakota, enclosing a check for another year's subscription.

Mrs. Stromer says The Times erred somewhat in reporting the sale of the Stromer farms northwest of Klemme. She states that Mr. Mitchell Schroeder of Galt, Iowa, handled the transaction for the sale of the farm, and not John Chambers or the Courson Realty Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Stromer are former residents of this community and now operate a ranch in South Dakota.

BILL OF RIGHTS

Americans Are Protected From Censorship by Bill of Rights

This is the second of a series of three articles on the Bill of Rights and Bill of Rights day which will be celebrated December 15.

Censorship is something that Americans simply don't believe in. It is a word synonymous with dictatorships, calling to mind Hitler's infamous book burning of yesterday and the Soviet iron curtain of today.

Most Americans agree censorship is contrary to the spirit of free expression and inquiry set forth in our Bill of Rights, yet it does exist in the United States.

Censorship is one of the most hated words in America. In modern days it calls to mind Hitler's infamous book burning (above) of yesterday and the Soviet iron curtain of today.

These thoughts were expressed by Patrick Murphy Malin, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, in a statement issued on Bill of Rights Day, December 15. This day marks the 159th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights.

"We have censorship of plays, books and magazines by public and private agencies. Of course, obscenity must be guarded against, but these groups go much further. They may seek to suppress expression of political ideas or views. Our children learn that the right to inquire is rooted in the Declaration of Independence, yet the New York Board of Education bans their reading of The Nation magazine because of an article criticising the Catholic church. "Banned in Boston" is a familiar phrase. Certain books and plays have been banned there because its content has been considered offensive by certain authorities. Not so familiar is the startling fact that in 90 American cities, political appointees, following the criteria of personal opinion, tell their neighbors what movies they can or cannot see."

* * *

LITTLE BROTHER to censorship is blacklisting, denying employment to people because of their political views. This was recently brought into vogue by Red Channels, a booklet listing radio performers suspected by the publishers of Communist sympathies Despite the publishers' denial that Red Channels was intended as a factual bible, one major television sponsor suspended a player for being among the red-listed. Contrary to the American spirit of fair play, she had no hearing or a chance to defend herself.

We have an able set of laws to prosecute abusers of free speech, Mr. Malin said, which really can curb subversive acts. Industry self-checks such as the movies' National Board of Review maintain high moral standards in the communications fields. "Setting up arbitrary judges to suppress ideas before they are expressed is the way of dictators. Censorship is contrary to the nature of democracy, where free people can be trusted to select the wheat from the chaff for themselves."

two years; her current picture is "Deported" She was just finishing a cross-country tour for it when she was summoned back to Hollywood. U-I had lent her out for "Sirocco", in which she will appear opposite Humphrey Bogart. Miss Toren will be seen as a dancer in a Damascus cafe—easy for her; she began studying ballet when she was four.

Robert Ryan will have the leading role in "Clash by Night", when RKO films the play. Talullah Bankhead starred in it, and Ryan had a small part; his performance got him his present long-term contract at RKO.

Smith and Dale, for many years a top vaudeville act, have been signed for important roles in "Two Tickets to Broadway". They were the nucleus of the famous Avon Comedy Four; it took television to revive their popularity.

Tol Avery, on the other hand, can thank radio for his debut in motion pictures, in "Where Danger Lives" Director John Farrow heard his voice on the air, and signed him to support Faith Domergue and Claude Rains.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Anne Seymour, who was so good as Brod Crawford's wife in Columbia's "All the King's Men", has been signed for a key supporting role in "The Whistle at Eaton Falls" . . . John Payne has signed to star in six more Pine-Thomas films; he last worked for them in "Tripoli" . . . Don "Little Brown Jug" Reynolds, expert boy rider and actor who has appeared in several Gene Autry westerns, will have a featured role in "Snake River Desperados."

THE FICTION CORNER

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

By Ona Freeman Lathrop

THE OLD FELLOWS sat on the concrete wall that bordered the court-house lawn. The sun broiled down warm and golden, but the autumn air was cool. The one in the clean striped shirt and blue serge hitched his suspenders higher.

3-Minute Fiction

"Times ain't what they used to be when I was young," he asserted to the man next him. "Prices 'way out o' sight, all sorts of machinery to do the farm work, young folks kitin' around in cars—why, when I was a young buck you took your best girl for a buggy ride behind a pair of fast bays, or you went to Funk's Grove or the Mackinaw for a day's picnic and it didn't cost you a cent. Nowadays my grandson wouldn't start out on a date without five or ten dollars in his pocket!" He looked up the street.

"Yep," the other one agreed, tilting his straw sailor back and tucking his blue shirt into his shiny grey striped trousers. "Things move too fast for me. We don't get through one war till we're startin' another one, and them politicians down in Washington are runnin' the country to the dogs. Now when McKinley was in—"

A girl switched by in white shorts and a striped jersey. His sentence hung in mid-air, forgotten. The endless procession of cars whizzed around the square, their tires sizzing on the hot asphalt. The city busses lined up in front of the drug store.

They shook their heads sadly.

The first one kept peering out Washington street toward the depot. "Yeah, this is a crazy age! You see new houses springing up over night out in the new additions. Look like freight cars sprawled all over the lots—no upstairs, no cellars! Fancy gadgets in the kitchens. Give me the old days and not such a fast pace!"

Their conversation was forgotten for a moment as a girl in white shorts and a striped jersey walked past. Times sure had changed.

The other one queried, "What's your name and where do you hail from?"

"Well now, that's a long story." He shifted to the other hip as if to tell it, then grinned. "But nobody's interested in it nowadays, so I never tell it. I'm Clem Mason. Lived here all my life, and hope to die here. I've watched this town grow from a cross-roads, and hardly been across the state line. And you?"

THE OTHER FELLOW's eyes narrowed as if he were seeing faraway places. "Name's Jed Whitcomb. Traveled a bit in my day. Went to Chicago once. Lived out in the country till my wife died last year. I like the town, but nothin' seems as good as it used to be. Too much bustle and rush."

There was a long silence while they watched a cab maneuver in and out of traffic. A woman driver and the usual delivery trucks were double-parking and gumming up the works. Horns blasted and women scurried across the crossing.

"Yep," Clem answered, his eyes still squinting up the street watching for something, "give me the good old days. A fellow could saunter down to the harness shop or the livery stable to chin a bit and not be in danger of his life. Nowadays I just sit here and don't try to navigate very far. Hate to even ride around with my grandson in the car. Too dang dangerous!" He eyed the corner anxiously.

"You're right," Jed answered. "Nothin' much to do, either. No more chatauquas or medicine shows. No camp meetin's.

A swank blue convertible drew up to the curb. A sporty young fellow leaned out and called to Clem. "Hi, Gramps. I've been out to the airport and the station. I got your plane reservations and your pullman tickets. Everything is all set."

Clem got up hastily. He looked at Jed apologetically. "My son in Washington, D. C. has sent for me to come down and see the sights. He's paying all my expenses or I'd never go Can we drop you off any place?"

Jed rose too. "Nope. I've got my scooter-bike parked around the corner and I'll just put-putt back to my daughter's. There's a good television program comes on pretty soon that I never miss."

Christmas Seal Idea Conceived By Danish Clerk

Credit for conceiving the idea for Christmas seals belongs to a Danish postal clerk, Einer Holboell, who in the holiday season of 1903 was sorting mail in the postoffice of Copenhagen. As he went through the stacks of Christmas mail, it occurred to him that if each sender bought a sticker and attached it to each package, the proceeds would aid in fighting tuberculosis and add color to the gifts.

He mentioned it to some of his fellow workers. The scheme appealed to them and it was passed along through the office. The clerks discussed it with customers. The idea spread about Copenhagen, and eventually King Christian heard about it. The ruler approved and decided in favor of trying it with Queen Louise's likeness on each stamp.

It was too late to put the idea into execution that year, but in 1904, four million seals were sold in the Copenhagen postoffice. So popular did the stamps become that Holboell heard of one old woman who returned some letters without Christmas seals, declaring emphatically that she didn't want to know people who didn't use the stamps.

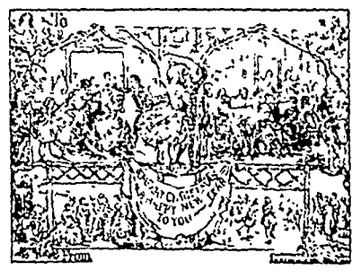
A woman, Miss Emily Bissel, who worked with the Red Cross, started the sale of seals in this country. She was seeking $300 for a little open air hospital for tuberculosis patients She designed a stamp and persuaded friends to help with the printing and sale of them. When the campaign bogged down, she went to Philadelphia where she met Leigh Mitchell Hodges, a columnist for the Philadelphia North American. He heard Miss Bissell's plans and discussed them with E. A. Van Valkenburg, city editor. Van Valkenburg gave full approval and told Hodges to give the project his entire time. He also asked for 50,000 seals to be sold in the newspaper's office.

The campaign brought startling results. Miss Bissell found she had $3,000 instead of $300 she had started to raise. And the Christmas seal campaign became a nation-wide institution.

First Yule Card Designed in 1842

Supplying the U S. with Christmas cards is a $100,000,000-a-year business, employing 500,000 Americans. Yet the first Christmas card, engraved a little over a century ago, was a financial failure!

The world's first Yule card was designed in 1842 by William Maw Egley, a 16-year-old engraver's apprentice in London, England. Space was left at the bottom for the sender's signature. William printed 100 copies, intending to sell them to his friends.



This is a facsimile of the first known Christmas greeting card published in England in 1842.

But the conservative English scoffed at the idea. Egley and his cards were forgotten, until one of the historic greetings was accidentally discovered in 1941 in the British Museum.

With changing social customs, Christmas cards rapidly won popularity after being reintroduced by a courageous publisher in 1862.

Dunce Cap

The Capitelli is a special feature of the Christmas feasting in Italy. It is served on a plate and looks for all the world like an aggregation of miniature dunce caps.

These little caps are made of noodle dough and encase a filling consisting of white meat of chicken and chopped pork mixed with egg and spices.

A whole plate of these inch-high 'dunce caps' are served with sauce or dressing known as Moutarde de Cremona which, made of fruits, mustard and spices, has a tingle of mustard but does not bite and is therefore known as "a mustard which is not."

Christmas Weather

You may not believe them, but here are a few of the varied—and conflicting—beliefs about Christmas weather:

If the sun shines through the apple tree on Christmas day, there will be a good crop the following year

A warm Christmas means a cold Easter

A green Christmas makes a fat graveyard

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Winning Every Day

Lesson for December 17, 1950

SCRIPTURE: II Corinthians 11:16-33; 12:7-10; Philippians 3:4-11; II Timothy 4; James 1:2-4.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Timothy 4:1-8.

THE idea that religion is the opiate of the people has been circulated only by those who know nothing about religion from the inside. The Christian religion is no kind of drug. You may hunt through the New Testament from end to end and find not a single expression reminding you of a drug store. What you do find, over and over again, is the idea that this life, for the Christian, is a fight, a race, a grueling test run. What Christianity offers (among other things) is power: power to run the race, to stand the test, to win the fight.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

Paul Knew How It Was

THE Christian life is a fight . . . but not a losing fight. Countless Christians have proved it by living it. We can pass up the number one example, Jesus himself, because some people might say that he had access to some source of power that ordinary men do not have.

Look, if you please, at Paul of Tarsus. There was a man who looked trouble in the eye many a day. In fact, there never was a single day when troubles left him free and easy.

Whatever we may say about Jesus, Paul certainly had no special "pipeline to heaven" which any other Christian might not have. Yet he lived, so to speak, on top of his troubles, not down under them. Even now, centuries later, Paul's struggles are still an asset for every Christian; each one of us can say, "Well, if Paul made it, I can."

* * *

On Many Fronts

AT the end of Paul's life he wrote those famous words, "I have fought a good fight." Our Scripture brings that statement down to cases. What was Paul's fight?

To his Corinthian friends he tosses off a rather hair-raising list of adventures, disasters and calamities through which he had passed. We don't need details. Just to name them is enough: famine, robbers, beatings, jail sentences, riots, three different shipwrecks . . What a life! But Paul rode these things; they did not ride him.

Or again, there was his "thorn in the flesh." Nobody knows certainly what that was; but it was no doubt some kind of physical ailment or pain, and it did not go away. Pain is often far harder to stand than some exciting experience like a shipwreck. In the face of pain such as Paul suffered, one cannot fight back. All one can do is to take it. Yet Paul lived through this, too. It was part of his "good fight."

To the Philippians, again, he reports another sort of victory, though he makes no boast about it. He had conquered his besetting sin of conceit and pride. Paul was by no means a naturally humble man. Yet when a man can write as he does in Phil. 3:4-11, it is plain that he had crushed pride down and out. Perhaps Paul, like many another man, had found that his worst enemy was himself, his worse self.

In the second letter to Timothy, written at the end of his life, he tells of still other kinds of things that cost him a struggle—friends abandoning him, a trial that went against him. Yet these too he had not simply endured but conquered.

* * *

Available Victory

TWO thoughts come to us from all of this.

One is, that it takes a fight to make a man. That is to say if Paul had had a perfectly easy life, he would never have been the grand character we know. For him, and for many a Christian since, reverses, disappointments, suffering and pain, tragedy, sorrow and mistakes will contribute to creative spiritual experiences if these are met in the Christian way.

And that leads to the other thought: The Christian way to power, the Christian secret of living a winning life every day, is today exactly the same as what Paul said it was: the strength of God, "made perfect in weakness." The Christian never becomes God; but God's grace and power can live in the Christian.

Is is not the Christian who lives the victorious life, after all; left to ourselves we should bog down. But God be thanked, he does not leave us to ourselves! It is not we who win, but He in us. This does not excuse us from the fight; God lives not in the lazy but in the loyal.

TV Busts Up Marriage of Young Trombonist, Harpist

By BILLY ROSE

A couple of years ago one of the staff musicians at NBC—a trombonist I'm going to call Charlie Michaels—decided he was finally in a position to realize his two big ambitions: one, to marry the swing harpist he had been keeping company with, and two, to buy a house and a piece of land in New Jersey.

For the first year everything was peaches and grade-A for the Time Square tots—there was a garden to putter around in, house to do over, and neighbors to get acquainted with. Charlie got quite a kick out of telling the suburbanites what an artist his wife had been, and showing them a studio picture of her seated at a harp with a big Spanish comb in her hair.

But last January, when TV started using a lot of live music, their marriage ran into its first snag. Charlie, who had been doing an afternoon stint on radio, was shifted to one of the TV motor car programs, and a few weeks later was assigned to two other video spots. These involved a certain amount of late rehearsals, which meant that several nights a week, instead of catching the 5:15, the trombone player didn't arrive home until after midnight—that is, when he managed to get home at all.

Billy Rose

* * *

HIS CITY-BRED spouse, of course, didn't take kindly to this new routine—the country without a fella around the house wasn't much fun—and when it became clear that Charlie was going to be spending more and more of his evenings at the studio, she suggested selling the house and moving back to town.

"I'd hate to give this place up," said the trombonist. "I get a big kick out of it, even if it's only week ends. As for an apartment, they're pretty tough to find right now but I'll see what I can do."

For the next couple of weeks Charlie answered ads and talked to real estate agents but without any luck—either the rent was more than he could afford to pay, or it involved plunking down a couple of thousand dollars for a few sticks of furniture.

When he told his wife what the situation was, she said, "I know it isn't easy but you've got to do something. I just can't take it out here any more."

* * *

ONE EVENING not long ago, while grabbing a sandwich during a rehearsal break, Charlie picked up a paper and an item caught his attention: A young woman had committed suicide by throwing herself out of the window of a midtown apartment house.

On the spur of mood and moment, the musician hopped a taxi and went around to the address mentioned. "I understand you've got a vacancy," he said to the superintendent, "and it's worth a couple of hundred to me if I can have first crack at it."

The super took him up in the elevator and showed him the apartment—four cheerfully-furnished rooms.

"It's hard to believe anyone with such a lay-out would jump out the window," Charlie small-joked. "Did the woman live here alone?"

"Just between us," said the superintendent, "I think some guy was paying the bills. He leased the place in her name about two months ago and at first used to show up pretty regularly. Lately he hasn't been around, and I guess that explains why she took the dive."

"Was she as good looking as the papers said?"

"She was quite a looker," said the super. "There's a picture of her on the bureau."

Charlie went over and examined it.

It was a photograph of a girl seated at a harp with a big Spanish comb in her hair.

ICKETS BATTLE POLICE . . . Chicago Fans See Gloomy 1951

By GRANTLAND RICE

THIS UNHAPPY BASEBALL CITY (Chicago), once the home of Frank Chance, the peerless leader, and his famous Cubs, is again turning to "next year" without too many golden dreams.

Both the Cubs and White Sox have known their fame—but not lately. Frank Frisch has done all anyone could expect him to with what he has and it's still material shortage for the White Sox that cuts them down.

One question asked around here is this—"What will Branch Rickey do for the Pirates?"

Grantland Rice

In the first place he can't do them any harm, since they are as low as a team can get Rickey is certain to be a big help by 1952 if not in 1951. He still has more actual baseball brains than anyone connected with the game, when you look back over his experience. But not even a Rickey can do every thing at once.

It might be remembered also that war clouds and the draft can make a terrific difference in the two 1951 races. Already a number of shining young stars have traded baseball uniforms for khaki—the bat for a gun This will soon begin to double and redouble. It will work harder on younger teams than older teams.

Looking over the two leagues how can any one expect any of the second division teams to break into the upper four? Yankees, Tigers, Indians and Red Sox will still be the class in the American league next spring. Phillies, Dodgers, Giants and Braves will remain in the first division of the National as far as anyone can tell except that the Giants have a good chance to win the flag. They had the best team in their league down the stretch

The loss of Branch Rickey isn't going to help Brooklyn although Cresco Thompson is a capable field hand But years are needed to get any baseball savvy—and this means years of actual work as the head party.

Brooklyn fans want a glamorous, gang of fighters like they were in the old days, but they also want to win flags.

Notre Dame and Next Year

Chicago is a hot Notre Dame city This affection goes back to the early years of Knute Rockne A bad Notre Dame year is a bad football year for many Chicago football fans

Now they are wondering about Notre Dame and 1951. For one thing Bob Williams will be missing and Bob Williams, the star from Baltimore, was the team's main star in 1949 and 1950. His passing was about 70 or 80 per cent of Notre Dame's attack with the backfield material left. Sitkos and such don't come along every week.

There are strong rumors around that Notre Dame is getting ready to shed part of her football glory. Scholarships have been reduced quite heavily, we are told.

One point is that Notre Dame is really a magnificent university Many of her leaders think the educational and cultural side has been overshadowed by football greatness This, at least, is the idea you hear. From now on Notre Dame will have good football teams, but they won't be so overwhelming.

Notre Dame loses good men after this season and so far apparently no Harts, Connors or Lujacks are on the freshman squad. It is lucky that Notre Dame still has Frank Leahy and his able coaching staff. Leahy did all anyone could do with limited material as full proof that all too often it is still the material that writes most of the winning story.

Notre Dame has an even tougher schedule next year. As we understand it the South Bend platoon takes on S M.U. and other strong southwestern teams, where football may have its deepest strength. Indiana will be better. So will Michigan State. So will Purdue and Iowa.

It is much too early to start writing Notre Dame out for 1951. But it will be a big job to go through next season s hard march without a few defeats

The Pittsburgh Mystery

Pittsburgh turns out to be one of the deeper mysteries of baseball—and this mystery will last through 1951 Three years ago a new crop of owners arrived and started scattering coin in every known direction Having no farm system ready to deliver young stars, the Pirates paid high prices for anything they could get.

But around September 12 of 1948 the Pirates suddenly turned in the direction of bottom.

The odd part is that Pittsburgh fans didn't desert them. The Pirates drew well over a million fans in 1949 and 1950 in spite of their lowly state. Each year they started slowly and then got worse. But the gate remained above many other teams that were in the race from start to finish

BUNTENBACH ENTERTAINED LARGE CROWD AT ANNUAL PARTY

Over 334 People Entertained At Turkey Dinner and Dance

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. C. Buntenbach and family held their annual Christmas party at the All Vets Social Center on the North Shore at Clear Lake Sunday evening. The large ball room was beautifully decorated in Christmas colors and lighted Christmas trees for the occasion.

Long tables, which were decorated in the Christmas theme and lighted with candles and Christmas favors, completely filled the large ballroom. After a deliciou turkey dinner had been served tables were cleared and put aside and dancing was enjoyed to the tunes of a twelvepiece orchestra. Others enjoyed playing cards in the south party rooms.

There were some over 335 guests, business associates, organization members and friend present to enjoy the fine hospitality of the Buntenbach families. People were present from many points in North Iowa as well as from other states.

POOR CONSTRUCTION CAUSES FARM HOME ACCIDENTS

Contrary to popular belief, poor construction and not poor housekeeping causes most accidents in the homes of farm families.

This was pointed out today by Paul Henderson, Hancock County extension director, for the benefit of those folks in the county planning to build a home, remodel or just fix up a bit. He says safety can be built or remodeled into a home if a little thought is given to the subject when planning.

Falls are the No. 1 cause of accidents to farm families, Henderson points out. Many of these could be prevented by safe construction. For examples, he points to poorly constructed and planned stairways and poorly planned traffic lanes. Having varying floor levels is a real hazard.

Fire hazards, too can be eliminated by safe construction. Fire-safe construction stops the spread of fire. Adequate electric wiring properly fused is another safeguard against fire. The same is true wih properly installed and operated heating systems.

LARSONS WILL OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING DECEMBER 28

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Larson, of Belmond, formerly residents of the Klemme community, will observe their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Thursday, Dec. 28, 1950.

They announce that they will hold open house at their home in Belmond from 2:00 until 4:00 p. m. All of their former neighbors and Klemme friends are invited to call on them.

Birthday Club Meets

None of the ladies of the Birthday Club had birthdays in December, so Mrs. Clarence Kluckhohn invited them to come to her home for a nice Christmas Party. The ladies paired off, and brought games to be played during the afternoon. After which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess. Some of the ladies reported having the best time in their lives since they were little girls. They also enjoyed the gift exchange.

Three little girls from Clay County peek through an enlargement of the 1950 Christmas Seal to bring greetings from the tuberculosis associations of Iowa. They are Joy and Judy Campbell--the twins at the top--and Virginia Heald smiles below. They live in Spencer and urge everyone to buy and use Christmas Seals to fight tuberculosis and heart disease.

MR. AND MRS. HERMAN PRIEBE CELEBRATE FORTY-FIFTH WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Priebe observed their 45th wedding anniversary at their home in Klemme Wednesday by entertaining their children and grandchildren to a nice duck dinner with all the trimmings.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Priebe and daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Verner Priebe and children.

The afternoon was spent in visiting. Mr. and Mrs. Priebe received some nice flowers and cards from relatives, neighbors and friends in commeration of the happy event.

Klemme Farmer Will Move To Mason City Soon

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Wittenberg, farmers northeast of Klemme, who recently held a closing out farm sale, have purchased a home in Mason City and will retire from the farm this month. They will live at and move into their new home 1034 3rd Street S.W., Mason City.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Katter will farm the Wittenberg place and will move to the farm this month. Lyle is a son of Ben Katter of Garner, and a brother of Cecil Katter of Klemme.

BUREAU LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR HANCOCK COUNTY

Klemme Man Will Serve On Board This Year

Gilbert Guenther, president of the Hancock County Farm Bureau, has announced the names of 6 persons selected for the county legislative committee for the ensuing year. They are: Clarke Lackore, Garner Chairman; Mrs. Verne Grau, Garner, co-chairman; Sanford Rogness, Crystal Lake; Clarence Bird, Woden; Jerry Psotka, Britt, and Lester Stille of Klemme.

The purpose of the legislative committee, Guenther advised, is to put into effect the resolutions adopted by the bureau. The committee will attend a district Farm Bureau meeting Dec. 19, at 10 a. m. at the Y.M.C.A. in Mason City. President Guenther will also attend this meeting. Policies of the Iowa Farm Bureau will be discussed, especially those which are likely to come up at the next general assembly.

The month of December is time to remember that Santa's once more on the way. And it's time to recall he's the safest of all who drive near the holiday.

He couldn't be cruel and ruen the Yule by cracking his toys and sleigh up. His eye's on the road when he's hauling his load, so his safe-driving record is 'way up.

And we can add more to this gent's safety score: For example, he's had not one fire! In his shop? No debris. And on his Christmas tree, no broken plugs, ne'er a bare wire.

His habits aren't sloppy. They're ones you can copy at home, on the farm and in school. This Christmas Eve flier whom we all admire says, "Caution is safety's best tool!"

FARM BUREAU CAMPAIGN WELL UNDER WAY

The Farm Bureau mail campaign is 40 per cent better than last year. Over 300 members have responded by sending in their dues for 1951 by mail, said Paul G. Shurts, county Farm Bureau fieldman.

This cooperation by the Hancock County members is greatly appreciated by the captains and leaders of the 16 townships.

As of December 15th those who have paid their membership by mail, at the office or have a continous membership agreements by township are as follows:

Editor Got Caught In The Middle Of A Land Deal!

In the "correction" of a news story sent us last week by Mrs. Paul Stromer regarding the sale of the Stromer farms near Klemme to Cutshalls and Taul, Mrs. Stromer stated that the Times erred in reporting that the sale was handled by J. A. Chambers, realtor of Klemme, and Courson & McNeal of Belmond, and that credit of the sale should have gone to Mitchell Schroeder of Galt, Iowa.

Now here is the correct version, and The Times was absolutely right in the original story: J. A. Chambers of Klemme did sell the farms as we stated, working also with Courson & McNeal of Belmond.

Now then, Mr. Schroeder fits into the picture in the following manner: The land was originally listed with Mr. Schroeder who is also a member of the Iowa Institute Of Farm Brokers. He in turn placed the farms in "The Iowa Multiple Listing" of the Association. With that kind of listing any member of the Associaion has the right to work on the deal. In this case, the land being in this territory Mr. Chambers and Courson & McNeal went to work on it. In fact Mr. Schroeder even telephoned Mr. Chambers asking him to work on the listing for him. Mr. Chambers made the actual sale and was assisted by Courson & McNeal. In any event all will share in the commission.

The Times was absolutely right in the orginal story and we merely give the detailed facts in the case to give Mr. Chambers and Courson & McNeal their just dues on publicity involved, and to keep the records straight.

METHODIST CHOIR WILL SING XMAS CAROLS

The Klemme Methodist Choir and the Youth Fellowship Group will have a practice at the church Thursday evening at 7:00 o'clock after which they will go out and sing Christmas carols.

They will then return to the church for one of John Chamber' famous taffy pull parties.

Methodist Choir Entertained At C. G. Waterman Home

After choir practice Thursday evening, the members of the Methodist Choir were entertained at a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman. All enjoyed pop corn, homemade fudge, apples and pop. The members say "Thank you, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman for a good time."

DEADLINE FOR EVIDENCE OF CONSERVATION PRACTICES

Farmers in Hancock County that have complied with the Agricultural Conservaion Program in carrying out approval soil conservation practices must have their supporting evidence in the county PMA office not later than December 31st if they want assistance for carrying out soil conserving practices on their farms in 1950.

There are seven practices approved for Hancock County; (1) Contouring Intertilled Crops, (2) Establishing sod waterways, (3) Tiling, (4) Lime, (5) Fertilizer, (6) Green Manure, (7) New seeding to be carried over to 1951.

This program is a part of the national effort to enable farmers to conserve our natural resources from an agricultural standpoint. The program operates not only for the good of the farmers by attempting to procure for them an income that is in parity with other national groups but also works for the good of the entire country by maintaining a supply of food and fiber adequate for all needs. At the same time the maintenance of our soil, water and forest resources provide a reserve that is available for use in the event an unanticipated need arises.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

"Ed, isn't it a wonderful Christmas party" Mary was literally glowing.

"Sure is," Ed agreed. "The Smiths sure go all out for this annual shindig. Say, who's the stranger over there?"

Mary looked. "Why, that's Jim something-or-other. He is visiting the Smiths on his way to the coast."

Ed looked a little sour. "I thought maybe he was Sir Galahad or something, with those society manners. Look at him. Gets up whenever one of the gals comes into the room, and takes off their coats, and opens doors, and greets everybody like a long-lost buddy."

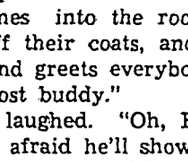
Mary laughed. "Oh, Ed! you are just afraid he'll show up all you old regulars with his manners."

* * *

Ed slowed up for the stop at the intersection. "Yep, it was a great party. But I'll be glad to . . Holy Smoke, look at that guy ahead of us! Didn't even come to a stop! Just breezed right across, and the guy on the highway had to stand on his brakes. He shoulda hit him, and taught him some manners?"

Mary looked a little puzzled. "Ed," she said, that driver. The one who ran the stop sign. It was that Jim Somebody who was visiting the Smiths!"

HELLO FOLKS



Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mehus of Goodell are the parents of a baby daughter born December 4th at the Belmond hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Helps are the proud parents of a fine baby boy born Friday, December 15th at the Mercy hospital. He tipped the scale at 7 lbs and 6½ ounces, and his name will be Harlan Dean.

FREE MOVIES WILL BE SHOWN AT HIGH SCHOOL GYM SATURDAY AT 1:30

All Children Will Be Given Big Treat By Old Santa

Santa Claus is coming to town! Santa says he will arrive in Klemme this Saturday afternoon at about 1:30 o'clock and wants all the kiddies in the Klemme community to be on hand at the High School Gymnasium to greet him.

Santa wants to shake hands with all the kiddies and ask them what they want most for Christmas. He has also arranged to have a free moving picture show for the kiddies and has organized a committe in Klemme to hand out some big sacks of candy to all the boys and girls.

Don't be late kiddies, Santa will be here on time, Saturday afternoon, December 23rd.

FIELD EXPERIMENTS USED TO DOUBLE CHECK SOIL TESTS

There are three different ways to check up on soil needs, county extension director, Paul Henderson reminds Hancock County farmers.

Hunger signs in crops, such as poor growth, firing and discoloration and low yields make up the most obvious indication of soil deficiencies.

Field tests where fertilizer is applied along side unfertilized areas for comparison of plant growth and yield is another way to determine soil needs. However, Henderson says the most practical way for most Hancock County farmers to find out what their soils needs is through soil tests.

Soil tests are being used widely in making recommendations, but Iowa State College agronomists report that they are double checking their soil test results by keeping records on soils fertilized to correct deficiencies that show up in soil tests. In other words, they are checking their laboratory results with actual field tests.

By keeping records, they are able to "calibrate" the soil tests against the response obtained under field conditions for all soils in the state.

Under field conditions soils specialists do not expect every soil which tests low to respons to recommend fertilizers because other factors may be limiting yields. However, almost all of the soils with a low test do respond to treatment and only rarely does a soil with a high tests show any response.

While these results indicate that present soil testing methods indicate the probability of getting a response from fertilizer applications, agronomists are still attempting to improve testing methods and recommendations made through tests, Henderson reports.

New Members Joined Twin Lake 4-H Go-Getters

The Twin Lake Go-Getters 4-H club met at the home of Darlene Roul. Roll call was answered by fourteen members.

A demonstration on how to take measurements was given by Diana Christianson and Marcella Nuehring. Five girls joined. They are: Dorothy Lacey, Norma Lacey, Leala Lacey, Blanch Shoop, and Barbara Shoop. After the meeting we had our Christmas party and sang songs.

Lunch was then served by the hostess and her mother.

BILL OF RIGHTS

Hysteria Is a Chronic Disease That Thrives on National Fear

This is the last of three articles on the Bill of Rights and Bill of Rights Day which will be celebrated December 15.

Hysteria is a chronic national disease which thrives in an atmosphere of fear. It is an illness which has gripped our nation before and which is flaring up again as we face the threat of communism and take steps to meet that threat. The most dangerous sympton of national hysteria is abridgment of the civil liberties set forth in our Bill of Rights. These points were recalled on Bill of Rights Day, by the American Civil Liberties Union through its executive director Patrick Murphy Malin.

Fear and insecurity led to the infamous Alien and Sedition acts of 1798, passed in an atmosphere of war hysteria Taking advantage of anti-French feeling, the Federalists passed bills allegedly to curb alien influence, actually to suppress opposition from the rising "radical" Jeffersonian Republicans. But the common sense of the American people and their fervent belief in free expression, was exhibited. Americans realized the threat to their liberties in time, and dealt the Federalists an overwhelming defeat at the polls and repudiated their spurious legislation, Today, history's lesson seems momentarily forgotten as, confronted with new fears, we are again putting hasty restrictions on fundamental civil liberties.

Hysteria over national security legislation is not new in American history. Shown here is clash in Congress in 1798 during debate on the Alien and Sedition Acts. The law, aimed at securing the country from French invasion, was used to curb opposition political views and a political party—the then Republicans. Matthew Lyon, a Republican congressman from Vermont, was so irrated by the Federalist gibes that he spat in the face of Federalist Griswold of Connecticut. Since there was not a two-thirds vote to expel Lyons, Griswold took matters in his own hand and attacked Lyon with a bludgeon.

ONE SUCH RESTRICTION is the McCarran act, an attempt to tighten national security by registration of Communist and Communist-front organizations, and stiffening of immigration and naturalization laws. On the surface it may sound like a good idea, but it still strikes at the heart of expression of opinion Already it has created considerable confusion in immigration matters. And because of its loose terminology and broad provisions, it could be used by the controlling political party to outlaw opposition, just as the Federalists attempted in 1798.

In today's insecure world, Malin said, there must be protection against sabotage and treason. But our safety will only be insured by democratic means, not by institution of the very totalitarian methods we are fighting. Despite these temporary periods of hysteria, in times of crisis the nation has always kept a balance between preserving national security and maintaining individual rights. December 15, our Bill of Rights Day, recalls the firm belief in this guarantee of fundamental liberties that has seen us through periods of crisis. Staunch championship of the Bill of Rights is still democracy's greatest weapon for freedom, at home and abroad.

EVELYN KEYES' description of her new picture, "The Prowler" (United Artists release), would make anybody want to see it—even those who can't bear suspense. She was especially enthusiastic about it because it was an independent production; she, Van Heflin, and everybody else were giving their all to show what can be done when working without the restrictions of a big studio. Pretty, blonde Evelyn is one of the comparatively few acresses who has plenty of interests outside of picture making; one of them is collecting the little gold images that date back to Mexico's early days an interesting—and very expensive—hobby.

Moira Shearer, star of the ballet film "Red Shoes," turned down a lot of offers to make a picture here even before she went to Hollywood with the Sadler's Wells Ballet. But she broke down and signed with Samuel Goldwyn for the lead in his screen biography of Hans Christian Anderson. It will be filmed next fall in Technicolor, with a three-to-four million dollar budget.

Ardon Cornwall, who has composed original music for "The Cavalcade of America" for the past decade, met his wife some years back when she was doing piano cues for the program. Now she writes lyrics for the music he composes.

THE FICTION CORNER

MAN OF MYSTERY

By Lula W. Kellems

AT 3:30 Eddie House called his wife from the office. "Know what I've been thinking about, angel—? Herring! My mouth's simply drooling. What's for supper—?"

"Your favorite menu, supper special . . . "

Eddie groaned, "That's too elaborate, baby. I only want herring. Just herring . . . Evelyn—! are you listening?

3-Minute Fiction

There was silence, then a click in his ear. There was wifely understanding! And just because a man got a hankering for herring!

Soon, however, he grinned. She'd have the herring, all right. That was Evelyn's way, flying off the handle, then after consideration, humoring him.

He had gone to work by bus that morning because Evelyn needed the car for some special shopping, she said. To be sure of a healthy appetite for the herring, he decided to walk home.

Pausing when he reached his own back door, Eddie clocked his hike, proud of the four minutes clipped from last trip's walking time. His hand, carefully replacing his watch, touched a small square of folded paper in his pocket. He drew it out, opened it and read: "Anniversary gift for Evelyn . . . "

Their first anniversary! How could he have forgotten? Days ago he had scribbled down this reminder, to be sure.

Evelyn squealed with delight when she saw the coat. "You're the best husband a girl ever had, darling."

Furtively he glanced at the high kitchen windows. There stood Evelyn, her head and her soulders framed in glass like she were a beautiful portrait. She was working at the sink and she was crying!

Eddie felt like a heel. No wonder she had used the car to shop, and had fixed his favorite menu. She had remembered, while he—he had requested herring for supper!

He watched Evelyn sniffle and blink tears. He stood on the stoop, considering. If he went home with a gift, he might convince her the herring was a gag.

All the stores would be closed by now—unless Old Jan, the jeweler, was still tinkering in his shop.

BECAUSE EDDIE thought Evelyn might miss the car if he took it, he walked to the nearest drugstore and phoned for a cab. Thirteen minutes passed before it came "Hurry!" begged Eddie. "Jan might remember to close on time.' Jan had closed on time. He returned slowly to the cab.

"Flowers are always appreciated," suggested the driver.

"That's an idea!"

They drove to Marley's Flower Shoppe—and found it locked. He just had to find something! He couldn't go home empty-handed and face a weeping wife.

He was moping toward the cab when inspiration hit him. "Hanfel, the furrier! My business neighbor! He'll come and open up for me."

"Wait twenty minutes," Hanfel said when Eddie called. "We're eating. I got herring, yet."

He waited forty-five minutes before Hanfel drove up. "I want a mink, size nine."

"A size nine mink, I don't have I got a Russia Fitch jacket, size nine."

"Wrap it up," Eddie said, resigned.

Evelyn must have been watching for him. She met him at the door "Anything wrong, Eddie—?"

Inside, Eddie proudly displayed the Russian Fitch jacket. "It's a special day, honey—remember—?"

Evelyn squealed with delight and kissed him. "You're the best husband a girl ever had, darling. And I was afraid you'd forgotten our anniversary—imagine!" She seemed scared suddenly. "Eddie—! You were kidding about the herring—!"

Eddie held her close. "Certainly not, baby! Next to you, I love herring best."

"Oh honey—! You're worth all the smelly old herring in the world . . . Only, Eddie—remind me to look through my household hints for some method of peeling onions that always go with herring—so they won't make . . . "

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

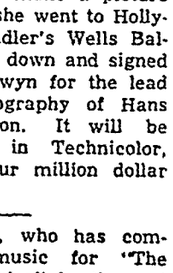
Charlie Employs Strategy to Out-Maneuver Ice Digger

By BILLY ROSE

At least four times in the past week I've been buttonholed on Broadway and asked, "Have you heard what happened to Charlie Feltus?" Well, I have, but on the off-chance that you haven't, perhaps I ought to bring you up to date . . .

For as long as I can remember, Charlie Feltus has been a promoter of things and people, and by and larcenous he has always made a pretty nice dollar at it. However, like a lot of other Times Squareheads, he has never held on to these dollars for long because of a weakness for bangtails and blondes.

In recent months, to hear the wisenheimers tell it, it's been rough going for Charlie in both departments seeing as how (a) most of his earnings have been going into the jewel box of a platinum-mopped tootsie named Hazel Duke, and (b) his luck at the race track has been—as Damon Runyon used to put it—a whole lot less than somewhat.



Billy Rose

Came a bleak and bleary-eyed evening not long ago when Charlie called on Hazel with a face longer than Durante's smeller. "I'm in a spot, baby," he gloomed. "I owe my bookie, Butch Fleeson, seven grand and he just tipped me off that if I don't pay up by the end of the week I'm in for some bad trouble. Butch, as you know, is a pal of mine and wouldn't make no fuss if it was up to him, but he says the guy who runs the syndicate is pressing him."

"What can I do about it?" asked Hazel.

"Well," said Charlie, eyeing the glinty knick-knacks on her arms and neck," I could raise several grand on your jewelry. It would be just this heart-to-heart, I might as well tell you I've been thinking of calling it quits. Don't slam the door, sucker."

• • •

NATURALLY, Charlie was hurt by this kiss-off, especially after his many blue-white kindnesses to the little lady, but he was an old campaigner and so he left without breaking her arm or doing anything else ungentlemanly

The next day Hazel got a phone call from Butch Fleeson, the bookie. "Hello, beautiful," he said. "I hear tell you've given Charlie the brush and—"

"You want to pick it up where he left off," laughed Hazel. "Okay by me, and you can begin by taking me to dinner."

"You catch on quick," said the bookie. He named one of the exclusive eateries on the East Side and went on, "Meet you at seven, and if you get there first order yourself a drink. I'll be over soon as I finish with the bets on tonight's fight."

An hour and four Martinis later, Butch phoned Hazel at the restaurant. "I got jammed up," he said, "but I'll be over in a few minutes. Have them ice up a couple of quarts of champagne, and order the biggest double steak in the house. I'm of the porterhouse and all the champagne, but there was still no sign of Butch. Finally, plenty peeved, she told herself that no horse hustler was going to make her wait around with ketchup on her mouth. But as she rose to go the waiter handed her a tab for $51.20.

"Tell the manager I'm Mr. Fleeson's guest," she said.

• • •

FIVE MINUTES later the manager appeared. "I'm sorry," he said, "but I just phoned Mr. Fleeson and he says he had no appointment here tonight."

"Okay," said Hazel wearily. "I'll leave this bracelet as security and come in tomorrow to pay you."

The manager took the bracelet and beckoned to a stoutish gent who was sitting at the bar.

The man walked over, flashed a detective's badge and handed Hazel a typewritten sheet headed, "Articles of jewelry stolen from Mrs. Elizabeth Stone." And when Hazel examined the list she saw that, item for item, it matched the jewelry she was wearing.

"There's some mistake," she said. "I got these things from a Mr. Charles Feltus and he told me he bought them on Fifth Avenue."

"You can explain it in court," said the detective. "In the meantime, hand the stuff over. I'll let you go home tonight but I'd suggest you don't try to leave town."

When Hazel got to her apartment she found a sheet of paper under the door. It was a duplicate of the jewelry list the "detective" had shown her. At the bottom was a message in Charlie's familiar scrawl:

"Butch Fleeson thanks you, the syndicate thanks you, and I thank you. Don't slam the door, sucker."

WHY DOES SANTA PERSIST?

'Rightness' of Belief in Him Is Subject of Eternal Debate

WHO CAN ANSWER the riddle: Why does Santa Claus persist? Is is good or bad for children to believe in him? Teachers, psychiatrists and other specialists in human behavior at the juvenile level differ. The Santa Claus myth has strong convictions in its favor and convictions just as strong opposing it.

Children whose very progressive parents have explained to them that Santa Claus is only a myth have not been easy to convince. They fix their surprised parents with the coolest of condescending stares. They don't agree with the psychiatrists who say that a child who really believes in Santa Claus has had his thinking ability impaired. Even grownups berate the destroyers of the illusion.

Evidently Santa fills such a basic human need that it's not safe to tell people that he is fantasy. And its more dangerous to try to prove it.

Belief in Santa satisfied children's need for love and security. They keep this belief as long as they need it, carrying their belief through various stages—they fear him, trust him, love him and then doubt him. But they never completely doubt him, no matter how realistic they become, and they remember with joy the days of their utter credulity.

Psychiatrists fear that letting the child become possessed with the myth tends to make the adult attempt to preserve the infant pleasure subconsciously throughout life and remain emotionally immature.

And experts question whether children should be taught to believe literally something that is not literally true. One expert says:

"There is no sound psychological reason that I know of for children not enjoying the Santa myth as long as they know that it is not true (But) if a child at 4 or 5 years of age can believe that one person can come down all the chimneys of the world in one night, and can fly through the air with reindeer and a sleigh and necessarily a heavy load, the child's whole relation with reality and whole ability to think clearly in terms of cause and effect have been seriously damaged or permanently destroyed. He will have learned that to think in relation to the evidence of his own eyes leads only to confusion and fear.

WELL WISHERS . . . Looking in at the window of the McGuckin home in New York is a whole flock of Santa Clauses, their hearts warmed by the sight of little Brendan C. McGuckin playing with his toys. Two years ago the toddler was stricken with polio which affected his legs, back and stomach, and his life was in critical danger.

UNIVERSAL SYMBOL

Every Nation Has Christmas Bells

The nations of the world have their individual symbols of Christmas. But there is one universal symbol—the bells of Christmas.

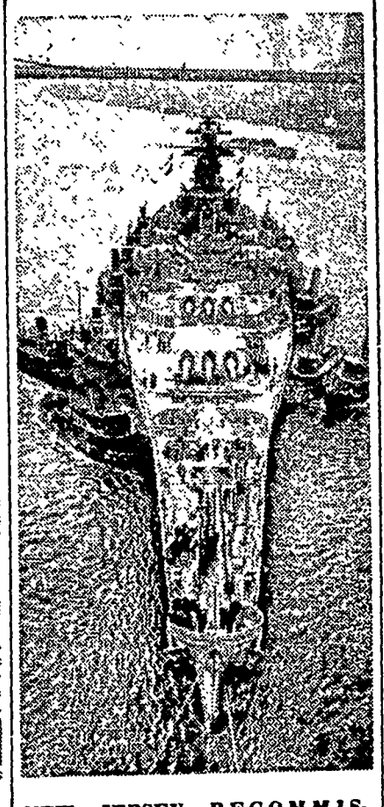
In a way this is strange since bells were not associated with the church until about 400 A.D. when an Italian bishop installed them in his church. Some authorities, however, claim that it wasn't until 604 that the first bells were placed in churches.

Whatever the date, the custom has grown until there is perhaps no use of church bells so widely known in Christian countries as the ringing of chimes to herald the advent of the birth of Christ. From one end of the country to the other bells peal the story of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

RPLE HEARTS FOR KOREAN VETS . . . Fifty servicemen of the United States armed forces who eived wounds fighting for the liberation of Korea from the Communist forces are shown as they were d up at the Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C., recently, just before they received Purple rts from the commanding general of the hospital. The commanding general is Maj. Gen. Paul H. it. He is shown in the center of the picture at the rear.

ARTHING REDS' FLOWING GOLD . . . Lieut. Joseph Booth of Morristown, Pa., holds his rifle while rvising a couple of Korean civilians who are digging up a hidden petroleum cache. It takes oil and e oil to lubricate the wheels of war and the army that does not have an ample supply grinds to a The retreating Chinese Reds buried their precious oil and gas stocks because they feared the intense d air attacks. Advancing in the bitter North Korean cold, American infantrymen entered the border of Hyesanjin.

SHOW ARRIVALS . . . Beauty and the beast—that might be tion for this view of the steer and pretty girl. However, stock thusiasts might call them both beauties, for the steer is a prize from Wyoming. The girl is Lorraine Kurnath and she is pretty- the beast by putting a bobby pin in his curls. The stage was t for the 51st annual International Livestock Show at the Inter- Amphitheater in Chicago. Steer is early arrival.



NEW JERSEY RECOMMISSIONED . . . The U.S.S. New Jersey is towed by tugs toward Brooklyn navy yard. Fleet Admiral William Halsey, who led naval push against Japan on the ship, was a guest at the recommissioning.

TROOPS FOR KOREA . . . Greece has decided to send a con- f troops to aid U.N. forces battling in Korea. King Paul of reviews a battalion prior to the departure of the men for the es. The colorful ceremony took place in front of the tomb of unknown soldier at Athens. The king of Greece presented his th the flag of their nation. The United Nations' call for all nations to contribute men is still in effect.

WIVES OF GUNMEN . . . Mrs. Carmen Torresola and Mrs. Rosa Collazo arrive at federal court in New York for hearing. Their husbands were the two gunmen who attempted to assassinate Truman. Torresola was killed.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Wholesalers Fight Tax

THE BUREAU OF LABOR statistics shows that the wholesale commodity price index is something like 171, or an increase of more than 13 per cent over a year ago. And just as surely as that price is up 13 per cent, just so sure will the retail price of the things you buy be up as that increase is reflected at the retail level.

And yet just a few days ago this reporter heard wholesaler after wholesaler in trade after trade, tell the national production authority they did not want controls over their commodities, that there was no need for controls in either distribution or price.

Which brings us to the question asked by Alan Valentine, administrator of the economic stabilization agency:

"Have we got the intelligence and the nerve to tax ourselves as we need to, for our own good?"

And the answer, Mr. Valentine apparently is "No."

To those of us here in Washington who have watched representatives of the business world, from every industry, gang-up against the proposed excess profits tax, it is evident that such a tax will never get through the lame-duck session and of course will never see the light of day in the more conservative 82nd session which opens in January.

Frankly, there probably is no one except fiscal experts who could tell you whether the 75 per cent profits tax as asked by the treasury department, or the 55 per cent corporation income tax suggested by business is better for business or for the country. Also very frankly we have heard business yell "ouch" many times in the past before they were hurt only to find out that everything was rosy. Also the "ganging-up" process seems to be pretty much of a pattern followed in the past in mass-lobbying activities and the chorus sounds like this:

"We want to bear our just burden of increased taxes for the national defense and expect and want to pay as patriotic American citizens.

But we believe it will be better for the nation as a whole to pass our tax bill instead of the administration excess profits tax." That's the gist of it all.

• • •

The Same Old Pattern

And that's the gist of the arguments that defeated the housing bill: "We are for housing, we think every American citizen ought to have the opportunity to buy or rent an adequate house, but—"

"We are for federal aid to education, we believe the teachers should have more money, we know that schools are inadequate and that thousands of American children are being bilked out of their right to a free education, but—"

And so it is on down the line, the same pattern.

• • •

Unlikely to Pass

We do know this, Congressman Robert L. Doughton, of Sparta, North Carolina, chairman of the house ways and means committee, has written more tax legislation than any man in the history of this country. He has been in congress since 1911, that's 38 years, and he has been chairman of the powerful ways and means committee since 1933, that's 17 years, and when he says his committee will consider only an excess profits tax, he means it.

What likely will happen is that the excess profits tax will be brought out on the floor and the fight against it will be made there. The house will support its committee and pass the excess profits tax, but the senate likely will not act. So it will go over to the regular session of the 82nd, where the fight will start all over again. And with this gain for business, it may be action will come so late in next congress, none of the tax will be applied to this year's amazingly high profits.

• • •

New Quarters Rushed

David Lynn, architect of the capitol, is bending every effort to complete the refurbishing of the house and senate chambers by the time the 82nd congress convenes January 3. The lame duck session which came back November 27 found they must accept temporary quarters with the senate meeting in the old supreme court room and the house in the caucus room in the house office building.

Part of the work was completed last year.

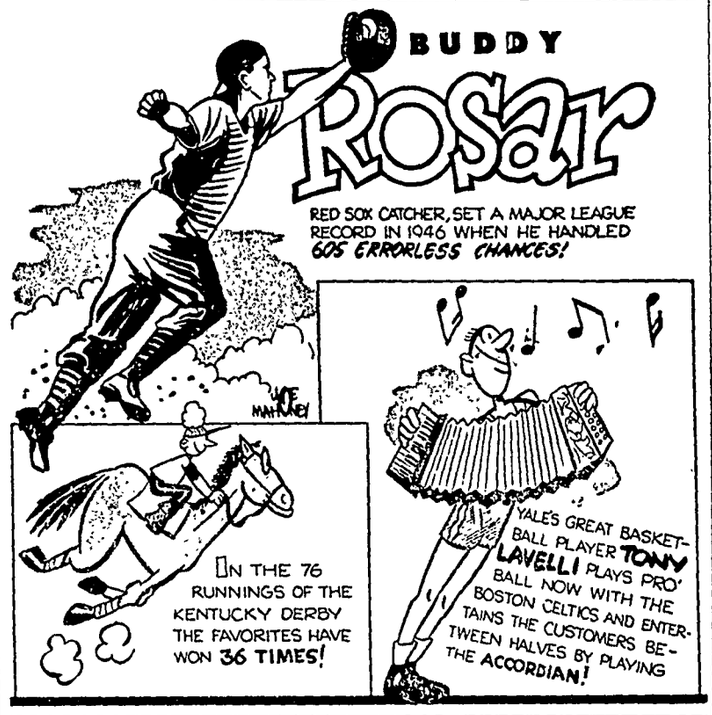
Anniversary Unobserved

In the meantime the 150th anniversary of the first session of congress in Washington passed November 17, with little or no observance, and of course congress in recess. It was the second session of the sixth congress which first convened in Washington on November 17, 1800, with only one small wing of the capitol building completed. Many legislators traveled by stage between capitol hill and Georgetown.

SPORTSCOPE By JOE MAHONEY



SPORTLIGHT

Minors Have Legitimate Squawks

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE WEST COAST is on the edge of revolt, unless big-league baseball does something about its status. There are more sides to this argument than an octopus has fingernails. The west coast thinks it should be the third big league.

One argument is that Los Angeles is bigger than three cities now enjoying this so-called honor. San Francisco is no minor-league town. But neither is Baltimore or Buffalo or Houston or other cities now rated in the minor-league row.

After all, there is only one Los Angeles and one San Francisco on the coast. Another barrier is the size of most west coast ball parks Most of them seat from 20,000 to 25,000. And no one can build any 35,000 or 45,000 or even 1,000-seat ball parks now.

Grantland Rice

The west coast has one deserved squawk They build up some young, popular star and the big leagues either make them sell said star or else they draft him. This is not so pleasant for the west coast fan. It isn't so pleasant for the American Association or the International League or other strong leagues either But no one has worked out a substitute

It isn't any too pleasant for Montreal to have three or four popular stars hauled back to Brooklyn in mid-season. The main wonder is that with the draft, plus television, there is any minor-league baseball left. One answer is that it is crumbling rapidly and there will soon be little remaining.

Certainly Los Angeles and San Francisco are far above many big league cities in population and sport interest How many big-league cities could draw 105,000 to a football game or 85,000 to a race track on a single day? On New Year's Day, the Rose Bowl will play to 97,000 and Santa Anita will entertain 60,000 or more.

But the problem of a third major league is a heavy one. The problem of the draft is a heavy one. But if a young star was never sold or drafted, he would never reach the big league.

• • •

Same Old Problem

Television offers the same tangle on the Pacific coast that it offers everywhere else.

It cost west coast college teams from 10,000 to 20,000 a game in the matter of attendance. Only the top affairs had the old-time crowds.

Television cut heavily in Pacific coast baseball. No one knows what the future has to offer. All they know is that today television is a wrecking institution for the smaller people in sport.

It is crushing out their lives. Minor leagues and minor football games are being wiped out.

Army has played to capacity—plus television this year. Down in Texas, S.M U and the Longhorns have filled the stadiums with television thrown in. Notre Dame crowds have held up despite television and a poor season. Michigan had its games televised last year and played to capacity—563,363 for six home games This year without television (it is banned in the Big Nine) the Wolverines total was but 508,000 for the same number of games at home All of which proves nothing from a television standpoint for the ticket sales declined because of Michigan's disappointing showing. Figuring an 80,000 crowd this week-end at Ohio State, the Wolverine total will reach 715,000 spectators for nine games.

But these are only a few from the vast mass. Why pay out good money (pretty good, anyway) for a smaller show, when they bring you a much bigger show for nothing?

It might be said here that baseball will have its troubles at the winter meeting and there can be no answer that will please everybody.

Football also has its television problems. This new instrument has suddenly stirred up more trouble than Noah's flood once brought to the world. Everyday an endless number of new sets are being sold, which only adds to the numbers of the stay-at-homes without any charge.

These "free spectators" don't help the sport financially.

Case of Joe DiMaggio

Ty Cobb came from Royston, Georgia; Babe Ruth from Baltimore; Tris Speaker and Rogers Hornsby from the overwhelming state of Texas.

Here are four of baseball's greats. But Joe and Dom DiMaggio report from San Francisco, and San Francisco takes as much pride in these two stars—especially Joe—as any city could feel about a ballplayer.

In San Francisco they move Joe up with Cobb and Ruth.

They ask you around the Golden Gate how much longer Joe DiMaggio can carry on. Who can say? More than a few of the sombre inspectors were saying back in June last summer that Joe was reaching or had reached the end of the road. But DiMaggio answered by hitting .380 the rest of the way and playing in 139 ball games.

Joe DiMaggio was born November 25, 1914. He is 36 years old. He broke in with San Francisco in 1932, 18 years ago. He reported to the Yankees in 1936, and since then has played in over 1,600 ball games.

Clarence L. McKinsey, 727 South Ludlow Street, Dayton, Ohio, who is night supervisor of hospital attendants at the Ohio State Hospital in Dayton, says a man has trouble getting used to working nights and sleeping days. And if a man isn't getting the proper rest it not only makes him groggy on the job, but also makes him feel poorly the rest of the time. This will never happen to him again, says Mr. McKinsey—now that he is taking HADACOL. His system lacked those necessary Vitamins B1, B2, Iron, and Niacin, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mr. McKinsey's own statement:

"Before I started taking HADACOL I had a great deal of trouble with a nervous stomach. I had an awful hard time sleeping—I would just roll and toss all night. It affected me during my working hours, too—I was restless and nervous all the time. My nerves were so jumpy that the least little thing would put me on edge. I was just beside myself in knowing what to do. Then I heard how other folks that were nervous and rundown were being helped by HADACOL. I decided to try HADACOL. Now, after 10 bottles of HADACOL, I feel fine; in fact, I think so much of HADACOL I would walk 5 miles for a bottle of HADACOL—I'm not exaggerating. Why, the way I sleep and the appetite I have are marvelous. The best thing is that my nerves are calm as they can be. I just can't praise HADACOL enough."

Thousands Have Been Helped by HADACOL whose systems lacked Vitamins B1, B2, Iron, and Niacin. The HADACOL formula is so effective for stomach distress, certain nervous disorders, insomnia due to upset stomach, nagging aches and pains, and a general run-down condition when these troubles are caused by such deficiencies.

Give HADACOL A Chance . . . to help you, as it has helped thousands of others if you suffer such deficiencies. Remember, there are no substitutes for HADACOL. Always insist on the genuine HADACOL. No risk involved. Buy a bottle of HADACOL, either the trial size, $1.25, or the large family or hospital size, $3.50, and if HADACOL doesn't help you, you get your money back.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. Adv.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

The Kindergarten boys and girls are finishing the Christmas gifts for their mothers. Most of the presents are all wrapped and are under the tree.

The children have been engraving Hoaken Christiens book. "Little Bruin" which we have been reading at story time. "Little Bruin" is a story about a bear family who woke too early from their winter nap. The bear family go looking for food but lose their way in a snow storm and they take refuge in a huntsman's cabin. There they live with a mixture of bear and human ways until spring.

The room is all ready for our Christmas Party. We hope that all the boys and girls who have been sick will be able to be back for our party.

RECORDS EASE JOB FILING INCOME TAX
Should Be Set Up To Fit Income Tax Forms

When federal and state income tax payments come due, farmers who have the easiest job filing returns are usually those who keep accurate records.

A good farm record book provides space for daily listing of receipts and expenditures, says Iowa State College extension economist H. B. Howell. This space should be broken down into columns, the totals of which can be entered directly on the income tax forms. It wastes time to list the receipts or expenditures all in one column because the items will have to be sorted and distributed when tax returns are filed.

List Equipment

Depreciation on farm property should also be listed in the record book, Howell says. He refers to depreciation on all machinery and equipment, and all improvements on owner-operated farms. Each piece of equipment must be listed along with its depreciation. Farmers who know their receipts, expenditures and depreciation can make "cash basis" tax returns.

An inventory record is more thorough because it gives a complete picture of farming operations for the year. Farmers who use this method will need space in their record books for inventories of livestock and feed on hand both at the beginning and at the end of the year.

Cash Base Less Accurate

The cash record mainly shows income from livestock and crops marketed the year before. It often fluctuates widely from year to year. Inventory records, on the other hand, level out the income over a period of several years and show more accurate results of the financial success of each year's operations.

Farm record books are available at The Times Office.

IOWA NOW LEADS THE NATION IN MEAT PACKING VOLUME

Iowa is now leading the meat packing field, the Iowa Development Commission pointed out today.

For the second straight year, the volume of livestock slaughtered by Iowa packing plants is running larger than in any other state.

Federal estimates show that during the first ten months of 1950 Iowa packers handled 11.7 percent (by liveweight) of all the cattle, calves, hogs, sheep and lambs processed in the nation. (The estimates do not includes farm butchering.)

Last year, Iowa packing companies handled 11.5 percent of the meat processed in the nation.

With the 1949 and 1950 reports, Iowa has stepped ahead of Illinois, which previously was the top meat packing state.

Illinois' meat packing ojerations have followed national trends very closely. When the U.S. volume of livestock dropped ten percent between 1947 and 1948, so did Illinois'. It has accounted for 10.6 or 10.7 percent of the nation's meat processing since the U. S. Department of Agriculture started to publish slaughter figures in 1946.

Iowa meat packers, although they took a bigger drop in the '47 - '48 slump, have been coming back ever since at an impressive rate.

In 1949, for instance, Iowa packing increased their operations by 670 million pounds, from 3,478,613,000 to 4,148,000 pounds of live weight. Iowa's share in U.S. livestock slaughter rose from 9.7 percent to 11.5 percent, and the Tall Corn state nosed Illinois out of the top standing.

This year, Iowa's meat packers seem to be buzzing along at a smiliar rate. In the first ten months of 1950, Iowa packers handled more meat than they did in the full year 1948, and they are 200 million pounds ahead of the January-October period in 1949.

(The totals: 3 billion, 482 million lbs. in 10 months, 1950; 3 billion, 281 million pounds in 10 months, 1949.)

Illinois' 10-month total is two million pounds les than in 1949: 3,103,410,000 pounds this year; 3,105,493,000 pounds last year.

Illinois still has the largest beef kill in the country, but its margin over Iowa is becoming smaller. In 1948, Illinois packers killed 662 million more lbs. of beef than Iowa plants did. Last year, Iowa was 340 million pounds behind, and so this year, Illinois plants are only 290 million pounds ahead in the beef department.

Iowa also has been gaining on her eastern neighbor in pork packing. In 1948, Iowa packers handled 417 million more lbs. of pork than Illinois plant did.

In 1949, the Iowa total rose to 790 million pounds more than the Illinois volume. So far this year, Iowa packing plants are 701 million pounds of pork in the lead.

Iowa now ranks first in hog slaughter, second in sheep and lamb slaughter and third in cattle slaughter. Minnesota is the third ranking hog packing state, and California is second slaughter. In total meat packing operations, Minn. habitually ranks third, and California fourth.

Iowa has 20 federally inspected slaughter plants, five in Sioux City. Illinois has 28, of which 17 are in Chicago. Minnesota has 11 plants operating under federal inspection, and California has 58, of which 19 are in Los Angeles.

Work Circle Will Play Santa Claus To Inmates Of County Home

The Methodist Work Circle will meet at the Church Thursday afternoon of this week for their annual Christmas program.

KLEMME HIGH SPLITS WITH CRYSTAL LAKE

It was even Steven here Tuesday night as Klemme split honors with a visiting Crystal Lake team in a double header basket ball game.

The Klemme 'Rockettes stowed away the Crystal Lake girls 42-28. The Klemme gals lead all the way by quarters: 10-5, 17-15 at the half, 26-24 at the end of the third quarter when they pulled away to a 42-28 victory.

The Shamrocks had tough going but played an even game the first three quarters when Crystal Lake pulled away. The Klemme team lead 8-7 at the end of the first quarter and were ahead 19-18 at the half. This lead was stretched to 31-26 at the end of the third quarter when Crystal Lake came to life and pulled ahead to win 43-35.

Klemme Faculty Enjoyed Xmas Dinner And Party

The Klemme teachers held a pre- Christmas dinner Sunday evening at the grade school dining room. They had prepared a nice ham and all brought food for a delicious dinner.

After dinner court whist was played with Mrs. Betty Schlawin winning high for the ladies and T. G. Ahrenkiel winning high for the men. All had a fine time, and enjoyed exchange of gifts.

Stenus Harms In Hospital

Stenus Harms, who lives in a small cabin at Goodell, is in the Belmond hospital recovering from frost-bite.

Last week one day Mr. Harms evidently became ill on his way home and some time later was found lying in a snow bank unconscious. One arm and hand was badly frozen and he was taken to the hospital for treatment.

Third And Fourth Grade Pupils Went Caroling

Miss Seben and Miss Dobson and the 3rd and 4th grade pupils went caroling Monday evening, singing "A White Christmas" and using a flash lights for candles to light the way. A light snow was falling and it all made a pretty scene.

Tom Blank was especially pleased when they called at his home and the children were delighted to see Mr. Blank's famous mechanical Christmas tree. Mr. Blank invites everyone to come and see his beautiful tree.

JOE'S PLACE

SAFETY RULES FOR YOUR—

CHRISTMAS TREE

This diligent inspector is Norval Wardle, safety specialist of Iowa State College, who hopes he's only taking your place in making sure that all Christmas trees are safe, secure and green throughout the holiday season. Even one Christmas tree fire is one too many, he says.

Just about now is a good time to put up your Christmas tree. A good 10-day to 2-week span is about all the average tree can take and keep its needles from dropping, even with the best of care.

But if your family has been a little eager about the holiday season and you already have your tree in place, take a good look at it in the light of the safety precautions shown for the tree in the picture.

Note the sturdy lard can filled with sand and water. The can is deep enough to hold plenty of sand, and the tree can stand in it without toppling over. Note, too, the bracing of wire to the tree trunk.

Keep Fresh

All our Christmas trees, says Norval Wardle, Iowa State College safety specialist, take plenty of water to stay fresh throughout the holidays. The more moisture they get, the more fragrance they give off. Trees which are cut early and shipped in have a tendency to dry out quicker than ones just cut and brought into your home immediately before Christmas. And under the right conditions this drying out can be a fire hazard.

Foresters will tell you, also, to cut the end of the tree on a long slant rather than chopping it off straight. Even though your tree may have been cut this way, make a fresh cut so that the pores of the tree trunk will be open and can absorb as much water as possible.

The best place to set your tree is in the coolest party of your room, preferably near a window. It looks pretty from the outside, and it won't dry out as fast. For safety's sake, keep it away from your fireplace, living room heating unit, the radiator, candles and hot light bulbs.

Check Your Lights

Perhaps you already have your Christmas tree lights, or perhaps you plan to buy some more. Check the ones you have carefully to make sure there is no chance of defective wiring. Some sets of Christmas tree lights bear just a small flat yellow piece of paper wrapped around the wire indicating that the wire has been approved. Don't be fooled by this into thinking that the set has been approved. Just the wire has been checked, Wardle points out. If you want a set that has been thoroughly tested and approved after the set was made up, look for a large tag or a doughnut-shaped tag on the set. This means that the set has passed the inspection of the Underwriters' Laboratory.

Don't wire two sets of Christmas tree lights togther. This is another highly dangerous practice as pointed out by safety experts.

The fancy snow we use on the Christmas trees is fireproof; that is, it won't burn by itself. All our tree decorations should be of this nature. That eliminates cotton and anything of a cotton nature, for these materials are highly flammable. Metal ornaments are O.K. So are some of the new plastics, but the container should tell you if they are approved as safe.

Each year there are more than 28 million Christmas trees harvested, most of which are sold. Although the number of Christmas tree fires are few, even one is an uncalled-for tragedy, Wardle points out. And remember, for a happy holiday season, turn off the tree lights when you leave the house.

Enrollment in U.S. Colleges Shows Big Drop in 1950

CINCINNATI, O.—Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, and nationally known statistician of higher education, reported that nearly 75 per cent of 492 approved American colleges and universities reported decreases in enrollment in 1950. Nearly 58 per cent recorded considerably smaller freshman classes.

This fall's drop continues a downward trend begun last year from the postwar peak. Dr. Walters attributed the decline to the departure from the campus last June of the large 1950 graduating classes, a major proportion of whom were veterans of World War II, and also to the small freshman classes, diminshed in consequence of the low birthrate of the 1930s.

Total full-time attendances at the five largest state universities reporting were: University of California, 36,989; University of Illinois, 23,500; University of Minnesota, 22,000; Ohio State University, 20,500 and University of Michigan, 19,000.

The five largest universities under private control reporting in today's study show these estimated full-time totals: Columbia University, 22,050; University of Southern California, 20,153, with more than 50 per cent veterans; New York University, 20,000; Boston University, 11,200, and University of Pittsburgh, 10,067.

Other representative universities under private control report these estimated full-time totals: Harvard University, 5,000; University of Chicago, 6,750; Johns Hopkins University, 2,400; University of Detroit, 8,720; Cornell University, 3,600; University of Pennsylvania, 3,850, and Vanderbilt University, 3,175.

Among municipal institutions reporting estimated full-time totals are: Colleges of the City of New York, 26,376; University of Cincinnati, 6,162; University of Louisville, 3,224; University of Toledo, 2,840; University of Wichita, 2,500, and University of Akron, 2,020.

Methodist Pastor Recoups Losses in Traffic Arrest

MADISON, Tenn. — The Rev. James H. Elder recently recouped some losses in a traffic arrest.

Miss Alice Ann Baker asked Dr. Elder to conduct her marriage ceremony and he in turn asked to meet the bridegroom. That proved a little embarrassing because the young man turned out to be state highway patrolman Walter Toone, who only two days earlier had arrested Dr. Elder for speeding.

Dr. Elder told him: "I am searching for the longest and most agonizing ritual in the Methodist church. Of course, I'll ask a long list of questions, but will break in before you can answer any of them.

"The fee? It'll be $14.95 plus costs. And if you are ever brought before me again, I'll double it."

Yugoslav Magazine Jibe Brands Soviet 'Snowwhite'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Snowwhite is poking fun at Russia these days in the Yugoslav humorist publication Jez.

In one, Snowwhite encountered seven dwarfs. The dwarfs took her home and fed her "milk and honey, shones and gasoline, heavy industry and aluminum, spy trials and other dainties". Soon says Jez, Snowwhite grew a bit plump, developed a double chin. The dwarfs lost weight. But, according to its story, the dwarfs dwell happily, because they see only the other dwarfs and feel equal because they are of the same, reduced size.

As last reported, Snowwhite was looking less like a lost and lonesome princess than a good fat stepmother. To Jez, Russia has become its version of Snowwhite; the dwarfs are the Cominform countries which once loved their mistress.

1850 White House Lacked Dictionary, Even a Bible

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Up until 1850 the White House lacked a dictionary, even a Bible.

Start of the White House library had its inception in the discovery 100 years ago in the middle of a cabinet dispute on terminology that the presidential resident possessed neither a dictionary nor a Bible.

Francis De Sales Ryan, a veteran of thirty years with the Treasury, turned up the anecdote.

President Millard Fillmore and the treasury secretary, Thomas Corwin, were arguing over a word in some proposed legislation. This was in the fall of 1850. When Corwin suggested that a dictionary would settle the issue, the President replied:

"I am sorry to inform you that there is no dictionary in the White House. The only dictionary in the government service, as far as I know, is in the library of the treasury."

Mrs. Abigail Fillmore, however, was a lover of literature—and she decided to do something about the matter. She gave a series of dinner parties, as a result of which appropriate legislation was passed to sanction a White House library.

CAN USE STALK CHOPPER TO KILL THE CORN BORER

Corn borer control measures can continue right through the winter months if a farmer has the equipment to do it. Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, points out that a stalk chopper will kill an average of 50 percent of the borers in the field during the winter months.

Anytime the ground is frozen and there is no snow, the chopper can be used. It will be impossible to kill all the borers, but a good percentage will be knocked out.

One disadvantage from using the stalk chopper in the winter is the fact that it breaks the leaves loose and they may blow into the fence row.

Gunderson reports that experiments at Iowa State College have shown a disk will do just about as good a job as a stalk chopper at killing borers. Of course, a disk cannot be used when the ground is frozen during the winter, he adds.

KOREAN LETTERS OF EMERGENCY EMIL

DEAR BABE: Tell me more about this "abstention" routine in the U.N. Security Council. It seems to me that whenever the chips are down quite a few of the delegates abstain. If it is okay that far away from the battle lines, why isn't it okay here in Korea? There are plenty of times when a G.I. would like to reply to the top sarge with a firm, "I am abstaining. I approve of this war and would not put anything in the way of the victory, but an abstention will be necessary as I must await instructions from home." If them diplomats stand for a bright new world and an all-out fight against aggressors why shouldn't they show the same guts as a G.I. and not take no runout powder in the tough spots.

* * *

Over here in a Korean winter with light underwear I felt like an abstention yesterday, but when I suggested it to the sarge he gave me a wilting look and just said, "Go ahead and abstain. Just give me a little notice so the court martial can handle your case promptly." I argued with him and told him I am behind U.N., and second to nobody in my yen to finish off the sneak punch enemy and get out of here, but I got previous commitments and would like to review the whole Korean matter to make sure I am right on all points, but I get no place with him.

* * *

He won't even debate no issue with me or listen to no resolutions or amendments from me, so I guess I will forget it and stick to army rules and regulations which I wish also applied to Lake Success. There is one great break the boys get over here, they can't tune in on diplomatic debates.

* * *

I am not squawking. This Korean job has got to be done and it will be done. I was a little disappointed with the elections back home as no candidate got elected on a promise of one war to a customer, and I been in more wars already than Humphrey Bogart and the Foreign Legion. You can be in the army now and see more new countries in a month than the cameramen for the movie travelogues see in a year. Whenever I start griping the sarge says I am lucky I am not in Tibet or Indo China. He could be right. I get plenty of uphill work in Korea, but I guess the climbs are longer and harder in them Himalaya Mountains. I want no guard duty on Mt. Everest.

* * *

When I get home I am going to that statue of Sherman and his horse in Fifth Avenue and boo them both for understatements. Sherman said war is hell, but he didn't know the half of it. Hell is bad but I think the rules there bar ambush experts in white sneakers, double dealers who hit below the belt at all times and the atrocity specialists which Russia and the Chinese Commies seem to stand behind. I miss you like everything and hope you feel likewise. Don't let nobody cut in one me. Have a little patience and me and MacArthur will have this all over soon.

Love,
Emil.

P.S.—Troubles attended to any time promptly. Phone or wire or write.

Washington has banned construction of any more bars, taverns or cocktail bars for the period of emergency. There is now one cocktail bar to a person in this country, and it is felt the people can get along on that basis if they really try hard.

New York high schools will start courses in auto driving February 1st. The era of the boy and girl who fail in most studies but net honors in motoring is at hand. As the old song might be revised:

School days, school days, dear old traffic rule days:
Driving and weaving in traffic thick,
Taught to the tune of a hickory stick;
You were my girl in calico,
All through the driving class we'd go;
We both got good marks, high speed or low
When we were a couple of kids.

JUST KIDDING

No Petting

The sweet young thing entered the office of the fashionable dog kennels and tripped up to the handsome young man at the desk.
"I want a pet," she cooed.
"I'd love to," he answered sadly, "but the boss is awfully strict."

Thirsty

"Some men thirst after fame, some after love, and some after money."
"I know something that all thirst after."
"What's that?"
"Salted almonds."

Small Contribution

"I have made a will leaving my brains to the hospital and just got an acknowledgment from the authorities."
"Were they pleased?"
"They wrote that every little thing helps."

Tragedy

An American in London, who was badgered by the English on almost every topic, at last determined to go on the Mississippi steamboat style, and brag about everything. His first chance occurred at an exhibition of paintings, where a picture of a snowstorm attracted general admiration.
"Is not that fine?" asked a Britisher. "Could you show anything as natural as that in America?"
"Pooh!" answered the American, "That is no comparison to a snowstorm picture painted by a cousin of mine a few years since. That painting was so natural, sir, that a mother, who uncautiously left her babe sleeping in a cradle near it, on returning to the room found her child frozen to death!"

Wet and Dry

A little boy had been absent from school and the teacher sent him home to get an excuse from his mother. He came running back to school and handed the paper to his teacher. This is what his mother had written.
"Dear Teacher: Please excuse my Tommy from being absent. He got wet in the A.M. and had to be dried in the P.M."

Why It Fell

"Hey, look — the barometer's falling!"
"Tsk, tsk — probably wasn't nailed up right."

Chinese Reds

Jacob Malik (left), chief of the Soviet delegation to the U. N. and Julius Katz-Suchy (center), Polish delegate, are on hand to welcome the nine-member Chinese Communist delegation which appeared before the United Nations. Malik is shown shaking hands with Gen. Wu Hsiu Chuan, head of the Chinese group.

KOREA:

Chinese Attack

With Gen. Douglas MacArthur personally directing the start, U.N. forces in North Korea launched what was called the "big-win-the-war-push." Initial successes were reported by U.N. commanders, but Chinese Communists counterattacks stalled the drive and broke through the U.N. front at a number of points.

As many as 200,000 Chinese Communists were reported in North Korea, overrunning U.N. positions and threatening the entire army.

The Reds were swiftly exploiting their breakthrough. They were reported swarming along "every road, gulley and ridge line." As many as 21 divisions were reported to be in action.

The situation in Korea was so serious that General MacArthur told the non-Communist powers that they must decide quickly what to do about the grim prospect of "an entirely new war" against Red China. He went so far as to suggest that World War III had actually begun and could be stopped only by a last-minute political solution.

Overnight the military situation in Korea became desperate. MacArthur said Chinese Communists had already thrown "a major segment" of their armies into Korea. They have shown "the obvious intent and preparation" to reinforce this spearhead with perhaps 300,000 more men now on the move in Manchuria, he added.

Observers said that total defeat in Korea was not unlikely if some last minute action is not taken by the United Nations. It was no secret that military commanders wanted the authority to bomb supply centers and concentration points in Manchuria where the Communists have organized for the attack.

CONGRESS:

The Politicians Fight

President Truman put several questions to the lameduck session of congress on the opening day and immediately the politicians began their wrangling. To the American listening to the depressing news from Korea and screams of a troubled world, the gentlemen in the senate and house appeared somewhat ridiculous, to put it mildly.

The administration asked for extension of rent controls, statehood for Alaska and Hawaii, increased taxation to meet budget requirements, and increased defense appropriations.

Most observers believe the rent control extension measure is doomed to defeat. Republican senators said it could wait. What the delay is for no one knows, unless it is to tighten the squeeze on the little man.

A bitter and possibly long fight was indicated in both houses over the administration's call for an excess-profits tax. Even the proposed legislation granting statehood to Alaska and Hawaii seemed in for a knock down and drag out fight.

Republican leaders, buoyed by election victories, seemed determined to have a greater say in the nation's foreign policy. Many observers believe if they could collect Secretary of State Acheson's scalp they would be satisfied.

This wrangling of the politicians is getting results in one way, however. The American public is on the verge of screaming fits. More than anything else the average American would like to see some degree of unity in congress at a time when the nation faces a serious crisis.

ATOMIC POWER:

To Reveal Secrets

The announcement that the United States, Great Britain and Canada had agreed to release data relating to "low-power" nuclear reactors was greeted by most observers as one of the most important decisions in regard to the question of atomic secrecy to be made by the three powers.

The agreement permits the publication of information necessary to the design, construction, and operation of four U.S. low-power reactors as a means of stimulating atomic-energy development in the countries, particularly for peace-time application.

The atomic energy commission said the three governments agreed that the release of the information under the revised guide will speed the training of nuclear-reactor engineers and techinicians and will hasten atomic-energy development in these countries, particularly for peace-time applications.

Before such a reactor can be built by a private institution, however, the permission of the government to use the necessary fissionable materials is required.

SECURITY LAW:

Wheels Begin to Turn

The first step against the Communist party under the subversive control act, passed by the last session of congress, was taken when the justice department filed a petition with the subversive activities control board to force Communists in this country to register.

Thus the wheels of law begin to grind under an act that has been criticized as unworkable.

The 4,800 word petition, signed by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, charged the Communist party of the United States with being run by the government of Soviet Russia.

The Communist party refused to register voluntarily under the internal security law and is expected to fight the petition.

Seth Richardson, chairman of the control board, said the hearings on the petition might be expected to run for months.

Tragedy

Two trains on the Long Island railroad smashed into each other in one of the bloodiest wrecks in the nation's history. Seventy-seven dead and 332 injured were removed from the wreck which has touched off an investigation of the railroad on which another crash a few months earlier took a toll of 33 dead and 125 injured.

A-BOMB:

Use Is Vetoed

American military leaders considered, but voted against using the atom bomb on massed Communist troops early in the Korean war.

Authoritative sources said the proposal had been advanced simultaneously but independently by army and air force officers when the bulk of the North Korean army was concentrated in a small area near the town of Suwon. Moral reasons entered into the decision.

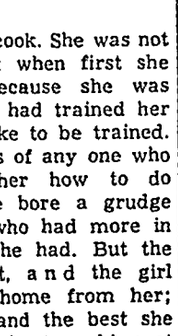
Something for Love

Lesson for December 24, 1950

SCRIPTURE: Luke 2:1-20; Philippians 4:4-7.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 2: 1-15.

THIS is a true story but it also is a parable for Christmas.

Once upon a time there lived a lady who had everything. As Christmas time came on, her many friends racked their brains to think what they could give her It would have been absurd to send her a check, for though she was not rich she did not really need money There was nothing to speak of that she seemed to need for her house, for she had lived in one place for some time and she had collected about all the furniture and bric-a-brac that her house would hold. There was not much use in giving her something like candy because she was on a diet and could not eat fancy foods. She had more pictures than she could hang at one time, and as for books, she had a taste above best-sellers and what she could not get from the public library she could buy for herself.



Dr. Foreman

* * *

A Lovable Person

HOWEVER, her friends were determined to give her something, for she was a lovable person; so when Christmas time came her table was piled with gay parcels from near and far. Some of the gifts may have been expensive and some not, but all were beautiful.

So she appreciated them, but because she could have bought any of them herself, she did not appreciate any of them quite so much as she did one present that when Christmas morning came could not be seen at all. One could not call it a beautiful present to look at; indeed it was seen only once. But the memory of it lingered for a long time.

This lady had a cook. She was not a very good cook when first she went to work, because she was young and no one had trained her and she did not like to be trained. She was suspicious of any one who tried to show her how to do anything, and she bore a grudge against any one who had more in this world than she had. But the lady was patient, and the girl learned about a home from her; indeed the most and the best she learned was not about cooking at all, as you shall see.

* * *

The Invisible Gift

ON the day before Christmas the girl went home early to spend the day with her family. But before dark on Christmas day, in the same hour the kitchen stove went out of order and visitors came to spend the night, and the lady fell ill. Not knowing what to do, she called up the girl, Christmas though it was, and asked her if she could come back and help out for a few hours to get things straight.

So the girl came and made the stove behave and cooked a meal and took care of her friend and made everything as it should be on that day. When it was late and time to go, the lady offered the girl more than her usual pay. But the girl would not take even one coin. She said to her friend: "I like to do something for love."

So when the presents lay opened, on the very top of the pile, visible to the inward eye alone, were the hours of work given because the giver wanted to do something for love.

* * *

The True Gift

GIFTS that are sold in the stores, gifts that crowd the post offices, carloads of gifts that pass each other in the night on roaring wheels, the little gifts and the great: which of these are given for love?

Some are sent to return a favor; some because it is the thing to be done; some are sent out of old habit, or in hope of favors to come. Where is the true Christmas gift?

It can never be seen, for it cannot be sold in the stores and the post office does not know the rates on it. It comes silently, and sometimes only the giver and God know about it, and the one who receives it does not suspect. But it shines above all the tinsel and the stars upon the Christmas tree; when the lights are out it glows in the dark. It keeps the night bright for the lonely heart. It is the something done for love.

That is what Christmas means. On the first Christmas Eve, Mary the blessed Mother, was in pain, but it was pain borne in love. You could not have paid her for it. Yes, and the Child that lay in the manger that night was there because God wanted to do something—for love.

BETTER BUTTER AIM OF CREAM QUALITY PROGRAM

A. W. Rudnick, extension dairy specialist at Iowa State College, points out the main reason for the extensive cream quality program now under way in this state. Iowa's butter must be improved in quality if the state is to remain a leader in the butter business.

The object is to obtain fine cream of good quality that is clean and fresh. Fresh cream is defined by Rudnick as cream not more than 4 days old. The creameries must have this kind of cream to produce top-grade butter.

Rudnick reports that a lot of fine butter is now made in the state, but a lot of under-grade butter is also produced. This is the type that must be eliminated.

Iowa ships about 80 percent of its butter out of the state, which means it must meet the federal standards as well as Iowa's. Federal regulations are becoming more rigid, and more and more butter is falling below standard.

The United States Food and Drug Administration has been making a drive on the cleanliness of the cream from which the product is made as well as the sanitary equipment and make-up of the creameries where it is turned out.

Butter can be destroyed if it is not up to the standard the government requires. It isn't necessary to prove the butter has foreign material in it. It merely needs to be shown that the cream from which it was made contained extraneous material. Creameries shipping substandard butter are subject to heavy penalties as well as loss of the butter by confiscation.

The butter market itself is also becoming more exacting, and Iowa creameries will have to make more high-quality butter if they are to take advantage of the best market.

Rudnick says the hopes are to eliminate all butter below B grade within the next 6 or 8 months. This will require the elimination of all hand-skimmed cream and all water-separated creameries must receive a top-quality product from farmers.

Reporting...
DRUNK DRIVER HEADING SOUTH

Don't let a drunken driver spoil your NEW YEARS...
Report him immediately to the nearest Police Station, Sheriff's Office or Highway Patrolmen.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

If you think reporting a drunk driver to the law makes you a "stool pigeon," and isn't quite the 'sporting' thing to do, then what do you consider sport? Letting that drunk bag his limit of human lives on the highway

Suppose your life depended on whether that drunk were reported and caught, or left to weave his killing path down the road! Then wouldn't you rather be a pigeon on a stool than a body on a slab?

Reporting a drunk driver isn't like reporting somebody who was speeding or ran a stop sign. In case of drunk driving, the officer can see the violation because it's continuous. The drunk will still be drunk when he's caught.

Last year, 23 per cent of the drivers involved in fatal accidents in Iowa were drunk or had been drinking enough to impair their driving ability.

This year, that figure climbed over the 22 per cent mark in the first nine months . . . . even before the heavy year's-end holiday fatality score is completed and added up!

You can help. "Squeal" on that drunk before the squeal of brakes marks another crash that snuffs out another life! Report him to police, sheriff, or the highway patrol. Or, any time of the day or night, notify the state police radio at Alantic, Cedar Falls, Des Moines, Fairfield, Maquoketa of Spencer

Klemme teachers who have been at home for the Christmas holiday will return in time for the opening of school Tuesday morning.

Music Recital Held At Gerardi Home December 20th

On the evening of December 20th at 8:00 a piano recital was held at the E. A. Gerardi home. The mothers of the students were present and each given a sprig of holly to add to the Christmas atmosphere.

Those who participated were: Miriam Hartbeck, Virginia Kudje, Cozette Lau, Lois Ann Jacobs, Craig and Bob Larson, Shirley and Jeanne Barz, Ione and Rosalie Rosendahl, Maurene and Melva Johnson, Myrna and Graydon Barz, Gracka Gerardi, Jane Renner, Ruth and Maynard Pringnitz and Roxanna Back.

Afterwards gifts were exchanged and a lunch was served.

Study Group Met December 19 At The Parsonage

The "Study Group" of the Methodist W.S.C.S. held their December 19 meeting at the parsonage with Mrs. Egeland hostess assisted by Mrs. Benn Coobs.

The origin of the hymn "O Come All Ye Faithful" was given by Mrs. Elmer Arnold. Mrs. Clarence Lemke gave the devotions. Her topic was "The Christmas Story."

Mrs. John Chambers finished the third chapter of the study, "Near East Panorama." Polly Medin very ably conducted the questions and answers.

Nineteen persons were present. The hostesses served a delicious Christmas luncheon.

New Equipment Installed In Times Office Past Week

The Times plant last week installed a new piece of epuipment, a Challenge proof press of the latest design, to replace an older proof press which was not accurate enough in turning out proofs for commercial printing. Some new attachments were also added to the equipment in the bindery enabling the plant to V-slot holes for ledgers and looseleaf books.

The Times specializes in producing fine commercial printing, color process work and both letterpress and offset photochemical printing, for customers and other printers.

Fire Department Answers Call Christmas Night

At about 7:00 o'clock Christmas night the Klemme Fire Department was called to the Edward Medaus residence were a chimney was burning out and endangering the roof. The boys soon had the situation well in hand and no damage was done.

The firemen again ask the people of Klemme to refrain from calling the operator as to where the fire is until the fire truck has left the shed.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

"Joe," Laura said, looking concerned, "I think Bill's making noises about leaving the party. And, honestly, I don't think he's in any shape to drive."

"Oh, sure," Joe agreed. "Bill's had a few drinks. But what can we do? He gets pretty sore if you tell him he's had too much."

"Well, I still think we should call a cab, or something. He might . . oh, look! He's going to wear Edna's hat home!

"Yea, what a guy!" Joe waved. "G'night, Bill. Happy New Year—and take care of that hat!"

* * *

"Here y'are folks," Joe announced later. "One more round of drinks, and then you all go home. The New Year's an hour old already."

"Not out west, it isn't," said Edna. "Turn on the radio, Joe, and let's welcome the New Year all over again."

Joe juggled the tray in one hand and turned on the radio with the other. The announcer was shouting over a blare of horns and whistles.

"You've just heard the New Year arrive in Denver," he said. "In one hour, we'll take you to San Francisco for the last lap of our coast-to-to-coast New Year's party."

* * *

The blare faded out, and a local announcer spoke.

"Here is a bulletin from our newsroom. Police report a driver believed to be intoxicated has crashed into another car at Fifth and Elm, killing two and injuring two.

"No identifications have been released as yet.

"The driver described as intoxicated was seriously injured. He was alone in the wreckage, but police believe there may have been another person with him—because a woman's hat was found beside him in his car."

COUNTY RURAL YOUNG PEOPLE HAD PARTY

According to reporter Catherine Cosgriff, approximately 35 members of the Hancock County Young People held their annual Christmas party December 11 at the REA building in Garner.

After a short business meeting conducted by the president, Glenn Sloan, games were played followed by square dancing.

Gifts of toys were exchanged. These toys were sent to children at the I.O.O.F. Home at Mason City for their Christmas.

Committee in charge of recreation and refreshments were Lois Hueneman, Paul Henderson, Charlene Engstler, Hazel Zeigler and Connie Burgardt.

The 1951 officers were elected at the regular November meeting and will take over their duties in January. Connie Burgardt is the new president; Irma Bird, vice president; Lois Hueneman, secretary; Mickie Sweeney, treasurer; and Catherine Cosgriff, reporter.

Eleven Hancock County RYP members attended the Mitchell County RYP banquet ant dance at Osage, December 13th.

KEEP FARMSTEAD WALKS AND STEPS ICE-FREE

Steps and walkways around the farmstead are critical points from the standpoint of farm safety during the cold, icy winter months. They are the cause of many falls and injuries.

Norval Wardle, the extension farm specialist at Iowa State College, reminds Iowa farmers and their families that falls are the No. 1 cause of accidents on the farm. A good share of these occur during the winter.

The back steps of the farmhouse are usually one of the most dangerous spots. The catch a lot of the water from the roof of the house when it melts and the steps become icy as a result.

Wardle reports that some farmers have fixed drain pipes to keep the water from draining on the steps. Others have the steps constructed so they'll drain off the water that does fall on them.

However, if this isn't the case, and a farmer is bothered with icy steps, the safety specialist recommends keeping the ice and snow removed as much as possible. They should be cleaned well, and what moisture is left will usually freeze dry.

One way to remove ice is to sprinkle the steps with calcium chloride or reguler salt. Then when the ice melts, the steps should be swept clean. If they aren't swept, the moisture will soon freeze again.

It's also a good idea to have the walkways around the farm clearly marked. Then they should be used while doing the chores. Wardle reports that it's easy to stumble over objects covered by snow that have been left lying alongside regular walkways.

EVELYN ARNOLD APPEARED ON BROADCAST OVER STATION KXEL

Evelyn and four others of Miss Ranney's Child Psychology prepared the script and gave a discussion: "What Parents Expect of Teachers." The program was interesting.

Evelyn Arnold has been teaching for a number of years and is completing the two year Teachers Training Course at Upper Iowa this year.

Miss Arnold is an excellent student. She plans to teach in the grades next year.

Purchased Home In Klemme

Mr. and Mrs. John Pannhoff have purchased the John Heginger house in the northwest part of town and will move in from the farm later. Mr. Heginger will make his home with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tiggeman.

LARGE NUMBER OF PEOPLE ATTENDED ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

Open house was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson on Sunday, December 17th, 1950, in observance of their Silver Wedding Anniversary. During the afternoon and evening more than 250 people called on the Swansons to offer their congratulations and best wishes.

A nice lunch, consisting of a variety of cakes, ice cream, coffee and wedding cake was served by the Upper Flat Ladies Aid. The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The Upper Flat community presented the couple with a beautiful coffee service. Mr. and Mrs. Swanson also received many other gifts and a purse of silver.

Quite a number of people from Klemme anr vicinity called on Mr. and Mrs. Swanson on the 25th anniversary to wish them many more years of happy married life.

ARTIFICIAL BREEDING UTILIZES PROVEN SIRES

Proven sires are being put to good use in Iowa, thanks to artificial insemination.

A Holstein sire, Sir Bess Ormsby Dean 761974, has sired about 7,500 calves since he went into artificial insemination service in January 1948. Robert Fincham, extension dairy husbandman at Iowa State College estimates that the same bull would have sired about 125 calves during a similar period had he been confined to a single dairy herd using the natural service breeding method.

A Wisconsin bull has an even greater record with 50,555 first services to his credit.

Such spectacular use of a proven sire makes it possible to get the most from good breeding. Dairymen throughout the Hawkeye state can in this way take advantage of some of the best sires available, Fincham says. Herd owners can do this at a marked saving under the normal cost of owning and keeping their own sire, and they usually have better calves to show for it.

December 25 Is Red-Letter Day In Most Lands

ON CALENDARS in most lands, December 25 is a red — and green—letter day.

The holiday isn't always called Christmas and many countries celebrate on different dates. Even Santa Claus has his name and appearance changed as he circles the globe, and a multitude of Yuletide customs exist in different nations.

How long the Christmas festival has been celebrated is not definitely known. However, according to the World Book Encyclopedia, the holiday was spoken of in the 380's as a custom of long standing.

In all Scandinavian countries, a Christmas tree, consisting of a sheaf of wheat bound to a pole, is raised for the winter birds. In Norway, an important item on the Christmas menu is a rice pudding into which is put one almond. The person who finds the almond in his pudding will be the first to get married. A light burning in the windows of Norwegian homes informs travelers they are welcome to food and shelter.

In China, odd stockings, made by sewing three pieces of muslin together, are hung up on Christmas Eve to hold the gifts brought by Lan Khoong-Khoong, which means "Nice Old Father." The Chinese Santa Claus is also known as "Dun Che Lao Ren," or "Christmas Old Man," and their Christmas tree is called the "Tree of Light." Early-morning carolers sing Chinese words to such old favorites as "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

An important part of the Christmas season in Guatemala, Honduras and Mexico is the pinata, a brightly decorated jar of sweets hung by a cord from the branch of a tree. The children are given long sticks, and each child gets a chance to break the pinata, and release the stored candies.

Norway Christmas Was Top Event

CHRISTMAS just couldn't help being the event of events in Norway when great-grandmother was a girl.

Without exaggeration, preparation for Christmas actually began six months before December 24. Everything which was used—food, clothing, household furnishings — was prepared in the home. Even the leather for shoes was tanned from hides raised on the homestead.

The cloth for apparel, from the skin out, was woven on hand looms. Cobblers came to the house and made the shoes; dressmakers and tailors came. Everyone in the household had to have a new wardrobe for Christmas and, since tailors and cobblers and dressmakers could not be all places at once, it was necessary to get an early start.

When the butchering was finished—in October or November—the suet was melted and the candles were made. The children always had a hand in making the little ones for use on the Christmas tree.

Even the birds were remembered with special Christmas trees which were made by tying bundles of straw to long staves or poles: the youngsters gleaned the bits of grain by following the reapers at harvest time, and the poles were set up around the yard on Christmas Eve

MASQUERADE . . . This, gentle reader, is a Christmas cat. There is no apparent reason why this Persian mousehound should be garbed as Jolly old Saint Nick except that (now watch out) maybe it has Santa Claws.

Christmas Tree Becomes Big Business in U.S.

The Christmas tree has become big business in the United States Throughout the country, some 15 to 16 million trees will be cut and shipped for the holiday demand With prices ranging from $1 to $15 a tree, that adds up to real money

More and more farmers are discovering that they can get a cash crop from eroded acres by growing Christmas trees.

FOR THE KIDS

Toys for Christmas Feature 'Atomic' Sets, Reflect Sciences, Arts

Toys for Christmas 1950 will reproduce in detailed miniature every phase of peace-loving America's arts, industries and sciences.

Although some toys are keyed to juvenile interest in atomic energy, jet propulsion and miniatures of U.S. army and navy equipment, playthings designed to determine aptitudes and build careers in homemaking, architecture, fashion designs, transportation, agriculture and chemistry dominate the new toy showings.

Cowboys will lead the toy gun and holster production; although the war headlines have inspired an increase in play uniforms and nurse costume sales.

Santa's toy pack will equal the record $300,000,000 (manufacturers' value) of the past three years with greatly improved quality, assuring parents peak play value for their money. Assistant Santas are advised to shop early for specially wanted items, as widespread shortages are expected in many popular lines because there are more than 45,000,000 children of toy age—40 per cent increase over pre-war years, and manufacturers face shortages of many basic materials.

The peaceful possibilities of nuclear research are stressed in this new atomic energy lab set. It includes a workable Geiger counter, a cloud chamber that makes visible the paths taken by alpha particles speeding at more than 12,000 miles per second, and a fluorescent screen that shows atomic radioactive material disintegrating. The set is guaranteed harmless.

This estimate on 1950 prospects was given by Arthur M. Raphael, president of the Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A.

"Toy volume in 1950 is expected to equal the record sales of the past three years which have been around $300,000,000 manufacturers' value," said Mr. Raphael. "Capitalizing on the opportunity offered by the 40 per cent increase in the number of children of toy age as compared with pre-war levels, manufacturers have utilized the latest research and manufacturing methods to produce more ingeniously varied designs. The new showings of toys, games, books and hobby equipment will offer parents more for their money of increased play value, tested age interest and better durability than ever before. Increases are noted in the number of toy designs adapted to children under five, a market which has increased 48 per cent since 1940."

Cowboy careers intrigue girls as well as boys this year. Several million cowgirls are reported to be enthusiastic wearers of Western regalia complete with lariats and two-gun holsters.

Juvenile firemen will get a thrill from a new model fire engine with a four foot ladder extension. A car set with a jack and wrench and removable wheels and tires gives Junior a chance to try his hand at repairs.

Catering to ranch minded boys, a new sidewalk bike features saddle bags and a rifle carrying case and holster in black leather with a smart white trim. For the three-to-five-year-olds there are convertible four-wheel bikes; the extra wheels are removed after the child learns to balance.

Mrs. Emil Anderson, 323[illegible] bash, Detroit, Mich., says she believes in folks being lucky and that . . . but she says that people today are inclined to rely too much on just good luck. One of Mrs. Anderson says, "is just fiction" . . . she isn't going around saying she thanks her lucky stars for feeling so good—No Sir! Mrs. Anderson—she says she feels so good now because she is taking HADACOL. She was suffering from a deficiency of Vitamins B[1], B[2], Niacin, and Iron which HADACOL contains

Here is Mrs Anderson's own statement:

"For many years now I have had nagging aches and pains in just a few places but all over my body—in fact I know a person couldn't have felt as miserable as I did.

"I was nervous too—so nervous that I couldn't even darn socks and the worst thing was I couldn't eat or sleep properly. I would just eat this and that never a full meal—and my stomach always felt bad. I was sick all the time—seems like every day would go up two or three times and would be completely worn out. I was just about at my wits end not knowing what to do.

"Then while visiting my sister in his wife in Morton-Gap, Ky., told me how his mother-in-law had been helped so much by HADACOL. I brought HADACOL home with me. The way home to Detroit with my family could tell a big difference after the second bottle. So far I have taken 6 or 7 bottles of HADACOL. What a wonderful change has taken place. I eat well and then enjoy my food, and sleep—I can't even stay up late enough to watch all of the television—I just drop off to sleep. I have plenty of energy too—now I can even go out in the yard and do the work. Yes HADACOL is wonderful—and you can bet your life I will never stop taking HADACOL."

Folks All Over the Country whose systems were deficient in Vitamins B[1], B[2], Niacin and Iron have been helped by HADACOL. HADACOL can help you too if you suffer from stomach distress, insomnia caused by nervousness, stomach, vague aches and pains, or a general run-down condition when they are caused by such deficiencies.

That's the kind of product you want—that's the kind you should buy and that's the kind you should start taking NOW!

Give remarkable HADACOL a chance to benefit you. Remember you have nothing to lose. HADACOL will make you feel like new after the first few bottles or you take, or your money will be refunded Only $1.25 for Trial Size Large Family or Hospital Size $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money, just your name and address on a penny post card Pay postman on delivery whether you want the $1.25 trial economy size or the $3.50 large size. KOREA:

Heartbreak Road

The military situation in Korea reached the point where no one would predict what would happen next. The situation was considered serious, and before this reaches print, may be desperate.

Military observers throughout the world were asking themselves if another Dunkerque was in prospect? They wanted to know was it possible, or even practicable, to attempt the establishment of a new defense line?

But several bitter facts could not be denied. United Nations forces in Korea were in full retreat. Pyongyang was evacuated and the retreating army jammed the road to Seoul, endless columns moving bumper to bumper. The road up the peninsula had been bloody, the one back was heartbreaking.

And as much as the free nations of the world hated to admit it, the Communist armies of China had demonstrated to the world they could march where they wanted to in the face of stiff resistance. General MacArthur estimated that China had thrown as many as 1,000,000 men into the campaign.

Military observers said it appeared the Chinese were determined to destroy the eighth army. If Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander, decided to stand and fight at some spot in South Korea, the U. S. army would face the greatest odds in its history.

Most observers admitted frankly that such a stand would be almost impossible against overwhelming odds. And a defeat would mean the loss of the entire eighth army.

The only other possibility was a beachhead like the one at Pusan, with artillery, planes and ships putting up a wall of steel from behind which the eighth army could be evacuated to Japan.

CONTROLS:

May Be Soon

For the first time, a high government official predicted that general wage-price controls will have to be invoked "to avoid damaging inflation." The official was Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

At a senate finance committee hearing, Snyder said:

"I should say that the situation as it is today, to avoid inflation of a damaging nature, these (general) controls will have to be put into effect."

Alan Valentine, chief of the federal wage-price-control agency, declined to be specific on timing when senators demanded to know what the administration plans to do about rising prices and wage problems.

Valentine told the lawmakers "we must look for and find very soon a plateau where prices and wages are generally in balance. I hope we now are near it."

There had been much private talk about price and wage controls, but this was the first time an official had publicly stated that the time was near at hand. One sad fact must be faced, however. During the past months when it was becoming more and more evident that sooner or later controls would have to be invoked, the administration took no steps to set up the necessary machinery to direct them.

Now that the question is becoming more pressing, there will be another delay while the government mobilizes a staff to direct control activities. In the meanwhile, the small towners of America can expect the price spiral to continue.

A-BOMB:

A Frightened World

A frightened world heard President Truman tell his weekly news conference that the United States would fight on in Korea and would use the atomic bomb if necessary.

Before his remark could be further explained, the capitals of Europe were in an uproar. Fear spread across western Europe like a tidal wave. Newspapers issued extras with black headlines and radio programs were interrupted to put the announcement on the air. Near panic on a world-wide scale was evident for the first time in history.

The President's statement created the impression that he had already given General MacArthur authority to drop the A-bomb whenever he considered it necessary and practical. Some hours later, however a White House statement made it plain that MacArthur had not been given that authority.

Although the situation had been somewhat cleared, the question of using the atomic bomb and its status in the event of all-out war caused a wave of discussion throughout the world.

Nearly every country in western Europe went on record against using the weapon. These nations obviously feared retaliation in kind from the Russians should the U. S. employ the weapon in the present Korean campaign.

Within the country the question was also top-most in the minds of every American. Most observers believed the public about equally divided on its use. The main argument for its use seemed to be it is the only weapon available that would prevent a disastrous miiltary defeat in Korea and the loss of nearly 100,000 American soldiers.

On the other hand, Americans in every walk of life pointed out that if we used the bomb the Russians might retaliate by bombing American cities and thus launching dreaded World War III.

PROFIT TAX:

House Passes Measure

By a vote of 376 to 20, the house passed an excess-profits tax estimated to bring in $4,600,000,000 from corporations in 1951. The measure is now expected to pass the senate and reach the White House by New Year's.

No one had expected the measure to get action in the lame-duck session of congress. The Korean crisis, however, made immediate action necessary.

Lesson for December 31, 1950

SCRIPTURE: John 15:1-10; Galatians 2:20, Philippians 3:8-16
DEVOTIONAL READING: John 15: 1-12.

HOW does a Christian grow? During the past three months this has been our underlying question. Now at the year's end we come back to the point where we began: to Jesus Christ. When all is said and done, the best way to describe a Christian's life is not "religious" or "spiritual" or even "godly," much less "pious." The best way to describe it is to put the fullest possible meaning into the single word "CHRISTIAN."

Dr. Foreman

• • •

"I Have Been Captured"

IN your hymnal you may find a hymn by the author of the better-known "O Love that wilt not let me go." It begins with these lines:

"Make me a captive, Lord,
And then I shall be free . . ."

That sounds upside-down. Captive and free are opposites, aren't they? Not when God is the captor! The American translation of Phil. 3:12 says, "I have been captured by Jesus Christ." Paul's word was a strong one; it was the Greek word used when police or soldiers take a man and tie him and lead him off.

People who have gone far in music would understand this. Take two young people, both of whom know something about music, maybe both of them in the same music school. One of them has been captured, so to speak, by music, the other has not. That is to say, in plainer language, music has "got hold" of one of them. There is an irresistible fascination about music for him, every day is too short for the study and practice he wants to do. The other one goes through his lessons, but his heart is not in it.

We need no prophet to tell us which of the two will make a good musician. So it is with the Christian faith. One who has never been captured by Christ may play around with the Christian faith, as the uncaptured music student may play around the music school; but his heart will not be in it.

Name any saint you like in the whole history of Christendom, whether famous like St. Francis or Ballington Booth, or known only to a few, like one of your own family perhaps; you always find that this person, whose Christianity was a living and powerful thing, called Christ Master, and meant it.

• • •

"Christ Lives in Me"

THERE is a more intimate way of putting this. It is true, the Christian has been "captured" by Christ. But this would still leave him on the outside. Christ lives in the Christian, as Paul said. For some people this may seem strange and mystical, but it can be understood by any one who wants to know what Christian living can mean.

Christ in the Christian means that in every situation, in every condition, at every turn of the road, in the everyday choices and conversations, the Christian will be as much like Christ as he possibly can. This is one point on which Christians of every name and church agree. Catholic or Protestant, conservative or liberal, our differences evaporate when our hearts are warm, when we try to think what the ideal Christian life is.

High-level Christians from all over Christendom would all come out with the same story that Paul put into classic words: I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me.

• • •

"Abide"

"ABIDE in me and I in you," said Jesus. That is a command and a promise. But the command comes first. Whether we think of the Christian as "in" Christ or Christ as "in" the Christian, it should be a long story, not a short one. Is the sunshine in the flower or the flower in the sunshine? Well, both. Put the flower in the sunshine and keep it there, and the sunshine will get into the flower. The sun makes the flower, not the flower the sun. Yet unless the flower stays in the sunshine, the sun can do nothing for it.

Christ never yet battered his way into any one's life. To know him as an occasional visitor is doubtless better than never knowing him at all. But friendship is far better than acquaintance, and to know him best one must know him always.

But the welcoming heart has him always for a guest. What 1951 will bring, no man can tell; but no friend of Christ will be afraid.

Korean Culture

War-torn Korea was once the pipeline of culture in Asia. It was from her that Japan first received the benefit of ancient China's culture and civilization. Korea also helped spread to Japan the philosophy of Buddha, which encouraged art and learning, at a time when Japan was still "a small island nation of farmers, fishermen, and hunters."

PIECES OF METAL AROUND BARN HAZARD TO CATTLE

With cattle spending more time in buildings and around feed lots at this time of year, its a good idea to make sure nails and small pieces of metal are picked up around hay and feed bunks, fences and barns, says Hancock County Extension Director, Paul Henderson.

Bits of hardware swallowed by cattle may result in herd losses, Henderson adds. Old nails, pieces of bailing wire, screws, small bolts and guarantee tag hooks from feed bags are the chief causes of "hardware diseases" in cattle. These materials may puncture a cows stomach, work between the lungs and lodge in or near the heart, causing death.

Symptoms of trouble caused by pieces of metal include abnormal pulse rate, poor digestion, getting off feed, fast breathing and a drop in milk production. When these symptons occur, a prompt call for a veterinarian may save a cow's life.

Henderson says that trouble from accumulations of hair in the rumen of young cattle also can be prevented. "Hair balls" are especially common in the digestive tract of young calves that are penned together and do a lot of sucking tails and ears.

Dr. J. B. Herrick, Iowa State extension veterinanrian says that by finding out if anything is lacking in animals diet, serious effects of hair accumulations might be headed off. Since the deficiency is often a lack of a rare or trace mineral, Herrick says let cattle have plenty of minerals and salt.

WATCH OUT FOR HOG FLU DURING WINTER MONTHS

Hogs need special care during the cold winter months to prevent flu, says Dr. J. B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College. He reminds hog raisers that cold, drafty sleeping quarters may be one of the main contributing factors of this disease.

It is caused by a virus similar to the one responsible for the human cold. The disease is characterized by a rise in temperature, a bad cough, and the hogs going off feed.

Herrick says hogs with the flu will usually lose a lot of weight but the mortality rate is low. The danger is in the hogs' resistance being lowered to allow secondary invaders such as pneumonia to enter.

There is no effective treatment for hog flu. Herrick says respiratory inhalants in the drinking water will help make the coughing easier.

The thing to do is prevent the disease in the first place by providing dry, draft-free sleeping quarters for the pigs.

Flu is especially bad for sows during the breeding season. If they are bred while they have the disease, they may fail to conceive or may have small litters and dead pigs. If flu occurs, breeding should be stopped until the disease is cleared up.

1951 FARM BUREAU KICK-OFF MEETING JANUARY 4TH AT GARNER

The 1951 Hancock County Farm Bureau membership Kick-off meeting will be held at the Garner High School Auditorium on Thursday evening, January 4th at 7:30 P. M. T. C. Peterson, former Hancock County Extension Director will be the speaker of the evening.

T. C. Petersen, a native of Iowa, is now serving as Regional Field Representative of the Midwest Region with the American Farm Bureau Federation. A graduate of Iowa State College, Mr. Petersen was a vocational instructor in Iowa from 1933 to 1936. From 1937 to 1941 he was county agricultural agent in Iowa and following, that for a year, he was a district fieldman with the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

In 1942 Mr. Petersen became state organization director for the Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation and served in that capacity until joining the American Farm Bureau Federation staff in November of 1949. "Pete" as we all know him, was the county extension director, for Hancock County from the fall of 1936 to June 1941.

All captains, leaders, workers and Farm Bureau officers numbering near 300 will be in attendance at this meeting. Each township team of workers will be given their kits of cards and materials for the membership drive, and each captain will receive a gift of appreciation from the Hancock County Farm Bureau,

If the enthusiasm and spirit that the fine group of captains, leaders and workers is any indication of the results of the membership drive, Hancock Co. will be one of the first counties to have their quota of 1320. Up to date, almost half of the quota has been sent or brought into the office. This fine cooperation by the members is greatly appreciated by all who spend many hours of work and miles of driving.

HANCOCK FARM BUREAU TO COMPLETE CARD DISTRIBUTION

The township Farm Bureau card distribution will be completed this week for all 16 townships in Hancock County. The response by the captains in having their leaders all selected and at the meetings has been very fine. Captains for the 1952 membership work has been selected by most of the township. This program of selecting captains for the next year was started last year, and saves the director and fieldman many miles of driving days of work. The cooperation of the Hancock County Farm Bureau members of this program has been almost 100 percent.

The mail collection of dues has been the best in many years. Three-eighty nine have been sent or brought into the office and with the 245 continuous membership agreements this will give up very near 50 percent of our quota of 1320 for Hancock County before the drive on January 5th.

"Let's make Hancock County one of the first in the state to have their quota" said Paul G. Shurts, county fieldman.

COWS WITHSTAND COLD IF BEDDING IS DRY

Floors get cold in the best dairy barns. But a good covering of dry bedding protects udders from cold which can easily result in chilled or frozen teats, and even mastitis.

Latest research indicates that dairy cows can stand low temperatures so long as they have a thick, dry bed with moderately warm temperaure on the floor, says Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Loose housing has the advantage of offering a warm bed if there is a good manure pack below it covered with a layer of dry bedding. Packed manure is a better insulation against cold ground temperatures than concrete floor.

Arnold reports that some dairymen are making their cattle stalls longer and wider so bedding can more easily be kept under the cows. It's also important to make sure that floors are water-tight, and that enough fresh bedding is kept in the stall to absorb all liquid manure.

FARM RECORD BOOK HELP IN FIGURING SICIAL SECURITY

Farmers who hire help who qualify under the social security program will have more bookkeeping to do in 1951. But the figuring choires will be held to a minimum for farmers who keep a farm account book, says Hancock County extension director, Paul Henderson.

Every three months a report must be sent to the government along with 1½ percent of the total wages paid to the hired man or woman eligible for social security during that time, Henderson says. If wages are listed in a farm account book it will be simple to do the figuring for the quarterly report.

A record of these wages will also come in handy when the time comes to pay 1951 income taxes.

The farm management section of the Extension Service at Iowa State College has prepared farm record books that meet the simplest needs and yet provide details for those who want a more complete record of their farming operations. These record books are now available at Henderson's office.

We appreciate your news so phone 12.

PRICE DETERMINES PROFITABLY OF FEEDING STOCK MOLASSES

Whether or not it pays Hancock County cattle feeders to feed molasses depends on what it costs in relation to corn, according to Paul Henderson, the county extension director.

He says that if molasses can be bought at 60 percent of the price of corn per ton, you can justify feeding up to one-fourth or even one-third of the total grain mixture as molasses to some kinds of cattle.

Theoretically, molasses furnishes only 67 percent as much energy value as an equal weigth of No. 2 corn. Experimentally, it has shown even less value.

Henderson points out that where fed in small quantities, 1 to 2 pounds daily with corn full-fed, molasses has been worth only about 55 to 60 percent as much per pound as corn. When fed in larger quantities experimentally as a partial substitute for corn with coarse low-grade roughage, it has been worth around 60 to 65 percent as much per pound as shelled corn.

There is no magic in molasses, particularly when it is fed with a full feed of corn. For all practical purposes, a feeding-grade of black-trap molasses is a straight carbohydrate or corn substitute.

The easiest and most convenient, and also the most expensive way to feed molasses is in commercial mixtures, Henderson says. The easiest way to feed it in quantity is by self feeding, in a tank, or by upending the barrel in the feed bunk. Calves full-fed corn and self-fed molasses usually eat from 2 to 3 pounds of molasses per day. Yearlings eat from 3 to 4 pounds, and 2 year-olds from 4½ to 6 pounds. By limiting the corn, molasses consumption can be increased by about one-third but gains are cut down.

When fed without grain but mixed with silage, chopped fodder or hay and plenty of protein, molasses has been feed as heavily as 10 to 12 pounds per head daily to big cattle with fairly satisfactory results.

LEGUMES' RESPONSE TO POTASH IS SPOTTY

Legumes respond to phosphate fertilizers better than other crops, but their response to potash has been spotty in Iowa soils, according to H. R. Meldrum, Iowa State College agronomist.

Speaking at the fertilizer short course held in Ames last week, Meldrum told Iowa dealers that 75 percent of the legume hay fields tested in the past 6 years have responded to phosphates, while only 20 percest responded to potash.

However, tests in Iowa and other states indicate that a legume plant well supplied with potash has a better chance of winter survival he added.

According to results of 1949 and 1950 tests summarized at the fertilizer short course, top-dressing legume stands appears to be worthwhile under a number of Iowa soil conditions. These include good legume stands that are to remain in hay for 2 or more years in fields where soil tests show a phosphorus or potassium deficiency.

Top-dressing legumes also will pay on low-phosphate or low potash soils where no fertilizer was applied or where only small amounts were applied at seeding time, and on fields where legumes show a stunted or abnormal growth.

Meldrum stated that on certain low-phosphate soils, is may not be economical to apply inital heavy rates of phosphate that are required to maintain top hay yields throughout the life of the meadow.

In such cases, top-dressing as the first or second-year meadow will make a profitable supplement to lighter applications made earlier to establish a stand.

On very low-potash soils it is not economical to apply all of the potash at seeding time. On low-potash soils, Meldrum says the best practice is to apply moderate amounts of potash to establish the seeding, followed by top-dressing the first or second-year hay crops.

Nation's Parents Join Together In Fight Against Cerebral Palsy

This is the first of two articles on the United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., and the work to which the organization is dedicated. The second article will appear next week.

The United Cerebral Palsy Association, Inc., recently celebrated its first birthday. Probably never before in America's history has a national movement grown up as spontaneously from parents as has the united fight to conquer cerebral palsy.

It was born of their love and determination that their stricken children should not share the tragic fate similar children had suffered since the beginning of time.

Despite all the progress in other fields, cerebral palsy in the 20th century stood out as a baffling mystery even to most physicians until a series of oddly-assorted events suddenly turned the tide. The three outstanding ones were a polio epidemic, a national radio program and a small informative pamphlet issued by a manufacturer of copper kettles.

The polio epidemic was in 1916, the nation's worst. Into consulting and waiting rooms of many physicians surged parents with children crippled by a type of paralysis. Many a heart was broken, as doctors shook their heads after examining these children. Little or nothing could be done. Since Biblical times the palsied had been with us. Some doctors said these children had Little's disease—so named from Dr. William John Little, pioneer English orthopedist, who first described the condition in 1861.

But with that polio epidemic in 1916, the spark of medical curiosity, to which mankind is indebted for many advances in human welfare, was beginning to burn. In Boston, two physicians decided to investigate further into this condition. From that beginning grew the body of knowledge which we have today on cerebral palsy.

• • •

FOR ONE OF THOSE Boston physicians, it was virtually the start of a lifetime work: Dr. Winthrop Morgan Phelps pursued the elusive trail with further work at Yale university, and 21 years later, he felt that enough knowledge as to treatment and diagnosis had been developed for the opening of a training center for doctors, therapists, teachers, medical social workers and psychologists.

The spark that grew to a bright light of hope penetrated into the homes of a few parents. In California a group of them banded together; three years later the association for cerebral palsy grew up spontaineously in New York City. In 1946 there were enough local groups to form the New York state association for cerebral palsy.

Then, one night in February, 1947, a brighter spotlight of hope fell in many still-darkened homes. It was a radio program, "Love Is A Doctor", part of a nation-wide series, "Exploring the Unknown". The writer knew his subject—his heart was poured into the script that Alvin Boretz wrote because every word he wrote was about his own son.

So tremendous was the flood of inquiries that the sponsor, a copper manufacturing company, commissioned the writing and publication of a small informative pamphlet on cerebral palsy.

Swiftly now more groups were formed throughout the nation. They corresponded with each other, and discussed forming a united national front against the common enemy.

In February, 1949, 12,000 people assembled from the United States, Canada, Europe and South America to attend the first cerebral palsy conference.

In the spring of 1949, a small group of women proceeded to raise a large portion of the "seed money" to help start UCPA. By July 1949 a sufficient amount had been raised to launch the association.

THE FICTION CORNER

EASY TOUCH

By Ona Freeman Lathrop

THE KID HAD BEEN following him for two blocks now. How was a guy to pick up any spare dough with a goggle-eyed urchin at his heels? You couldn't do it, that's all. He turned and waited for the kid to catch up.

3-Minute Fiction

"Say, beat it, will you? G'wan home. This is a tough neighborhood. Your ma'll be worried about you."

The kid dug his frazzled shoetoe in the dirt. He was a skinny little rat under the ragged gray sweater and the thin patched jeans, once you took a good look at him. His tow hair hung in little wisps from under the old torn cap, but his big brown eyes looked trusting. You couldn't hit a kid with eyes like that. Hank Nolan winced as he remembered how he'd always been an old softie for brown eyes.

The kid whined, "I'm hungry. There's nothin' for supper. I thought—"

"Well, you thought wrong. I'm not eatin' either. I'm broke—you hear me? Broke, I said." Now why did the kid's eyes have to bore through you like that? Why couldn't he go along home? Hank tried once more. "Now you git for home!"

When he glanced back a minute later, the kid was standing still in his tracks. Hank ambled on toward the bright lights. If Katy hadn't jumped on him like that when he got home, he wouldn't be feeling so lousy and low. Always harping about him getting a steady job.

"You're just a lazy good-for-nothing bum any more, Hank

The kid was a skinny little rat with wisps of tow hair sticking out from under the old torn cap.

Nolan," she'd told him. "Not working half the time. How do you expect me to keep the table set on nickels and dimes? There are plenty of jobs, even if they aren't your line. Either you get one or get out of here and don't come back. I'm sick of this." And she'd slammed the door behind him.

Well, let her rave. If he couldn't get his old job back—the kind he had before he went to the army—he wasn't going to take any old job that came along.

A FELLOW WAS staggering out of Scotty's tavern. He had on a good dark suit and soft fedora. Probably had a week's pay in his pocket, except what he'd left at Scotty's. Looked like an easy touch. Hank dodged back into the doorway of Mel's Eat Shop, with its ever-present pancake grill in the window turning up golden-brown cakes and its usual sign on the door, "Waiter Wanted." Ha! That was a laugh. 'Waiter Wanted'. Juggling trays in a joint like that!

The fellow was coming this way all right. He'd be here in a minute. Hank glanced up and down the street to see if there were any cops in sight. Not a soul—for once the street was deserted—except the kid.

The fellow was shuffling along close to Mel's place now. It would be a cinch—would have been a cinch, Hank thought. But he couldn't do it. Not with those big, brown eyes watching. Giving him the low-down on what kind of a guy he really was. Nope, he couldn't do it.

Hank let the fellow go on past. He faded into the Eat Shop. Mel was at the cash register by the door. There was a nose flattened against the outside of the pancake window, and two big brown eyes were peering through hungrily at the steaming cakes.

"That job still open for a waiter, Mel?" Hank asked.

"Sure is, Hank. You want to begin right now? We're in a jam."

"Be glad to," Hank answered, "if you could advance me a dollar or two." He pocketed the dollar bills Mel flipped to him and opened the door. "Be right back," he called to Mel.

And then to the big brown eyes he said, "Here, kid, take this home to your ma and tell her to get something good for supper. Tell her her old man's got a steady job at last. And eat yourself a good meal tonight."

The brown eyes—so much like Katy's—stared. "Gee, thanks Pop. Be seein' you." And the ragged sweater went shooting out of sight down the street. Hank swaggered in like a new man and put on the white apron Mel handed him.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Cabbie's 'Ghost' Terms Him a Gentleman and a Scholar

By BILLY ROSE

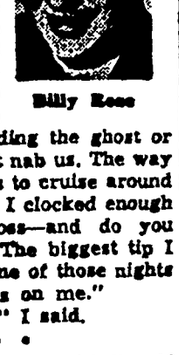
The other midnight, after 15 hours of making like Joe Executive, I felt I could use a little fresh air, and so I stepped into a cab and asked the hackie to drive me around Central Park.

"How's business?" I small-talked.

"Pretty fair," said the cabbie, "but people are funny—soon as us hackies start making an extra buck they act like we was profiteering or something. They forget all those years when we had to ride the ghost in order to keep our jobs."

"Ride the what?"

"The ghost," said the hackie. "That's what we used to call it when we threw the flag down and let the clock run without a customer inside. During the tough times there were fleet owners who would fire a guy if he didn't bring in a certain amount of business, so we used to run it up on the meter and pay it out of our own pockets. And we had to watch ourselves when riding the ghost or an inspector might nab us. The way I used to do it was to cruise around Central Park until I clocked enough to satisfy the boss—and do you know something? The biggest tip I ever got was on one of those nights when the ride was on me."



Billy Rose

"Unconfuse me," I said.

• • •

"WELL, IT WAS like this," said the hackie. "About a month after the stock market crash in '29, I'm cruising around Wall Street one afternoon, figuring that if a broker threw himself out the window I might get a chance to rush him to the hospital. But Wall Street's like a graveyard that day, and so finally I get disgusted and go into a speakeasy for a couple of shots.

"When I climb back in my cab a few hours later, I'm feeling no pain, and so I decide I might as well take the ghost for his usual joyride. And that night, Central Park is really something to see—you know, full of snow and icicles like a picture in a kid's fairy book.

"After making the circuit a couple of times, I'm about ready to call it a night when suddenly I get a feeling I'm being watched. And so I turn around, and sitting in the back is a little old geezer wearing one of those high collars and what they call a homberger hat. Naturally, this gives me quite a jolt, but when a guy is potted he's liable to get some pretty funny ideas, and so I figure out that this is the ghost I been riding around night after night. Brave-like, I crank open the window between us and start to talk to him.

"'How you enjoying the ride?' I says.

"'I'm enjoying it fine,' says the ghost.

"'Where can I take you?' I ask him next.

"'To St. Patrick's Cathedral. And close the window—it's getting cold.'

• • •

"THIS STRIKES me as kind of a peculiar remark for a ghost, but I do like I'm told, and when we get to St. Patrick's the ghost gets out and I'm surprised I can't see through him like you're supposed to with ghosts.

"'I'll never forget you for what you did,' he says, 'and especially the way you did it—pretending not to hear what I told you and driving me through the park on this beautiful night so I could see there was something in the world besides my own miserable problems.'

"For the first time I begin to suspicion that maybe this ghost ain't no ghost after all, so I says to him, 'When'd you get in my cab?'

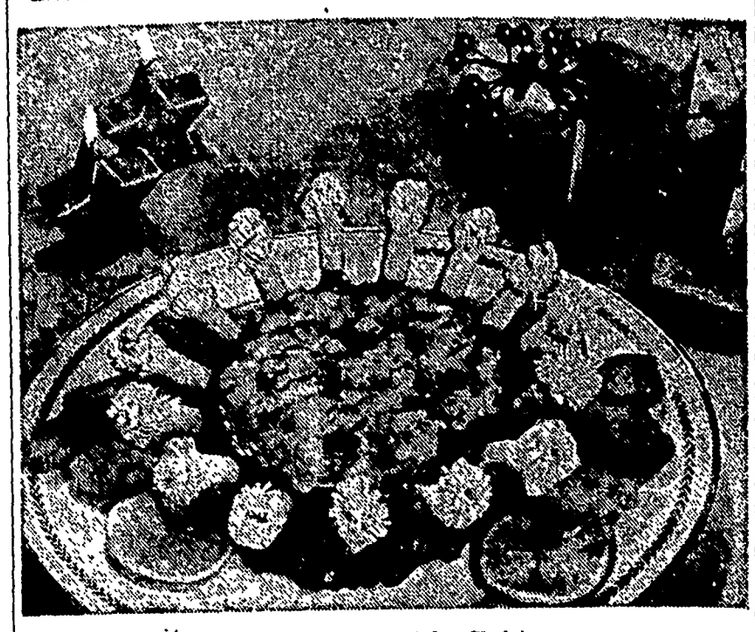
"'You know darned well I was waiting in the back when you came out of the bar,' he says.

"'That explains it,' I says. 'I didn't see you because it was dark and I was kind of loaded, and I didn't hear you because the window between us was closed.'

"'You're a gentleman and a scholar,' says the little old geezer. Saying which he fishes out a hundred-dollar bill and hands it to me.

"He starts to go away but I stop him. 'Just for the record,' I says, 'where'd you ask me to take you first?'

"'As if you didn't know,' he says. 'The middle of the Brooklyn Bridge.'"



Star Pork Crown Roast for Christmas

Foods for Yule

THE HOUSE WITH its presents and decorations sparkles and glitters, the air is full of secrets and laughter and the hustle-bustle of the holiday season is everywhere.

Out of the kitchen comes that warming excitement that is stimulated by Christmas foods in the making. The feast is, after all, as important as Santa Claus and presents.

Christmas dinner ought not to be just good food and plenty of it, but something exciting and colorful, too. Try something new, here and there, just to have a change.

Cherry Cider
(Serves 8-10)

¼ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon whole cloves
1 teaspoon whole allspice
3 sticks cinnamon
Grating of nutmeg
2 quarts sweet cider

Combine sugar, salt and spices. Add cider and bring slowly to boiling point. Strain into warm pitcher and cool to drinking temperature. Serve in warmed mugs or heavy cups.

• • •

PORK CROWN ROAST may be purchased already prepared from the market or it may be prepared from the pork loin. To prepare from pork loin, use the rib sections of two pork loins each having an equal number of ribs. Remove a two inch strip of meat from the ends of the ribs of each section. French the ribs. Saw parallel to the chine bone to remove the backbones from the two rib sections. Sew the ends together to form a crown.

Pork Crown Roast
(Serves 12-16)

Season meat with salt and pepper Place crown, rib ends down, on a rack in an open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so that bulb reaches the center of the thickest part. Be careful that the thermometer does not rest in fat or on bone. Roast in a moderate (350°) oven for 1 hour. Turn roast, rib ends up. Fill with Wild rice and Chestnut stuffing. Return to moderate oven and roast until meat thermometer registers at 185° Allow about 30 minutes per pound.

Wild Rice and Chestnut Stuffing

1 cup wild rice
3 cups boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
½ pound chestnuts
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons finely minced onion
½ cup melted butter or substitute

Wash wild rice thoroughly. Use 3 cups water and 1 teaspoon salt and steam for about 40 minutes. Place chestnuts in cold water to cover. Bring to a boil and cook gently for 5 minutes. Drain, peel and skin. If nuts are not tender enough, drop in hot salted water and simmer until tender. Chop coarsely. Combine with wild rice, onion and melted butter. Pile in center of crown.

Christmas Star Salad
(Serves 8)

1 package cherry-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup pineapple syrup
1 cup ground raw cranberries
1 orange, ground
1 cup drained, crushed pineapple
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped walnuts

Dissolve gelatin over hot water. Add sugar, lemon juice and pineapple syrup. Stir to dissolve. Chill until partially set. Add remaining ingredients. Pour into individual star molds and chill until firm.

Cherry Nut Rolls
(Makes 12)

½ cup butter
⅔ cup brown sugar
½ cup shredded almonds
12 maraschino cherries
2 cups enriched flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup shortening
⅔ cup milk

Combine butter and brown sugar. Spread in 12 muffin cups. Sprinkle with shredded almonds. Place cherry in center of each cup. Sift all dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk all at once and mix until dough follows fork around bowl. Turn on lightly floured board and knead for ½ minute. Brush with melted shortening. Sprinkle with brown sugar and ¼ cup shredded almonds. Roll as for jelly roll. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Place slice into each muffin cup. Bake in a hot (425°) oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve inverted.

If you didn't get a chance to bake fruit cake or steam plum pudding here's a delectable refrigerated fruit cake which needs only three days' ripening.

Unbaked Fruit Cake
(Makes 1 8-inch square)

9 cups bran flakes
1½ cups chopped, cooked prunes
¾ cup chopped dates
¾ cup chopped raisins
¾ cup chopped walnuts
Grated rind of 1 orange
Grated rind of 1 lemon
¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ginger
½ cup orange juice

Roll bran flakes to make 3 cups crumbs. Combine all ingredients and mix thoroughly. Line 8-inch square pan or 9x5x3-inch loaf pan with waxed paper. Press mixture into pan and smooth top. Cover with several thicknesses of waxed paper and place in refrigerator for 2 days or longer to ripen.

Whether it's a sit-down or buffet style breakfast on Christmas morning, everyone will enjoy pineapple waffles with broiled Canadian bacon.

Steaming oyster stew or scalloped oysters make a perfect supper for that busy evening when you're wrapping and decorating presents and the house. Team with green salad bowl and have a hot mince pie for dessert.

Having the children over for a hurry-up party? Serve them peppermint stick ice cream and decorated Christmas cookies.

DISABLED VETERANS

Rehabilitated Disabled Veterans Competent, Efficient Employees

Recently motion pictures were being taken of blind veterans in the Idento-Tag plant of the Disabled American Veterans.

Here miniature automobile license plates for key rings are made by disabled veterans and distributed to 30 million motorists each year. The funds realized are used in the DAV service and rehabilitation program.

"Cut", cried the director and the camera stopped grinding. The director stood for a long minute without saying anything, looking speechless.

"What's wrong?" asked the cameraman.

The director ignored this question as he asked to caucus with the production manager.

"This is a ticklish matter," hemmed the director, "but those boys work with such speed and ease, the public won't see they're blind. Could you ask them to slow up?"

When the production manager explained the situation to the group, one of them said, "Oh, I know what they want—they want us to act as if we're blind."

When a blinded veteran of World War II has to "act" blind for a motion picture camera it speaks well of the rehabilitation of World War II disabled.

The blinded veteran is proficient because his rehabilitation followed a definite, tried and tested pattern.

He wasn't always so proficient. And he may not always be as efficient if the rehabilitation program and the post-rehabilitation benefits break down.

Three Phases of Work

In the nine years since the first disabled veterans of World War II were returned to the United States, it has been found that rehabilitation can be as simple as curing the chicken pox.

Both the rehabilitation of the disabled veteran and the curing of the sick child should follow a smooth and successful course under proper professional care and direction; while each can become serious and harmful through neglect or misunderstanding.

Thus the disabled veteran again becomes a useful and self-sustaining member of society just as the child can be restored to normal health.

Woodrow Wilson in a letter of November 29, 1918, wrote that this nation had no more solemn obligation than that of restoring the disabled to civil life and opportunity . . by developing and adopting the remaining capabilities of each man.

From this the definition of rehabilitation was worked out by a navy officer as "the process of restoring the handicapped individual in terms of his total situation, to the fullest physical, mental, social, vocational and economic functioning of which he is capable."

This means in even simpler language that rehabilitation is trying to get the disabled veteran to stop thinking about what he could have done with which is gone, and aiding him in helping himself in making the best use of what is left.

The Disabled American Veterans has worked for more than 29 years with thousands of disabled veterans and so carefully has the matter been thought out and so successfully have the ideas been applied that it has been found that rehabilitation can be broken down into three distinct phases. First there is physical and mental readjustment. Then training and employment. Third, the individual and social restoration.

Disabled Vets Competent

These factors all blend in a harmony of body, mind and spirit. To bring about this harmony a careful program is followed, each phase of the veteran's rehabilitation being handled by competent and well trained persons

There is the veterans administration physician and the nurse. Then the physical therapist, the occupational therapist, and the artificial appliance maker. The disabled man may need the psychiatrist or the psychologist. He comes under the influence of the vocational counselor, the educator, and the placement worker. Then he is associated with the employer or the industrialist—and finally by those of his home circle and his friends

Rehabilitation involves the combined efforts and thoughts of all these persons. But the best of all aids is the disabled veteran himself. For as someone said "it is he whose interest and satisfaction must be met, within his remaining physical, mental and social capacities.

The disabled veteran, prepared for a job in line with his physical condition, aptitude and ability, can do his work well. A man with a leg amputated can do anything at a desk that an able-bodied man of equal skill can do. A man without an arm may still be a competent salesman, draftsman or lawyer. These are a few of the jobs open to the disabled veteran.

A vice president of General Motors said in a memorandum to department heads that once a disabled veteran is properly placed on a job he is no longer considered disabled.

Ordinarily you wouldn't think of a badly disabled man as a construction worker.

Orlando A. Milano of Erie, Pa., was seriously wounded by the explosion of a land mine in Germany during World War II. Outside of the two men who lost both arms and both legs, he was about as badly disabled as any living veteran.

He was totally blind. His left arm was amputated at the elbow. His right hand was badly mutilated. And he suffered a slight loss of hearing.

An Outstanding Case

But there was the magic of rehabilitation! Milano was assigned to a convalescent hospital for blinded veterans for social and pre-vocational training. All the time he was planning what he was going to do when he got his discharge. His father had died while he was in the service and there was no one but him to carry on the Milano Construction Company of Erie.

On his discharge, through the war assets administration, local manufacturers and his own aggressiveness he acquired equipment which included heavy duty trucks and shovels and other things necessary to his plan. Today he is successful in a highly competitive field and the hard work connected with running this business does not bother him.

And there is the case of Louis A. Miller of Louisville, Kentucky. He was wounded when he and the driver of his armed jeep broke through a stubborn roadblock in Germany. The driver was killed and Miller was left for dead. He was wounded in the back, neck and head by machinegun bullets. He was unconscious fifteen days.

Although an operation was performed on his brain there were no hopes for his recovery. Surgeons labelled him as a "museum of pathology." Even later when he was able to sit up doctors predicted he would spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair. He was paralyzed on his left side and he lost his power of speech. But Miller was determined to fight back to normalcy.

He began to try to walk and began to try to sing with the radio. Soon he was walking and then he was talking. On his discharge he took an extension course in the University of Louisville where he studied advertising, typing and business administration. Then he went with the Kentucky department of agriculture He is now advertising manager for the Kentucky Electric Co-op News.

Compensation Necessary

Thus the man who was left as dead on the battlefield is very much alive, fighting the battles of Kentucky farmers for better living conditions, water, sewage and land conservation. He leads a useful and active life.

These men are only two examples out of thousands of what can be accomplished when rehabilitation follows a definite pattern. Actually rehabilitation in the experience of the DAV is proper hospitalization or treatment of the wounded or disabled veteran. It is also fair compensation and pension for his wartime handicaps.

Compensation, as an aid to rehabilitation, is one thing stressed by the DAV. It is considered an important part of the adjustment of the wartime handicapped. Disabled veterans are paid by a grateful government to help them live as normal a life as possible and become useful citizens in their communities. Compensation is paid each month to offset, at least in part, the veteran's reduced earning power caused by his wartime, service-incurred disabilities.

Rehabilitation, too, is social readjustment through comradeship with fellow disabled veterans at DAV chapter meetings. Furthermore, it is legislative protection of rights to which the disabled veteran is justly entitled, and which give him a necessary sense of security.

A Job Is Important Link in Program

This disabled veteran is not actually rehabilitated until he has the job which is within his remaining capacities. These remaining capacities have been developed to a high degree. If, when he is ready for a job there is no job, there is a definite break in the link of rehabilitation. If he should have to take a job for which he is not suited, much of the good work is ruined. He may suffer a complete setback. It is essential for the disabled veteran, unless he is totally incapacitated, to have the right job.

Veteran Coach Disparages the T

By GRANTLAND RICE

POP WARNER not only invented the famous single and double wing in football but he insists they are a much better form of attack than the now-popular T.

I paid Pop a visit recently at his home in Palo Alto where one of football's greatest coaches still follows the game that he helped to make famous.

Grantland Rice

"I invented the single wing around 1906," Pop said. "When the new rules of that year prevented you from shoving or helping a runner, I saw at once that a new form was needed. We needed something that would take care both of the running game and the new forward pass. The single wing gave an offense the chance for deception that it hadn't had before. Later on around 1911, I brought out the double wing, an improvement on the single.

"Now I'll tell you why the double wing is a big improvement on the T. The forward pass today is a big part of any sound football attack, although it is frequently overused The forward pass doesn't fit in with the T. In the T the quarterback or passer must run backwards several yards. Then he must turn and look to find his target. This is awkward and baffling. In the double wing the passer is back a trifle but he is facing his field. He has a full view of all his receivers. He is ready for quick action.

"I see most of my games today over television," the bushy white-haired veteran said. "I view both college and pro teams. It amazes me to see how often the passer, turning and running backwards, is thrown for a 10- or 12-yard loss. That could never happen with the single or double wing. It happens frequently with the T where teams will often lose from 30 to 50 yards while the passer is looking for a target.

"The single and double wing are coming back again," Pop continued. "Such teams as Princeton, U.C.L.A., and many others have shown how effective my old formations are against rivals sticking to the T and too often wondering why their passing game won't work."

A Long Way Back

Pop began his coaching career at Georgia around 1895 after a summer stint at Iowa. That embraces many, many yesterdays.

I asked Pop who invented or first worked out the spiral pass.

"I don't think anyone knows," Pop said. "The pass came into the game in 1906. It was easy to see from the start that throwing a football end over end was not the best way. Many coaches and passers began experimenting with the spiral early in 1906. I only know that Mt. Pleasant was a fine spiral passer at Carlisle around that time. That's almost like saying somebody invented throwing or running."

I was but a youngster when I first saw one of Pop's teams play against Vanderbilt in 1896. He was then with the University of Georgia. But he made and kept his fame with other institutions — Carlisle, Pittsburgh and Stanford. He later did well at Temple where his teams were always feared.

But it was really at Carlisle where he had his greatest success. No other college had such brilliant backs as Thorpe, Cayac, Guyon, Mt. Pleasant and many, many more who are still remembered. He also had great lines.

"A funny thing about the Indian," Pop said, "he was our best amateur. He really played the game only because he loved it. For example, on a rainy day or on a muddy field the Indian's play fell away badly He didn't think it was any fun to play in the rain and he was playing for fun. They were also more popular at hotels than white teams. They were better behaved. They had a definite dignity that the white race lacked.

Pop laughed at his comparison of Thorpe and Nevers. "They were both magnificent," he said. "Thorpe on the days he felt like playing stood alone. He could run, pass, kick, catch passes, block and tackle. But Ernie was always there for 60 minutes of the best he had—and he had plenty.

"I would say Thorpe was the best all-around back of football."

It Can Happen Quickly

The midwest is still churned up over the Cleveland-Boudreau-Lopez deal. Two years ago at this date, back in 1948, Lou Boudreau-Lopez was baseball's sweetheart. Only 22 years old he had just known his greatest year as a player and his best year as a winning manager.

Then the axe fell—as it has fallen so many times before. It's a tough life—any pro game is—when you are not winning. Boudreau took a drop from his 1948 average.

Who can say whether Billy Meyer of Pittsburgh is a very good manager or just an ordinary leader? All you know is that Pittsburgh had few big league ballplayers aboard. Branch Rickey has tackled many tough jobs in his long span, but his Pirate assignment is the toughest, in spite of all the money Pittsburgh owners have spent. But we have found few owners who have made headway merely by firing first class managers.
